The recent heavy advances in sugar are being felt by confectionery manufacturers, one or two firms advanced their cheaper lines half a cent a pound last week and further advances will be made if the high prices continue or sugar climbs higher. The majority of manufacturers have been considering an advance but as yet have taken no action. The better grades of confectionery have not as yet been affected.

DEATH OF JOHN W. COWAN.

Head of Cowan Company, Toronto, Passed Away on Sunday.

One of Toronto's most successful business men, and one of the best known manufacturers in the grocery and confectionery trade, John W. Cowan, passed away on Sunday morning at his home, 105 St. George St.

Mr. Cowan had not been wholly well since Christmas, but was able to pay considerable attention to business and to spend some time at his office. His death came somewhat suddenly as the result of a hemmorhage brought about by a cold contracted some time ago.

The story of Mr. Cowan's business success and progress is a remarkable one. He was born in Tipperary County, Ireland, sixty-seven years ago and came to Canada at the age of twelve. He spent the years of his early life in Montreal, London and Brantford, and traveled for some years for John Duncan & Co., Montreal. He came to Toronto thirty-two years ago.

His first business venture of any extent was in Mincing Lane, where he built up quite a successful tea and coffee trade. From this he became interested in the cocoa and chocolate business and carried on a manufactory for some years in the basement of the Gooderham building in Front Street. From here the business was moved to 474 King St. west, near Spadina and about three years ago a splendid new factory was built on Sterling Road and the rapidly-growing business moved to the north-west end of the city.

THE LATE JOHN W. COWAN.

Eighteen years ago Mr. Cowan organized a joint stock company, of which he has ever since been president and managing director.

Mr. Cowan was a member of the Toronto Board of Trade, the Manufacturers' Association and was active in the Irish Protestant Benevolent Society. He was a member of Walmer Road Baptist Church and in politics was a Conservative.

Mrs. Cowan, two sons and two daughters survive. Two of the children, F. W. and Miss Cowan, live at home, the other son, H. N., represents the firm in British Columbia, and the other daughter, Mrs. C. F. Stark, resides in Toronto.

It is probable that the business will be continued without interruption. Mr. Cowan's death will necessitate the election of a new director, but otherwise the company will be unchanged. A meeting of directors will be held shortly to arrange the matter.

The funeral from the home on St. George St., on Tuesday afternoon, was very largely attended by members of the trade as well as by friends of the deceased. Rev. Dr. Elmore Harris conducted the service, assisted by Rev. A. McNeil and Rev. Mr. Porter. The pallbearers were: A. R. M'Farlane, of Hamilton; Joseph Shenstone, Chancellor McKay, of McMaster University; George Musson, George Stanway and Henry Peters, nearly all of whom were personal friends of the deceased. The office and traveling staff of the company attended the remains to Mount Pleasant cemetery

A large number of members of the trade were present from New York, Montreal, Hamilton, Brantford and Toronto, among whom were: A. R. McFarlane, of McFarlane & Field, Hamilton; Jas. B. Campbell, Acme Can Co., Montreal; M. Greenhood, Kaufmann & Strauss Co., New York; B. C. Budd, the Howel Lithographing Co., Hamilton; and Captain Fahey, W. F. Morley, W. F. Anderson, J. S. Donaldson, W. A. Mitchell, W. F. Greening, J. A. Patterson, Ed. Hawes, G. J. Bryan, W. J. Bryan, H. P. Dwight, W. G. Patrick, Henry Macdonald and Dr. Geo. Porter, of Toronto.

George R. Bradley, of R. Bradley & Son, returned home recently from Western Ontario, much pleased with his trip.

John Grass, of Ridgetown, announces that he will move his grocery business to new premises in the McKinlay block on May 1.

RECORD DELIVERY OF STARCH.

Five Carloads, Sixty-five Tons Distributed in Toronto on Saturday.

A sight that is not witnessed every day and one that attracted a good deal of interest was in evidence at the Grand Trunk Freight warehouse, Toronto, last Saturday morning. The occasion was a record shipment of starch made by the Edwardsburg Starch Company from their factory at Edwardsburg to Toronto wholesalers. The shipment on wagons is shown in the photograph reproduced herewith.

Sixty-Five Tons of Starch Delivered to the Wholesale Grocers of Toronto last Saturday.

The shipment aggregated sixty-five tons and took five freight cars to carry it. When loaded it occupied seventeen wagons. The shipment included about 26,000 boxes.

An interesting fact in connection with the shipment, which, by the way, was made under the direction of F. A. Verey, the firm's Toronto representative, is that this immense amount of starch was delivered directly to the Toronto wholesale grocery houses, not a box of it going to the company's warehouse. It is the largest delivery of the kind ever made in Toronto.

Incidentally the arrival of such immense supplies kept the shippers in most of the Toronto wholesale houses exceedingly busy on Saturday morning.

FIRE AT INGERSOLL.

One of the most disastrous fires that has visited Ingersoll in years occurred on Thursday night last, by which the Manchester cereal mill was totally destroyed. The mill was a large frame structure and owing to the fact that the fire had made much headway before it was discovered, it was practically an impossibility to save it. The loss is estimated at $26,000. The mill was valued at $16,000, and the contents at $10,000, with a total insurance of $15,000. The Manchester Cereal Co. enjoyed a large patronage and they have a reputation for choice brands of flour, oatmeal, flaked wheat, etc. It is thought that the fire originated on the second floor, but the cause is unknown.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Business. Brisker in All Lines of Green Fruits—Vegetable Market Steady, Potatoes Unchanged—Fish Quieter, Haddock Scarce.

During the past week a considerable increase in business is reported among fruit dealers. The mild weather has stimulated the consumptive demand and as a result orders are more plentiful. Prices all round are firm, though no material advances are noticeable. Oranges are moving briskly. The quality of the navels is exceedingly good. Lemons are meeting with an improved demand. Dealers look for an advance in bananas.

In the vegetable market prices rule about the same. The demand for imported early vegetables is picking up. The quality of these early vegetables is very satisfactory. The potato market is a little easier, supplies being heavy.

The past week has been quiet in the fish market. The mild weather has lessened country orders. Dealers anticipate a larger volume of business next week. Fresh halibut is arriving again. Haddock is scarce and higher.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—There is a better feeling in green fruits this week, business being somewhat more brisk. Bitter oranges are in good demand, and are easier in price, one firm quoting as low as $1.25 per box. Pineapples, all lines of oranges, and grape fruit are in good demand. Other lines are in fair request at the old prices.

FISH—Now that the Lenten rush is over the fish market has assumed a quieter tone. The bulk of the orders taken now are goods required for immediate consumption. Fresh haddock is very scarce. Many lines of fresh fish are expected next week when the activity in haddock will be renewed. Owing to the scarcity haddock is higher, being quoted at 5c to 8c per lb. Labrador herring is easier this week, being quoted at $5.50 per barrel. Other lines are unchanged.

Navel oranges continue to arrive in large quantities of excellent quality. Lemons are firm. Bananas are moving better. Some cranberries and Almerias are still in stock. Pineapples are unchanged. NOTES FROM SUTTON, P.Q.

H. L. Flannery, who has for the past few years carried on business in the grocery and crockery line, has taken unto himself two partners, Messrs. Smith and Jenne, and in future the firm will be known as Smith, Flannery & Jenne. They do a nice business in Sutton and the immediate vicinity and the new firm will likely make things go at an even smarter pace than before.

All the grocers here are now selling new maple syrup, for which there is great demand.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS STEADY

Business Continues Good Despite Bad Weather—Change in Wholesale House—Something About the Fishing Industry.

(Special Correspondence to The Canadian Grocer.)

Halifax, N.S., April 6.

With the price of sugar steady the groery markets during the past week are without any special features. There has been no change in the price of sugar since last report, and no further advance is looked for at present. Trade is very good notwithstanding the fact that the weather has been decidedly against business. Eggs are down one cent. since last report, and Maconochies' pickles, etc., have been advanced five cents per bottle. These goods have had a large sale here.

The receipts of eggs continue very heavy. The demand is very good, but not as great as might be expected for such reasonable prices at this season of the year. Eggs are quoted this week at 16c to 17c. Butter receipts are very limited. The stocks held by the various dealers are being rapidly cleaned up. Some small tubs of fresh made dairy butter were marketed this week but the quality was poor. Prices for all grades of butter continue very firm.

In recognition of his services during the past twenty-one years, the firm of W. H. Schwartz & Son, spice manufacturers, presented W. N. Banffts with a cheque for a goodly sum last week, and the employes presented him with a gold-headed cane. Both presentations were accompanied by addresses. Mr. Banffts is going to Toronto where he intends engaging in the furniture business.

The wholesale grocery firm of Billman, Chisholm & Co. has been dissolved. The retiring member is James Billman, the senior member of the firm. The business will be continued in future at the old stand by J. Scott Chisholm, under the name of Chisholm & Co.

The canned goods trade is very brisk and there is a heavy demand for most lines. Tomatoes, peas and corn are the leaders. Provisions are unchanged but stocks of potatoes and parsnips are lessening after the winter's demand, but there are still plenty on hand to go round. There is not much call for dried fruits at present, but fresh fruit is selling freely.

Speaking to The Grocer the other day a well-known business man said that he was surprised to read in one of the St. John N.B., papers that two merchants of that city were importing codfish and halibut from the Pacific Coast for local consumption. He considered that this was an unusual state of affairs and a matter that should receive more than a passing notice. "Just think of it," he said. "A city bordering on the Atlantic Coast and almost in the heart of the great codfishing industry, importing fresh codfish from the Pacific. There was a time," he remarked, "when Nova Scotia boasted that she supply the Dominion with fish, but conditions must have changed since then as evidenced by the action of the St. John men."

During the winter season vessels follow the fresh fishing, and it should not be a difficult matter to secure fish from Digby for the St. John market. The Halifax fish markets are very active. The recent bad weather has interfered very greatly with fishing operations along the coast, and the receipts of fresh fish are not quite as large as they otherwise would be. There is no scarcity, however. Prices generally are very steady.

DEATH OF PIONEER SUBSCRIBER.

Chas. D. Williamson, a Chatham Grocer, Passed Away Last Week.

Shockingly sudden was the death of Chas. D. Williamson, of Chatham, Ont., which occurred at his store on King Street, at 11.40 Wednesday morning. Heart disease was the cause. Mr. Williamson was for nearly 40 years engaged in the grocery business here. He was 59 years of age. Coming to Chatham when 17 years of age, he, on October 1st, 1868, in partnership with I. M. Taylor, opened up a grocery and liquor store. The firm was very successful, a branch being for some time conducted at Cedar Springs. The partnership was dissolved in 1901, Mr. Williamson continuing the business under the firm name of Taylor & Williamson till a few months ago, when he retired, leasing his store to Brewster & Co., who are shortly opening a 5, 10 and 15c store. He leaves a wife and two sons. Only a few moments before he was stricken, Mr. Williamson had formally handed over the keys to the new proprietors, adding that he intended to do no more work for the rest of his days.

Although known as one of the most conservative of business men and a staunch believer in the methods of a past generation, he was in every regard an admirable man, and always highly respected, particularly by the older citizens of Chatham. He was one of the pioneer subscribers here for The Canadian Grocer, and valued it highly.

PLUCKY CLERK FOILS BURGLARS.

Attempt to Rob Vault in Winnipeg Warehouse Fails.

On Thursday night of last week Leo. Callaghan, accountant for Nicholson & Bain, Winnipeg, was shot and rather severely wounded by burglars who attempted to rob the vault. Mr. Callaghan was working at night and was alone in the office at the time but with remarkable courage and presence of mind he closed the vault and prevented the burglars from attaining their object. They got nothing but a few cents from Mr. Callaghan's coat pocket.

95% Failures

Ninety-five out of every hundred men in business fail.

Ill-advised buying is the main cause. A poor bargain breeds discontent with the goods, discontentment breeds indifference, and indifference is the father of forced sales.

"Staunton" Wall Papers are sold purely on their merits—every dollar of cost is balanced by an honest hundred cents' worth of value.

They are sold direct to you at a price covering actual cost plus manufacturer's modest profit, and this price includes no recoupment for extravagances in securing business. Your profits are limited only by your ability as a merchant. To clear 100% is no trick at all.

Correspondence from grocers who are not now carrying Wall Paper is invited.

If you are carrying a stock and have not a copy of our Wall Paper Chart showing quantities necessary for various sized rooms, a postal card request will bring you one.

NEW BRUNSWICK GROCERY NEWS

Business Somewhat Dull With Prices Easier in One or Two Lines—Shipping Lobsters to the United States.

Special Correspondence to The Canadian Grocer.

St. John, N. B., April 6.

Business has been rather dull during the past week. The market changes have not been very numerous. Some of the millers have apparently become excited about the price of oatmeal as it is now quoted at 75 cents a barrel less than last week. The local dealers have not followed the decline, however, as they were selling below the mill price before. They think the recent increases were unwarranted and as far as can be learned, no sales were made here at the increased price.

Pork has advanced $1 a barrel and lard is up another quarter-cent. a pound.

Canned lobsters are very scarce and high, $2.50 a dozen being asked for half-pound flats. The new pack will probably be higher still, as the fishermen are sending all their catch to the United States where $40 to $45 a crate of 100 is being received.

There has been no change in the flour or sugar market but sugar is expected to go still higher.

Owing to the unfavorable weather conditions the supply of fresh fish is likely to be very light for a while. A few gaspereaux are being taken but not as many as are expected at this time.

A comparative statement of the amount of customs revenue collected at the port of St. John for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1906-7 and 1907-8 shows an increase of $47,282.84.

LONDON ASSOCIATION'S NEW OFFICERS.

Retail Grocers Hold Elections and Discuss Matters of Trade Interest.

The annual meeting of the London Retail Grocers' Association held on Wednesday night, April 1st, was well attended and the greatest interest was manifested in the proceedings.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President, Thomas Shaw; vice-president, John Diprose; second vice-president, G. McCormick; secretary, Cyril Hayes, re-elected; treasurer, E. J. Ryan, re-elected.

The following gentlemen are on the executive committee: H. J. Granville, W. Mullins, C. F. Eedy, H. Ranahan, E. Linnell and J. H. Wilkey.

The question of holding a union picnic of grocers in London during the coming summer was discussed in all its bearings. While it was generally admitted that such an event would be a good thing for the wholesale trade, as it would be the means of bringing it to the city retailers from all parts of Western Ontario, it was thought to be hardly worth while for the local retailers to go to the expense of such an undertaking, seeing that the treasury has been pretty well depleted as a result of holding the recent banquet, that the big reunion of London Old Boys will be held here early in August, too close to any date which could be chosen for a union picnic and that, anyway, it is an outing the members want, and for this year at least they prefer to be entertained rather than entertain. The upshot was a decision to run an excursion to Detroit on June 17th, and a committee of arrangements was named.

It was unanimously decided to close Wednesday afternoons during the summer months, as has been the custom for some years, and to hold the usual outing at Springbank on the last Wednesday of the summer half-holidays.

The retiring officers were tendered a hearty vote of thanks for the excellent manner in which they have looked after the affairs of the association during the past year, which was a most successful one.

NEW CANNERIES IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Plants Likely to be Established in Vernon and Nelson This Season.

The Province of British Columbia is rapidly coming to the fore as a fruit-grower and indications point to the rapid development of the canning industry in connection with its fruit production.

Fruit and vegetable canneries are being talked of in many places of the interior. A. McKillop & Company has written the Council of Vernon that they will establish a plant for the canning of corn, peas and all kinds of vegetables, also apples, plums, prunes and every variety of fruit. Mayor Timmins stated that every encouragement should be given an enterprise of this sort. With industries like this showing up, the city authorities will take up the question of cheap power, so that a definite proposition can be submitted to firms in search of locations.

There is also talk of a cannery at Nelson. R. C. Brock, manager of the Kootenay Fruit Growers' Association, is investigating the possibilities at that point. There, also, the suggeston is meeting with support, as it is felt that a market will be found for the lower grades of vegetables and fruit, if such a plant were established.

A Bellingham, Wash., company is also said to be after a suitable site in New Westminster, with the object of erecting a fruit cannery.

NO HOODOO HERE.

The H. W. Nelson Co. have asked particularly that their ad. be placed on page 23. In the light of present-day tendencies this would seem to be rather a peculiar procedure, but the company seem to favor rather than fear the omens generally accepted as unfavorable. On a recent Friday, which, by the way, fell on the 13th of the month, they had exactly thirteen whisk-makers at work. That day proved to be a remarkable one from the fact that the biggest lot of orders of the year were received. Not only that, but exceedingly good business has continued ever since. Who says there's anything in superstition?

PERSONAL NOTES.

A. H. Mace, Montreal, has returned from a short business trip to New York.

C. H. R. Cocq, manager of the Blue Ribbon Tea Co., has been admitted to membership in the Montreal Board of Trade.

Chas. Gyde, manufacturers' agent, Montreal, has sailed on the Empress of Ireland via Halifax for Great Britain, where he intends to remain for the next couple of months.

Frank Menzies, superintendent of salesmen of the F. F. Dalley Co., Hamilton, was in Toronto last week. Mr. Menzies leaves this week for a six weeks' trip to Texas and the Western States in the interests of "2 in 1."

FEATURES OF THE PACKING INDUSTRY.

An Interesting Letter From Manager of an Ontario Factory.

In its issue of March 26th the Cincinnati Price Current quotes from a letter it has received from the manager of one of the large pork packing establishments in Ontario. The letter, which contains features of much interest regarding the present conditions and tendencies of the Canadian trade, is given herewith:

"There is an increasing tendency on the part of farmers in this province, from which most of the hogs come, to grass their farms, in place of raising grain, and as the area under grass increases the quantity of hogs decreases. This tendency arises from a number of causes, perhaps the most important being that our Northwest Provinces have attracted the young men from the farms of Ontario, and many farmers who have borne the burden and heat of the day over many years, and have earned a competency, in the absence of their sons, do not care to raise grain and charge themselves with the labor of feeding hogs, and competent hired help is expensive and difficult to secure. They find it easier to grass the land and feed cattle. Then there has been for some years a persistent agitation carried on, based upon an apparent impression that the prices of hogs in Canada were ruled by a combination of packers. The curious part of it is that there has been not only no combination, but no semblance of one, the trade being fiercely competitive, without as far as we are aware any understanding whatever between the curers. Nevertheless it has been productive of a good deal of bitterness and has been fomented by farmers' papers looking for circulation, and by politicians looking for votes. The result has been that in place of the industry being viewed sympathetically, there is a good deal of temper, and willingness to punish the packers for their alleged improper conduct, by shutting off supplies.

"We have in this province at present killing capacity in the various packing houses, including Montreal and Hull, Province of Quebec, for about 50,000 hogs weekly, while the deliveries will not exceed 20,000 to 25,000 hogs a week. You can easily understand what this means, particularly as there are no great central markets where hogs are sold as in Chicago and other points in the United States. We have the vicious system of purchasing on an f.o.b. basis, which means that a drover buys his hogs from farmers, loads them on the cars, and the packer assumes all responsibility of weights and selections delivered into the cars without being present to verify either. The type of competitive conditions set up by this class of purchases gives the drover an opportunity to peddle by telephone his week's shipment, finally forwarding it to the packer who gives the last and best bid."

G. G. Patterson, Jerseyville, Ont., has taken over the general store business of Geo. Bonney.

H. F. Sieward, general merchant, of Stettler, Alberta, has taken over the stock of the late firm of Bonneive & Rosse, of that town.

TOBACCO FROM BRITISH COLONIES

Fine Specimens Exhibited at Exhibition Held in London.

The tobacco exhibition which is being held at the Royal Horticultural Hall, Westminster, London, is proving conclusively what charm there is about cigars, cigarettes and mixtures of the Virginian weed. Thousands of smokers are flocking to the exhibition, which is a wonderful success. They find they can there indulge in the finest and most delicately flavored qualities of the divine weed. Although the finest cigars and choicest mixtures of tobacco in the world are exhibited for sale, the bulk of the visitors seem to prefer the gentle exhilaration and soothing, social comfort to be extracted from the cigarette.

The consumption of cigarettes in Great Britain has attained gigantic proportions. The manager of a leading American company remarked that if, as it is said, one-half the tobacco consumed at present is vaporized a la cigarette the mark will probably not be overstepped if 16,512,000,000 is taken as approximating to this figure, which would put about three hundred and eighty-four cigarettes into the mouth of each unit of the population in a year. Some idea is thus given as to what the little paper covered roll of tobacco has attained in popularity.

Some fine specimens of cigarettes made from tobacco grown in the Transvaal, Central Africa, Jamaica and British Columbia are shown. Although the choicest tobacco will always come from America, it is hoped by manufacturers that the British trade will be supplied in large part from the colonies.

The importance of tobacco goods in the commerce of the British nation is incontestable, no less than £25,000,000 ($125,000,000) being the amount spent in the recent year in the United Kingdom on tobacco goods, which means that each person, counting women and children, expended on an average more than half a sovereign with this trade, or if smokers only were reckoned, a very much larger sum. Half a sovereign per head represents two pounds. In Australia the figure is 2.59 pounds, in the United States 5.40, the highest in the world, and Germany 3.44.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer in 1906 reported in the House of Commons that he got £13,380,878 ($66,-904,390) from the tax on tobacco. This was a record figure, but the total consumption of recent years has shown a continuous increase.

WILL OPEN IN TWO WEEKS.

Montreal Factory of National Licorice Co. About Completed.

Within two weeks it is expected that the new factory of the National Licorice Company in Montreal will be in full operating order. The manufacture of the various lines produced in the company's Brooklyn factory will then commence, and thereafter the Canadian trade will be looked after by the Montreal branch.

A BRIGHT PUPIL.

Teacher—"Mary, please give me the answer to this sum: If your father owed the grocer $7.58, and the baker $1.42, and $25 for rent, how much would he have to pay the grocer, the baker and the landlord?"

Mary—"He wouldn't have to pay anything."

Teacher—"How do you figure that out?"

Mary—"We're going to move."

GROCERY FACTS

Something About the Goods Handed Over the Counter Every Day.

SOMETHING ABOUT PEPPER.

The use of pepper was known to the ancient Greeks and Romans as early as the time of Alexander the Great, being a staple article of commerce in the early trade between Europe and India before the days of cotton, tea and sugar. Its excessive cost is said to have been one of the inducements which led the early Portuguese navigators to seek a sea route to India.

Pepper is entirely tropical in its requirements, and seems to thrive best in a moist, hot climate, with an annual rainfall of at least 100 inches and soil rich in leaf mold. The plant grows some twenty feet in height, but in cultivation is usually restricted to ten or twelve feet. The leaves are glossy, bread ly ovate, with five to seven nerves and grow opposite and alternate to a pendulous spike five to eight inches long containing twenty to thirty white flowers that ripen into a one-seeded fruit with a fleshy exterior. This fleshy berry covering a soft stone, is about the size of a pea and is at first green, but in ripening turns red and then yellow. The berry contains a resin to which it owes its hot, pungent taste, and a volatile oil that gives off an aromatic scent.

The white pepper is the black pepper decorticated by maceration and rubbing. The plant produces fruit in three years and is probably at its best for the next seven or eight years.

A single palm or tree sometimes supports eight or twelve vines, giving an average annual yield in good seasons of about 1,000 berry spikes to the vines on one palm. These spikes or clusters of berries vary in size, but 1,000 should yield on an average five pounds of dried pepper. An acre is reckoned to bear 2,500 plants, to cost about $20 in outlay, and to yield a product of $400 when in its best condition.

The flowers appear in July and August, and the berries about seven months later. The berries may or may not be sorted as they are plucked. If they are sorted, those fully ripe are separated. These are soaked in water for seven or eight days, or heaped so that the pulp ferments, and are then rubbed by hand or on a coarse cloth, if the quantity is small, or trampled under foot if the quantity is large. The pulp is thus rubbed off the inner stone. This stone furnishes the white pepper of commerce. The pulp is completely removed by washing in baskets in running water. The pepper is then dried by exposure to the sun for about a week. This becomes pale grey or pale drab in color. It has also a bleaching effect, and the pepper can be bleached whiter by a chemical agency.

White pepper is less pungent and more expensive than black.—Merchants' Review.

PRUNES IN THE MAKING.

In curing prunes the fruit is permitted to drop, and is never considered fully ripe or in proper condition for drying so long as it hangs on the tree. The fruit is first dipped in a solution of lye in order to break the skin, then washed in cold water and spread out upon trays in the sun. It is necessary to cut the skin with the lye or the fruit will not dry properly. Prunes are not sulphured, except in the case of ruby prunes, which are simply the black French prunes bleached with sulphur.

In the many years' experience of a large firm of dried fruit grocers in the line, they had learned from what varieties of fruit and from which farmers they could get the best results. "It is always our aim to handle the crops of men who thin their fruit properly," said a member of the firm, "and who carefully pick and properly dry their crops. Such men are scarce as compared with the total number engaged in the fruit business in this state. The fruit comes to us just as it is taken from the trays, and is run over a grader, which sorts the fruit into the various sizes. This grader is made up of a series of perforated zinc plates, with apertures of the proper size for standard, choice and extra choice. Anything larger than extra choice goes over the end of the grader, and is carefully sorted by hand."

To grade fruit properly, the grinder is run very slowly, but it has become a very common custom to reduce grades considerably by increasing the speed of the grader, which throws a percentage of standard fruit into the choice, choice into the extra choice, etc. This is one of the tricks of the trade, and accounts often for a variation in price on the same grade of goods.

After the fruit is graded for size, it is graded for quality, for in many instances fruit may be of the proper size, while it lacks style in appearance, in which event it is often necessary to drop it back a grade. This is particularly true of the higher grades.

In grading prunes it is impossible to get an accurate count, and they are blended after grading to get them to the proper size. It has become the custom to fill orders on the seven point—that is, a 47 is considered a 40-50 prune, and a 57 a 50-60 prune, and so on.

Talking to the Point

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS get right down to the point at issue. If you want something, say so in a few well-chosen words. Readers like that sort of straight-from-the-shoulder-talk, and that is the reason why condensed ads are so productive of the best kind of results.

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS are always noticed. They are read by wide-awake, intelligent grocers, who are on the look-out for favorable opportunities to fill their requirements.

QUOTATIONS FOR PROPRIETARY ARTICLES

Another Store-keeper Sued for Damages

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH IN CAKES

& SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH IN TINS

Dangerous stove polishes continue to get store-keepers into trouble. The daily papers of Detroit, early this month, report Mrs. A. D. ——— is seeking to recover in the courts $15,000 from Mr. C. G. ——— who sold her some inflammable, liquid stove polish that exploded and severely burned her face and arms.

Wise store-keepers will keep out of trouble by handling only the stove polishes which are safe in the hands of the user. RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish are made by reliable processes and are absolutely free from dangers of fire or explosion. PUSH THEM.

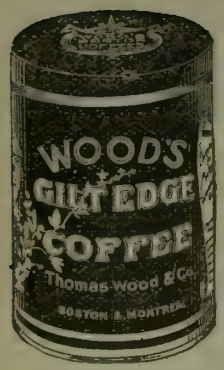
Spring and Its Promises



ESTABLISHED 1879

Spring is with us again according to the official date. May it return with warmth our warm welcome.

"The outlook for Spring business is very promising," is the verdict of competent investigators, and this means that all commercial lines will be enlivened by new energies.

Whether for the first time or otherwise, remember that the introduction of means "renewed energies" in that department for your benefit. They are the active, tireless, steady, enterprising friend to the grocer.

"Canned by Griffin & Skelley"

Until you break the shell of a nut you are wholly in the dark as to the quality of the meat therein. A fair exterior often covers an unsatisfactory interior. Quality depends largely upon reputation—you've got to be guided by that. Be guided, then (if seeking highest quality in Canned Fruits), by the name "Griffin & Skelley," and you'll be absolutely safe.

Griffin & Skelley's Canned Fruits

Canned Apricots, Canned Peaches, Canned Grapes, Pears, White Cherries, Black Cherries, Blackberries, Damson Plums, Egg Plums, Golden Drop Plums, Greengages, Raspberries, Strawberries and Pineapples—fruits of recognized canned excellence. We have put up under the AYLMER FAULTLESS BRAND a line of Grade No. 2 or SWEET WRINKLE PEAS. These peas are of EXTRA NICE QUALITY, and are equal to the finest imported. CANADIAN CANNERS, Limited

It's Quality That Builds Trade.

If permanent trade is what you are after, you can't be too particular about the quality of the canned goods which go over your counter. One bad can may spoil your most promising customer. On the other hand if every order you receive for canned fruits and vegetables is filled with all your regular customers will stay with you, recruited with a constantly increasing number of new ones. That's because Old Homestead Brand is uniform in excellence.

Every piece of fruit and vegetable that goes into an Old Homestead can is the subject of rigid selection. It is canned by that scientific method which preserves every atom of its natural deliciousness.

ASK YOUR JOBBER FOR OLD HOMESTEAD BRAND.
ALL THE BEST JOBBERS CARRY IT.

WHAT KIND OF A MIRROR DO YOU USE?

Suppose you wanted to buy a fine, full length mirror and the merchant showed you one which badly distorted everything reflected in it.

You wouldn't leave your money with him, would you? You were after a mirror, not a cartoonist.

Apply the idea to your tea business.

The tea you sell is a mirror—and it should reflect correctly the high quality of your service.

But if the tea itself is of a poor, inferior nature it distorts your whole business—makes your service appear cheap and unreliable.

High-class stores sell the best tea. They sell

"SALADA"

The most reliable and quickest selling of teas.

Last week we sold over 14,000 lbs. more "SALADA" than in the corresponding week of 1907.

Japan Tea at 11c.

A lot of old Japan Teas which sold over a year ago at 11 cents were recently resold at 19 cents.

At 11c. the tea seemed hardly fit to drink, how about it now at 19c?

If you knew the inner history of a great part of the cheap bulk, black as well as green tea that is being pushed so hard, the price would not be any temptation.

Your customers are the ones to consider. They will pay a fair price for a good article, whether it be tea, butter or anything else, especially anything they eat or drink.

Sell good tea not rubbish.

Your customers know Red Rose Tea "is good tea." Isn't this a time when you could push the sale of Red Rose with more advantage than ever before. Think about it!

Profitable Goods

Are the goods that are a little better than the others: goods that will make sales where the others won't. Ozo Brand Pickles are good pickles, and show their quality. We have special facilities for turning out the best pickles, and we have made the most of them. For instance, we provide the seed from which the vegetables are grown and so get the best from the start; the cucumbers go straight from the vine to the factory, so that none of the fresh crispness is lost. We make our own vinegar and it cannot be beaten for pickling purposes. It will certainly pay you to specify that you want our goods when ordering pickles.

The Why and How of Advertising

Another of the Talks for Grocers by W. F. Ralph—The Principles of Newspape r Advertising and How These Should be Developed—Criticism of Some Specimens Submitted.

In a recent advertising talk in a daily paper, a writer made the following indisputable assertion:

"Advertising is not a luxury nor a debatable policy. It has proven its case. Its record is traced in the skyline of the city where many towering buildings stand as a lesson of reproach to the men who had the opportunity but not the foresight, and furnish a constant inspiration to the young merchant at the threshold of his career."

Any progressive merchant who takes the trouble to observe the tendency of modern merchandizing, will at once admit that advertising, in some form or other, is a settled policy of the most successful men in any walk of life. Any wide difference of opinion as to advertising, nowadays, is a difference as to the method of applying advertising—not to advertising as a policy.

The eternal problem which confronts the modern merchant is not, "Shall I advertise?" but "HOW shall I advertise?"

Wherever there is a newspaper published which is well enough edited to command a fair circulation, one important part of the advertising problem of the local merchant is solved. The newspaper provides the best of all means for reaching possible buyers.

There are, of course, many places which cannot support a newspaper of their own, and in such places other means must be used.

But, as newspaper publicity is possible to the majority of grocers, most readers of Canadian Grocer are concerned with the task of making their advertising space fully effective.

The Principles of Ad-Writing.

When writing an ad, a merchant should bear in mind that he must first attract, then interest, then persuade. All three qualities are essential to the well-rounded, result-getting ad.

The quality of attraction comes first because it must be remembered that the most ads are in close proximity to other ads, each vieing with the other to gain the readers' interest. And in order to attract attention to your ad on the part of the greatest number of readers, it is necessary for you to discover what will attract them. What are the things they are most interested in? What ideas have the most attractive power among your readers?

The power of attraction is largely governed by local conditions. This necessitates constant study and a certain amount of experiment on the part of the merchant who would discover the best power of attraction to his advertising.

Large type helps some, and appropriate pictures help still more; but probably the best of all is an adequate understanding of local conditions, interests and trends of thought. These should be ever present in the mind of the ad writer.

Interest follows attraction if the attracting line creates sufficient curiosity to carry the reader's mind onward. Hence the necessity for some obvious connection between the headline and the immediately following copy.

Persuasion grows out of interest. strive to keep up the interest in every paragraph until the most persuasive point of all is reached—the price. Let every word which precedes the price justify that price. It is nothing more than a price well justified by other circumstances like seasonableness, quality, rarity, etc., which constitutes advertising persuasion.

Causes of Poor Ads.

A writer in a recent issue of Brains has the following to say about retail advertising in general:

"Searching beneath the surface, it is found that many poor advertisements are poor principally because they lack the cardinal points of interest—the selling features, the vital parts—so essential to good advertising.

"The merchant advertising in the best mediums without satisfactory results should subject his advertising and his business methods to thorough examination.

"Advertising is getting goods and prices before the people, and this should be done in the most attractive and salesmanlike manner of which one is capable. The merchant whose advertising pays best is the one who most clearly realizes that truth must base every statement, and that his first duty to his patrons is to make good every claim. The merchant who advertises a large measure of promise and gives a small portion of fulfilment is the one who pays for costly advertising space that is effective chiefly in driving trade from his very doors.

Advertising That Pays.

"Good advertising—advertising that pays—is the result of applied knowledge, analytic thought and keen regard for the eternal fitness of things.

"The person who produces good advertisements has the happy faculty of adapting himself to circumstances. He studies the people to whom his advertising is designed to appeal. He learns and caters to their likes and dislikes. In preparing copy he puts himself in the customer's place, and in well chosen words answers every question those customers would ask in reference to style, quality, value, price, etc. Knowing that large type never atones for vacuity of thought, he uses it sparingly, but makes each head and sub-head express a definite thought and complete statement, so that even the casual reader may take in the gist of the whole story at a glance. Finally, he regards the writing of advertising as a serious business proposi-

A Montreal Ad.

There's nothing like knowing what you want—whether your heart's desire is for a select, classy trade, or the trade of the multitude, the "popular" trade.

Kingsley Harrison, a Montreal grocer, whose ad was recently mentioned in this column, has made up his mind on this

It Is Not To-day's Business
we are advertising for. It is future business. It is not that you may buy just one pound of tea, but that you may START to buy all your tea from us.
If you make the start it will be our fault if you do not continue to use our tea.

We Do Not Think
our 30c. tea is the best tea in the city. We have other and more expensive teas. But we do think it is the best 30c. tea, and better than any peddler's 35c. or 40c. tea. point. He is after a definite line of trade, and he is using the kind of advertising that will get him there. An ad, which he has sent in for criticism, which is here reproduced in reduced form, has all the force, all the "swing," which comes from a mind well made up to get the popular trade. "The Million and the Millionaire." How that expresses Mr. Harrison's business attitude! This ad certainly ought to bring the people trooping in.

A Couple From London.

The late Sir Henry Irving, the eminent actor, was credited with the aim of trying to educate the public to an appreciation of the very highest forms of dramatic art. Many of his contemporaries, however, made no effort other than to cater to the existing public taste.

John Diprose, the London grocer, is playing the part of Sir Henry, in trying to educate the 25-cent tea people, up to a 30-cent grade. "Sell better tea" is his slogan, and he is seeking to accomplish his aim by advertising.

Among the three ads sent in by Mr. Diprose, there is one devoted to tea education. This ad strikes one at first sight as being just a little long-winded. Under some standards of judgment, this decision would hold good after a closer study of the ad. But, in judging ads, as in writing them, one must endeavor to bear in mind all the circumstances in connection with them. In this light, who would be chiefly interested in Mr. Diprose's ad? Would it not be women? In all probability the ad would be read by nine women to one man.

Now, women—that is, housekeepers—are known to be voracious readers of advertising. They have plenty of time to read ads. And it is quite reasonable to suppose that the length of an ad does not cut much ice with them so long as it touches upon a theme in which they are vitally interested.

Taking these facts into consideration, Mr. Diprose's ad, though lengthy, is not "long-winded," as at first sight it might appear. If a woman started to read it, there is that in it which convinces. It is, therefore, effective.

But there is a warning here for grocers in general. That is: Condense your language as much as possible. Strive for the terse, snappy sentences. When you write a twelve-word sentence see if you can't boil it down to seven or eight words.

The other two ads sent in by Mr. Diprose are well worth reproduction. But, as we haven't the space for both, we will reproduce the one headed, "It Looks Good."

This ad is a splendid example. The headline arouses curiosity. The copy clinches the housekeepers' interest, and furnishes a logical reason for the immediate purchase of sugar in fairly large quantities. The ad is well set up, terse and interesting.

CANADIAN COMPANY TAKES OVER BUSINESS.

The announcement has been made by the Corby Commission Co., of New York, that they have disposed of their interests in Canada for Clover Leaf, Arrow, Target and Tip Top brands of salmon, to the British Columbia Packers' Association, of Vancouver.

The company attribute the necessity for the change to existing conditions on the Fraser River, and recent legislation. They say that the business formerly done by them will be carried on as usual, and the same brokers will be retained in Canadian cities.

A CHANGE WORTH MAKING.

The intention of the Ontario Government, as expressed recently, to adopt the farm system for inmates of the Central Prison, will meet with the hearty approval, not only of the general citizen, but also of the business man in all departments of trade.

The suggestion contemplates not only the disposal of the property now occupied for prison purposes in Toronto and the building of a new prison upon a farm, but also the abolition of the contract and piece price systems of employment.

The plan has advantages from whatever side it is regarded. From the standpoint of the prisoners alone the change will be beneficial, both morally and physically. The chances for moral and mental improvement will be infinitely greater when he is engaged in some useful work in the open air, able to enjoy the beauties of nature, than when he is kept picking oakum in an atmosphere contaminated by the comments, if not the close companionship of a number of more or less degenerate prison inmates.

The prisoners' labor can be used in a great variety of ways, in the cultivation of the farm's products, in the caring for animals and in the building and upkeep of roads. All this will have its pecuniary advantage as well as effecting improvement in moral conditions and tendencies.

Another and not the least important advantage is contained in the proposal to discontinue the system of prison manufacture of generally used articles. This business has been a troublesome point with manufactures in several lines, notably woodware, stepladders, sleighs, binder twine, etc., for years, and firms engaged in the manufacture of these articles naturally felt that an injustice was being done when prison-made goods, with their advantages in price, were allowed to compete with theirs which were produced in the ordinary way. The proposal will do away with all difficulty of this kind and should prove a boon in every particular.

ENCOURAGE LOCAL FAIRS.

There are more ways for the retailer to reach the farmer and his pocketbook than most merchants imagine. The bright little town of Kentville, N.S. furnishes a good example of one way, the importance of which is not generally appreciated. According to facts furnished us by a good friend of The Grocer in that town.

Some weeks ago a horse show was arranged in Kentville and the merchants of the town joined with the promoters to make the affair a success. How they worked and the interest that was taken may be judged from the fact that 2,000 visitors were brought into the town, which, by the way has a population of about 1,800 at an expenditure of only $60, presumably for advertising.

The value of these fairs, particularly to the smaller towns, cannot be too largely estimated. It is pretty certain that the Kentville merchants got back a good deal more than they laid out in benefits accruing from the influx of visitors.

Aside from the direct benefit received in largely increased sales for the day or days of the fair, there are other results worth considering. Such an exhibition is an excellent advertisement for the town where it is held. Visitors are attracted from a large section of country, become acquainted with the place, its industries, its stores and its attractive features and are likely to return frequently. In another way, the local merchants are pulled out of ruts in an attempt to get their places of business in attractive form for the inspection of visitors and general benefit results.

It will be well worth the retailer's trouble to lend every encouragement possible to such enterprises which are being arranged in his locality.

MORE IN IT THAN APPEARS.

Since public interest has been aroused in the Co-operative Act, whose features have previously been described at length in these columns, a rumor has gained considerable credence in Canada that there is more behind the measure than simply a desire to stimulate the co-operative movement. It is alleged that during the last two months, two or three representatives of parties interested in the movement in England and who are backed by abundant capital, have visited Montreal and Quebec with a view to establishing large houses for supplying the co-operative societies which are expected to develop after the new Act came in force.

His Excellency the Governor-General, as is well-known, holds the position of president of the International Co-operative Alliance, which operates in Great Britain and Europe. When the Co-operative Bill was before the Special Committee of the House of Commons for consideration in March, he went to some inconvenience to give evidence which was received with great interest by reason of his connection with the European organization. A study of his remarks on this occasion point to the fact that he is very heartily in favor of the co-operative system coming very widely into operation in Canada.

FIRMER PRICES FOR VALENCIAS.

Advices received from London this week regarding Valencia raisins note a material reduction of stocks in hand at that port and point to a decided stiffening of prices.

In March stocks of raisins held in London were quoted as 770 tons, or figured in boxes, 61,600. On April 1st holders were said to be in possession of 550 tons, or 44,000 boxes. This reduction of 17,600 boxes at this season is of considerable moment and as a result prices quoted local brokers are fully two shillings and sixpence above those furnished in March.

The many friends of J. Stanley Cook, assistant secretary Montreal Board of Trade, will be pleased to hear of his election to the office of president of the Westmount A.A.A. Mr. Cook is an advocate of amateurism in sporting circles and it is with this end in view that he will strive to further the betterment of the association. Mr. Cook is also secretary of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST

Seeding General and a Month Ahead of Last Year—Money is Freer and is Helping Business—American Capital for Western Farm Hands.

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Winnipeg Correspondent.

Seeding is general throughout the Canadian West. This means that another week has maintained and increased the normal character of the conditions under which the wheat crop is being sown. It is just one month earlier than seeding last year, which the West learned to its very great cost was one month late. To the query, "How is the seed bed?" the answer is almost invariably, "Best in years," or "I never saw it better." There has been one warm shower followed by a day of high wind, blowing an average of over 50 miles an hour, and this cleared out the very last of the snow and dried off the wet spots so that the seeders could get to work. No time is being lost by the farmers, and the cry of "men wanted" is heard from every section of Manitoba and many parts of Saskatchewan.

The fine weather and prospect of early seeding had its reflex effect on the wheat market, which slumped quite heavily during the middle of the week, but showed steady signs of recovery on Friday and Saturday. Exporters have done a heavy business this week, not only in low grade wheats, but in No. 3 also, and a moderate amount of trade in No. 4. Export trade has been more active during the past five days than for the previous five weeks, though there has been a pretty fair trade in low grades all that time.

A careful inquiry among elevator owners goes to show that there is very little more than 2,000,000 of wheat in interior elevators and it is extremely doubtful if there is even two million bushels in farmers' hands, so that the amount to come forward now is considerably under five millions, when at the same date last year it was nearly 30,000,000 bushels. These are facts that are bound to tell on the trade in the long run, in spite of fine weather and large operations in seeding.

Stocks are heavy at Fort William and navigation is expected to open next week. There are a number of boats under charter and the wheat will go out with a rush as soon as there is open water.

Some of those who predicted $1.25 wheat early in the season are still looking for it, and it may come, but there is no disguising the fact that the enormous Argentine shipments have greatly lessened the probability of outside prices for our wheat this year.

One of the features of western news for the week is the loosening of the purse strings of the banks at country points. More than one branch has offered to advance 50 and 60 per cent. on good farm paper and the result is already beginning to be felt by the wholesale houses, where collections are steadily looking up. The movement is not large and at present it cannot be said to be general, but it shows the set of the tide and is giving a great impetus to business. Wholesale grocery houses report an excellent spring trade, far in advance of last year. Dry goods and hardware houses are a little more conservative in their statements of increase, but all admit that spring business is good. That there is money in the country is evidenced by the big department houses which send out catalogues. These houses reported March mail order business double what it was for March, 1907, and the first week of April more than double. This business, is, of course, strictly cash.

The influx of immigration has also tended to increase the money in circulation as the majority of the immigration this season, so far, has been of the moneyed class.

In connection with new immigration, both present and prospective, real estate dealers declare that there has been a larger inquiry for land suitable for mixed farming, than ever before. There are still speculators in wheat lands and wheat growers who want wheat land and nothing else, but over and above these are the better class of farmers both from Ontario, England and the United States, who are selecting farms with a view to mixed farming. This is the best news the West has had for many a day, for the tendency of new immigrants to grow nothing but wheat has been very marked in the past. When farmers start with mixed farming it not only indicates that they are practical men, but also that they have some capital as well, for mixed farming must have capital to start with much larger than is necessary for the mere raising of wheat.

The money depression in the United States was not an unmixed evil, as far as Western Canada is concerned, for it has without doubt tended to drive men with money, which they considered no longer safe in stocks and bonds to the Western lands for investment. Numbers of these men are securing blocks more or less large in extent, and not a few have announced their intention of bringing in only such farmers as will go in for diversified agriculture to buy their lands. This shows that a careful study of the situation has convinced numbers of these men that there is no better speculative investment than Canadian farm lands, which the investor sees to it that the class of men to whom he sells are of the right sort. Not a few of the American companies who bought larger tracts of land in the past five years and were careless of what type of farmer they sold to, have had a sharp lesson in the past year. Where buyers had been carefully selected for their experience in farming and their good equipment, it was rare for the companies to have to wait for their second and third payments, while in the case of those who sold to anyone who was willing to buy, regardless of their efficiency for the work to be done, they have had to earn their experience and wait for their money.

The warm weather has stimulated building to a great extent. Building permits are called for daily and buildings are being gotten under way as fast as possible. There is a large amount of Dominion Government building being done in the West this year.

Another indication that there is money when it is wanted is the active inquiry as to the date and place of the sales of pure bred stock under the auspices of the various breed associations. Saskatchewan has held its sale, but Manitoba and Alberta have both scheduled theirs for May. Already there is double the inquiry that there was last year. In addition to these large sales there will be one or two auctions held by individual breeders, with large herds of fine stock. Several of these men have been in Winnipeg recently arranging for dates and catalogues, and they all report the inquiry for foundation stock far ahead of this date last year.

Reports of the splendid condition of range cattle continue to come in week by week. There has been no setback of any kind this spring, so far, and by the middle of June shipment of export steers should be quite heavy. H.

BARRIE.

Barrie, April 14.

This week at last sees the end of the snow on our surrounding country roads and now the sorely tried farmer can come into town with no fear of being stalled in a snow bank on the way. For the last two weeks on some parts of the road there has been very deep snow, while probably for the next half mile the road would be mud, making the traffic impossible for either sleigh or buggy. Consequently the high prices which have been ruling here got quite a bump this week when the thirty-five cent butter dropped to twenty-eight and eggs to fourteen cents a dozen. Chickens are a thing of the past, but any that are offered at all bring fourteen to fifteen cents. Potatoes are selling at 75c. to 90c. and a few apples at $1.25 to $2. Hay still continues at the twenty dollar mark, a price that has never changed since last November.

Steve Vair left last week for San Deigo, California. He intends to still follow the grocery trade in the west.

This season has been an exceptionally good one for maple syrup in this district and every day the farmers who go in for the making of this line may be seen coming into town with quite a supply, for all this there has been no great decline in prices, compared with other years, the prices to-day being from one dollar and ten cents to one twenty-five a gallon. A noticeable factor, too, is the short supply of the so-called "brown sugar" syrup.

Whitehead Bros., of the sixth ward, are offering their grocery stock and fixtures for sale.

Chas. Strange, who was appointed jailer for the Barrie jail about six months ago, has resigned his position, and will again be found in his store on Mulcaster Street. Charlie says he would sooner sell groceries on a small margin than serve prisoners.

Harry Callegan, who recently sold his grocery business on Bayfield Street to E. R. Wainwright, has been appointed ranger for Algonquin Park. Harry went north this week to take up his new position.

With Easter week here, the local fruit men have a heavy trade in imported fruits and vegetables, much better in fact than other years. Tomatoes are selling very well and are being retailed at 15c. a pound. Strawberries are selling at 15c. a box and one merchant told your correspondent that he has sold twice the amount of berries up till date that he sold last year, although the weather has not been at all favorable. Cucumbers are selling at 25c. for extra hothouse, while smaller grades are sold from ten to twenty cents. Pineapples are selling fairly well at 25c. each while oranges, which are very cheap and good, never sold better, but are showing a very bad rot.

EDMONTON.

Edmonton, April 13, 1908.

"There will be a considerable reduction in the price of canned goods in the west this year, which will have a tendency to reduce the cost of living. Just what this reduction will be I do not care to state, but I am confident that it will be fairly large."

This was the opinion expressed by Amos H. Baker, manager of the Old Homestead Canning Co., of Picton, Ont. when interviewed recently by a Canadian Grocer representative. Mr. Baker stated that some companies had advanced the price of canned goods 2c per case during the winter, but a reduction was bound to come. Freight rates had been lowered, solder was considerably cheaper, the price of cans had been lowered and all of these causes would contribute to a reduction in the price of canned goods in the west.

"What do you think of the likelihood of establishing canning factories in the west?" Mr. Baker was asked.

"I do not think it at all likely," was the reply, "at least until the population is many times what it is now. At the present time there are comparatively few vegetables grown in Western Canada, partly because the people find other lines more profitable, and partly because the soil and climate is not suited to the growth of many kinds of products to be canned, such as corn, etc. It would not pay, I think, to establish a canning factory for only certain lines."

Two years ago there were considerably less than a dozen wholesale firms doing business in the city. To-day there are nearly three times that number. Two years ago Edmonton's wholesale business was confined to a few lines of trade being chiefly the supplying of fur trading posts to the west and north, and the outfitting of fur trading parties. To-day practically every line of trade is supplied. Two years ago the wholesale territory was limited to a few miles on the south and a very few miles on the east and west. To-day the territory extends over a district of 100 miles to the south, 150 miles to the east, 100 miles to the north, and 40 miles to the west.

During the past year and a half this territory has been fairly well developed by the wholesale houses in the city and Edmonton now controls all the wholesale trade there is to be had in that territory. There is room, however, for much expansion within the same bounds and it is probable that it will be some years before it is developed to its capacity.

During the past fall and winter, when the results of the crop failures and the straitened conditions of the money market have been felt most keenly, the wholesale trade of Edmonton, while not experiencing any great expansion, has been satisfactory, unexpectedly so, in fact. Prominent wholesalers state that collections have been much better than they expected.

The local wholesalers, however, are very reticient in discussing the immediate prospects of a further rapid growth in wholesale business, and are inclined to be conservative in their statements.

The C.P.R. has definitely announced that it is to be part of their policy to make Edmonton a wholesale and distributing centre. With this end in view they have inaugurated a new freight tariff which went into effect last week. The new rates give a reduction of 5 cents per 100 pounds on freight in class 5 and 3 cents on machinery and agricultural implements. This places Edmonton on an equal basis with Winnipeg and goes a long way towards placing many of the agencies and distributing houses of large eastern firms on the same footing as the Winnipeg branches.

On the Canadian Northern there is also a reduction in the lake and rail freight rates for the coming navigation season in connection with their line at Port Arthur.

The Guelph Co-operative Association have made a good stand on the half holiday question by deciding to close on Thursday afternoons during July and August, and have also under consideration the advisability of closing on Thursday afternoons the whole year round. There is some talk of the other grocers doing likewise during the summer season. They should too, for the grocer clerks' hours are far longer than any other clerks'. Give the matter at least a reasonable consideration.

Johnston & Co. have sold their store on the Elora Road to E. Harvey and have decided to enlarge their main store on Gordon Street and remove all the stock there. This old grocery store is now likely to be a thing of the past as Mr. Harvey does not intend at present to have it continued.

The rush for housecleaning necessities and garden seeds is on and the grocers will be kept busy from now till after the 24th of May.

KINGSTON.

Kingston, April 14.

Fred Vanluven, grocer, Princess St., sold his stock and fixtures recently to the New Milk Co., Lee & Kirk, who intend to run a grocery in connection with the milk business. Fred was doing a good trade, but felt he needed a change. He traveled for a few years for Stuart, Harvey & Co., of Hamilton, and was well liked on the road. Some wholesale houses have approached him already and would like to secure his services. He sold his store and dwelling to S. Corbett, undertaker.

J. Y. Parkhill & Co., commission men, are finding their premises too small and will shortly move into the Oddfellows Block, which they have purchased. J. Y. Parkhill is a brother of William Parkhill, the Toronto grocer. He is a North of Ireland man and can put up a good argument, politically or commercially.

The Hamilton correspondent's advice regarding early closing is timely. Let us all wake up to the fact that we need more fresh air and sunshine, that life is short and we haven't got long to stay here. The early closing by-law passed a few years ago has been well kept here. Only a few shortsighted grocers, who relish long hours, keep open and look wearied, but they will fall into line some day.

The Easter meat show windows are beginning to appear. One of the best yet is shown in Gilbert's uptown store, dressed by R. James, of Liverpool. It has caused a lot of comment. The meat was purchased from H. Coleman, Kincardine.

Mr. Plewes, agent for the Hedley Shaw Milling Co., reports trade brisk around here. He has booked many good orders. Will Gardiner is taking orders as a side line for McGinn Rankin Milling Co., Collinsby.

Saturday's market was a big one owing to the fact that communication with the islands was secured by boat. Two boatloads of islanders came over, each carrying one or two big baskets of eggs and butter. The citizens saw the situation, bought slowly and down came the prices of butter and eggs. Butter was as low as 26c. and eggs 18c.

The prospectus for the newly chartered Crystal Bay Canning Co. was issued last week. It is capitalized at $50,000, to be taken up in shares of $50 each. I guess it will go for Kingston can stand a few more industries.

Owing to judicious advertising in the Whig, Gilbert, the grocer, sold in four weeks 1,500 seven-pound pails of raspberry and strawberry jam. Mr. Gilbert used locals here and there throughout the paper.

STRATFORD.

April 14.—Retail merchants in this city have been reading the newspaper reports with interest in regard to the articles on the Co-operative Bill, just recently before the House at Ottawa. The local retail grocers followed the case with interest, and were largely instrumental in having a wire message sent to Ottawa to Perth County's representative asking him to look after their interests in the matter.

Easter Eggs—They were for sale by the dozens and dozens on the market last Saturday, and have been selling fast in the stores. The grocers find this year, now that the price is lowering, the Easter trade in eggs is in advance of the trade last year. The city is flooded with the hen fruit.

Grocers generally report that trade has just been about average, but that it is picking up steadily. The roads have been in a very poor condition in the country, and lately the farmers have been patronizing the trade of the country stores, being unable to risk the breaking of their horse's legs.

Len. Myers, formerly of the Will J. Norfolk store, is now with the McCully & Haugh. Mr. Myers is a clerk of much practical experience, and is liked by the dealing public. He is a splendid window dresser, and works up some very unique designs, which are, as a rule, equally attractive.

There is a large quantity of maple syrup for sale these days at the grocery stores, and now that the sweet liquid is becoming more plentiful, it is also becoming less dear in price.

AN ASSURED SUCCESS.

Montreal Exhibition of Groceries Opens With Bright Prospects.

That the Exhibition of Groceries in Montreal, which opens at the Arena Friday evening and continues until April 29, will be a grand success is an assured fact. Space has been at a premium since it was offered for sale, and it may safely be stated that the Arena will hold a number of exhibits of pure food products which have not been surpassed anywhere on this continent, or elsewhere.

Every care has been exercised to ensure the success of the exhibition. An advisory committee, composed of the leaders in the manufacturing, wholesale and brokerage grocery business has worked hard night and day and their efforts will not have been in vain.

Reduced railway fares are assured for out of town grocers desiring to take in the fair, which will be well worth coming a few hundred miles to see.

Markets and Market Notes

Reports From Canadian Markets and Notes From Primary Sources of Grocery Supplies—Sugar Advanced and Raw Markets Very Firm—Staple Lines Are Generally Steady.

QUEBEC MARKETS

Montreal, April 16, 1908.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Advanced 10c and very firm.
Butter—Firmer.
Eggs—Easier.
Maple Products—Sugar lower; syrup steady.

Another advance in refined sugar took place on Friday of last week. It amounted to 10c a barrel, and an upward tendency is still noticeable. Another advance is likely to occur at any time. Local refiners report a very good demand at present. Butter has assumed a firmer tone this week, which is due no doubt to storage stocks being light and receipts of fresh made creamery being very light. It is thought that present prices will hold for a week or ten days, when receipts of fresh made are expected to be increased. Eggs are a little easier this week, new laid being quoted at 17½c to 18c dozen. Pickled are not quoted this week, being off the market. The demand for the Easter trade is very heavy. New maple sugar is arriving quite freely now, and is lower in price, being quoted at 9c to 9½c a lb. New maple syrup is also arriving freely, but has not changed in price. Both lines are in good demand. The provision market is still very firm for all lines, with a good demand. Local packers report that Easter trade is slightly in excess of that of last year.

SUGAR—Another advance in price has taken place on sugar, which was put up 10c a bbl. all round on Friday of last week. The market still shows an upward tendency and it is likely that before long sugar will reach the $5 per bbl. mark. There is a very good local demand at present.

MONTREAL—The canned goods situation is unchanged since last report, the usual amount of business being done. All lines are in good demand.

TORONTO—Business is rather more encouraging this week and with the coming of warmer weather demand will probably be more active.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—
Sugar—Advanced 10c.
Beans—Firmer.
Prunes—Selling well.
Collections—Fair.

Toronto, April 15th, 1906.

Conditions are somewhat more encouraging in the wholesale markets this week. The improved condition of the country roads is responsible to some extent for this, farmers being able to get into town much more easily for buying and the general feeling that spring is here, with the prevalence of more encouraging weather, is also a factor in the opening of better business.

The further advance of 10 cents on sugar, which occurred on Friday, and brought the price for standard granulated up to $5.00, was the notable feature of the week. Beans are somewhat higher, as the result of large purchases by American buyers and the supply seems tending toward the short side. Otherwise the markets have been generally steady.

The financial side of the business is not as satisfactory as it might be. Wholesalers report collections a little slow with the outlook rather more encouraging.

SUGAR—The advance of 10 cents in Canadian refined, which occurred on Friday was but the natural movement of a market which had been growing in strength since the last advance on March 21st, and was only to be expected. This brings extra standard granulated up to a $5.00 basis.

The market continues exceedingly strong, even in the face of this last advance, and indications only point to a movement of prices upward.

Willett & Gray say of the situation in raws:

"The temporary reaction to the advancing markets, noted last week, continued until the receipt of the weekly cable figures from Cuba. In the meantime Europe declined from the high point of 11s 5¼d for beet sugar of March 31st to 11s 1½d on April 6th, and there were sold here 10,000 bags Cuba Centrifugals at 2.94c c & f., 96 degree test, with 40,000 bags Porto Ricos at 4.30c per lb., both lots for shipment, and not changing the spot quotation, which remained at 4.36c per lb., duty paid.

"Following this small reaction, the crop news from Cuba quickly made a market recovery which carried beet sugar to a new high level at 11s 6¾d, with a quiet close at 11s 6d.

"Also renewed business in Cuba Centrifugals followed at 3c c. & f., 96 degree test, to extent of 80,000 to 100,000 bags, comprising all sugars on offer, and closing with holders asking 3 1-16c c & f. for further limited offerings.

"Our refiners also secured a considerable quantity of European beet sugar at reported 11s 6d to 11s 8¼d c. & f., but declined to go on when higher prices were named, prompt shipment being offered to-day at 11s 10½d c. & f. So that at the close buyers and sellers are apart for both cane and beet sugar, with the advantage in favor of sellers in tone and tendency.

"Now that some 150,000 tons of beet sugar have been bought in Europe, it becomes an interesting question as to the remaining quantity available of American qualities, not above 16 D. S. in color.

"In answer to this question one cable reply to-day from Austria says: 'Unsold 25,000 tons; refiners' supply, 100,000 tons.'

"This reply is not altogether definite, but indicates, perhaps, that refiners holding American grades might resell the same to extent of 100,000 tons. One thing is becoming evident, that all available American grade beet sugar remaining from last crop can find ready purchasers here sooner or later.

"The recent sales of Philippine sugar noted last week were made in part on basis of 3 11-16c per lb. duty paid, basis of 88 degree test. This figures a result to the Filipino of £9 9s 7d per ton, f.o.b., against the local quotation in Manila, in January, of £7 8s 8d f.o.b. for assorted marks—a recent profit of over £2 per ton. It is difficult to find new sellers, and the lowest price intimated is equal to 3¾c, 88 degree test basis.

"The comparatively low quotation for new crop beet sugar (Oct.-Dec. delivery) 10s 3¾d, can only be accounted for on the theory that the 300,000 tons Russia Crystals, to be let into the U. K. after September 1st, has an influence which casts its shadow before.

"No recent business is reported in Java sugars, the offerings including July shipment at 12s 3d c. & f., and August shipment at 11s 9d c. & f. Our cable yesterday from Java reports favorable weather for the growing crop.

"The tone and tendency is to further improvement, which may come slowly."

In regard to refined, Willett & Gray say, in part:

"Present prices have not checked consumption of refined, and even considerably higher prices are not likely to do so to any material extent. People will economize in other directions before curtailing on sugar, and with better prospects for fruit than last season, the consumption should proceed satisfactorily.

"The next change in refined, when it comes, will be an advance.

"It is well to carry a full supply, even to August and September."

M. G. Wanger & Co. comment in an interesting manner on the present situation as follows:

"The loss in the Cuba crop can now be counted upon as 500,000 tons. The losses in the other West Indies, Java and Mauritius, and in India, bring the total shortage to a considerable quantity. That shortage is the basis upon which prices have been advanced. It is just so much taken from the world's supply and the sugars cannot be replaced until the next crops mature. As the season progresses, bringing along its big consumption with the warmer weather and the need for extra supplies to meet the fruit canning demand, the shortages in this year's sugar crops will be felt more than now, and as that big consumptive demand diminishes the stocks held prices will register additional advances and we can expect firm markets, with perhaps a slight reaction now and then until the end of summer."

Estimates of visible supply show a total stock of Europe and America 3,381,199 tons, against 3,726,579 tons last year at the same uneven dates. The decrease of stock is 345,380 tons, against a decrease of 340,960 tons last week. Total stocks and afloats together show a visible supply of 3,491,199 tons, against 3,806,579 tons last year, or a decrease of 315,380 tons.

TEAS—The local market continues quiet with the buying of a hand-to-mouth variety.

The markets abroad seem to be improving in tone, with some emphasis in demand for higher grades. Thompson Bros.' weekly circular, dated April 2, summarizes the situation prevalent in Great Britain at that time as follows:

"The general buying on the part of the larger blending houses has resulted in a better market all round, quotations for the medium grades have been especially influenced and a satisfactory feature has been the fact that the finer kinds have not been depressed in consequence. The outlook for next week points to a strong market for all growths above common, as business in the private market has been done in teas withdrawn from the recent sales, at better prices. Last month's London figures for British growths, just to hand show a marked improvement in the position; clearances show an increase of no less than 3,000,000 lbs., while stocks are some 4,500,000 lbs. behind the statistics for 1907—the export figures are however 1,000,000 lbs. less than those of last year."

An advice received locally from Colombo during the week records some interesting facts as to the condition of the crop. It says in part: "Rains have fallen in some parts of the planting districts and flush is coming on well. Tea planting on new clearings is going on somewhat extensively and we have it on good authority that some 20,000 acres are going into tea this year in Ceylon and Southern India. This has made a great demand on seed, the price of which has gone up tremendously in consequence.

COFFEE—Dealers report business as continuing brisk under active demand.

Willett & Gray in reviewing the present situation in coffee say:

"The receipts point to a crop of probably 10,250,000 instead of $10,000,000 bags, but those who a year ago estimated the current crop at 14,000,000 to 15,000,000 bags are highly incensed that the crop is so much larger than expected, while the actual outturn is only 4,000,000 to 5,000,000 bags less than they predicted.

"The process to consolidate the available coffee in a few hands will be very plainly seen at the end of this crop, when it is probable that out of a total visible of 13,500,000 to 14,000,000 bags, the government and their friends will control 10,000,000 bags, and in the stocks of mild coffees, with the stocks at Rio and Santos, will make up another 2,000,000 bags, which altogether will comprise a very large percentage of the total. The consuming world which has been encouraged from the very beginning to believe that the financial condition of the government was weak and that liquidation had to be put through forcibly at one time or another, will find out its mistake. It has never been the intention of the government to create a corner or to withdraw any coffee from consumption which the trade would call for. Their policy, as originally announced, will be continued, and that will be to sell only when the trade urgently demands it, and only in such quantities as they may require, as the government is fully prepared to finance the operation to properly comply with the condition."

DRIED FRUITS—Prunes continue to be in considerable demand but the market otherwise is dull. Advices this week from London point to a shortened market and a likelihood of stiffer prices in valencia raisins. Stocks in hand have been reduced from 770 tons in March to 550 on April 1 and quotations are quite 2s 6d over last prices furnished brokers here.

William Hill, Jr., of New York, reviews the position of currants as follows: "The market in Greece continues unchanged and firm at above the parity of prices prevailing on spot. A good inquiry continues to be noted, showing that buyers are now about ready to replenish their stocks, having realized that present offerings are at minimum figures. Already a better feeling is being experienced by holders here. An improvement in prices on spot must be looked for shortly. The general situation of currants throughout the world is favorable to holders as stocks are decidedly less than usual at this season of the year, and barely sufficient to cover a normal consumption during the remaining three to four months of the current crop year. There are no parcels afloat to the states as far as known."

SAYS CORRESPONDENT WAS MISTAKEN.

President of Dominion Wholesalers' Guild Takes Exception to Statement in Last Issue.

The following letter from H. C. Beckett, Hamilton, president of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild, was forwarded us during the week. It is self-explanatory:

"Editor Canadian Grocer.—In your issue of April 10th, page 34, your Hamilton correspondent makes the statement that the retail trade feel annoyed because neither the Dominion nor the Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Guild paid any attention to the threatened legislation at Ottawa regarding the Co-operative Act, and your correspondent very rightly maintained that the wholesale trade should put up a fight to protect the rights of the retailer.

"Your correspondent is wrong and it is a poor compliment to the wholesale grocery trade to be accused of being indifferent to the interests of the retail trade, when there is absolutely no justification for it.

"As a matter of fact, several representatives of the Dominion and Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Guilds did go to Ottawa and protested in a most vigorous manner against legislation that was not based on sound business principles; not only that but they joined hands with the retailers in protesting.

"I am astonished that a reputable journal such as yours would print such rot about the wholesale grocers when, if you had taken the trouble to make enquiries, you might have avoided casting any reflections upon the wholesale grocery trade.

"The grocers' section of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada has been doing a magnificent work in protecting the retail trade against unfair legislation, and in this they have been loyally supported by members of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild. I believe, and am sure, that your intention is to be fair, but, when the way is open to get at the facts, there is hardly any necessity for printing untruths.—

H. C. Beckett."

[In considering this matter it should be understood that this paper does not hold itself responsible for statements made by its local correspondents. The best men procurable, who have considerable knowledge of both retail and wholesale trade conditions, are secured in each town, and their statements are understood only as an index of local opinion.

As a matter of fact, we were ourselves unaware of any steps that had been taken either by the Dominion or Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Guild, up to the time of the publication of the item Mr. Beckett complains of, in opposition to the Co-operative Act. The matter had been very carefully followed in this office and among the trade in Toronto and nothing was heard of the matter. Careful inquiries since this letter was received among members of both the Ontario and Dominion Guild in Toronto have assured us that nothing is known here of such action being taken.

The Grocer regrets that an injustice has apparently been done the wholesale grocers in the matter. We will be glad to receive from Mr. Beckett details as to any steps which have been taken in opposition to the measure as evidenced in his letter and will give these the utmost publicity possible.—Editor.]

THOSE QUESTIONABLE APPLES.

Manager Smith, of Oshawa Canning Co., Tells His Side of the Story.

Mr. F. Smith, manager of the Oshawa Canning Co., whose goods have been so severely criticized in the West the past couple of weeks as a result of the alleged questionable condition of some canned apples sold in Winnipeg, called on The Grocer this week and gave us his story of the shipment.

"The apples in question," Mr. Smith says, "were shipped from Oshawa to Winnipeg about twelve months ago after being in storage for some time at the factory. Before shipment they were examined and passed as satisfactory and there is absolutely no truth in the newspaper reports which say the goods were rejected in Ontario before being shipped to the West."

The goods were consigned, Mr. Smith alleges, to a jobber in Winnipeg. Some time ago this gentleman informed Mr. Smith that some of the cans were swelled and the fruit spoiled. On receipt of this information Mr. Smith offered at once to make a settlement. This plan was followed and a quantity of the goods were returned to Mr. Smith and stored in the Canadian Northern warehouse in Winnipeg.

While they were there, Mr. Smith says, he asked that a competent man be appointed to inspect the goods with a view to throwing out swollen and unsatisfactory tins. This was done, some quantity of the apples was disposed of and the Oshawa Canning Co. settled for the loss.

After this another firm of jobbers, Williamson Bros., stepped in, made an offer for the fruit and a portion of the lot was disposed of to them. Mr. Smith supposes that sales were then made without further inspection and the trouble developed later when the goods got into the retailers' hands.

Another jobber, F. Barteaux, at this time, wired in an offer to the company at Oshawa for the balance of the apples held in store at the northern warehouse. The company, supposing that he had made an inspection of the goods and knew what he was buying, accepted the offer and the sale was made in the ordinary course of business.

Mr. Smith claims that the Oshawa Canning Co. is in no way liable for the allegedly questionable condition of the fruit, which he also questions. While the companies are only held liable for swells and defects he did not hold to his privileges in this instance, but paid the Winnipeg jobber in full for the shipment. As a matter of fact, Mr. Smith notes that as yet not a cent has been received by his company for any of this shipment of apples.

Mr. Smith says that the same procedure was followed with this shipment of goods as is customary in the trade and that there was nothing irregular. He has had some of the goods examined since the trouble arose and they have been found satisfactory. The same goods, he says, were sold in Toronto and no complaint has been heard.

Mr. Smith is very much surprised that any of the apples should have been characterized as poisonous. He claims that the heat of cooking will restore the fruit even in tins which have become swelled, to a condition quite fit for food and that the contents could by no means be poisonous. In no case have the company offered to sell swollen goods.

Mr. Smith purposes securing some of the goods complained of and submitting them to a competent analyst for a test of their quality. The result of this will be given to the trade and will no doubt be awaited with considerable interest.

MAKING A SUCCESS ON THE STAGE

Joseph Park, who took one of the leading parts in "Mary's Lamb," Richard Carle's musical comedy, which appeared at the Princess Theatre, Toronto, last week, is the youngest son of Wm. Park, of Park, Blackwell & Co., the Toronto pork packers.

Mr. Park went on the stage about thirteen or fourteen years ago and has made quite a success in the profession. He has a magnificent baritone voice which is much admired and his part in "Mary's Lamb" was commented on very favorably in Toronto. During his stay in the city Mr. Park, who was accompanied by Mrs. Park, was the guest of his brother, Alex. Park, on Winchester St.

NEW PACKING HOUSE FOR EDMONTON.

Edmonton's new packing plant, which is being built for Griffin & Co., and which is expected by local dealers to make that city the Chicago of the west, will be rushed forward from now on and it is expected, will be completed and ready for equipment before the summer is over. The construction had reached the third storey when work was stopped last fall.

All possible haste will be made in getting the walls of the remaining four storeys up and the roof on.

The building is 163 by 123 feet and is being erected after the style of the large packing houses in Chicago and Kansas City. There are to be two main divisions, namely, the cooling division and the main manufacturing division. The cooling division will have seven floors with a total storing capacity for carcasses of 5,000 cattle, 3,000 hogs and 1,500 sheep, which is expected to be the daily output when the plant is in full swing.

A power and heating plant is also to be erected in connection with the packing house, which is to be 122 by 90 feet. The plant is three miles from the centre of the city to the northeast. It has been supplied with water and sewerage service from the city system.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Dealers say that all signs indicate that 1908 will be by far the largest year for tan shoes ever known. With this in view merchants should see to it that their stock of tan shoe dressing is well filled up. Dandy Russett Polish, manufactured by Whittemore Bros. & Co., Cambridge, Mass., is one of the most satisfactory polishes on the market, and should be found on the retail merchants' shelves.—Advt.

"If you have a good thing you should let the world know it." The following of this principle has enabled many business men to make a success. Every retail merchant should aim to keep before the public the seasonable goods that he has on hand. Salable goods should be kept to the front in their proper seasons. Just now is a particularly good time to make a display of brushes, brooms, woodenware, etc. Your windows and show cases should be utilized to show the variety of goods you carry in these lines. In many stores these goods are not regarded as suitable for display, and are relegated to back shelves and out-of-the-way corners. Try the effect on your trade of giving these lines a front place.

W. P. Eby, of Eby-Blain & Co., Toronto, left on Saturday for a three weeks' trip to Manitoba, the Northwest and British Columbia.

Cheese Steady With An Easier Tone—Butter Firmer Under Active Demand for New Made—English Market More Receptive for Canadian Hams and Bacon.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, April 15, 1908.

Cheese continues pretty steady in feeling, with a slightly easier tendency, if anything. This weakness is not noticeable on the surface, but it appears to be there, however, and may be observed if one is in the market to buy.

The easiness is due to the lack of inquiry in a buying way. Old Country houses have not been very keen over the Canadian situation during tne past week. But little stock has left Montreal for the other side within the past six or eight days. Some shipments have been made, but these are believed to be chiefly on order, that is, cheese which has been held awaiting the commands of the owners across the water.

Holders continue to ask the same prices as last week, practically 13c to 13¼c for colored, but it is quite probable that they would shade if there was a buyer for a large quantity. One dealer stated that 12¾c would be accepted by many for large sales because of the fact that the market is exceedingly dull and shows no immediate improvement.

With navigation about to open, however, it is likely that greater interest will be displayed in this commodity. Usually the river is open about the last week in April, and this year the opening will be quite as early as in past seasons, if not earlier. Steamship companies generally schedule their boats to arrive in Montreal the latter days of April or the first few days in May, for the first trip of the season.

What white cheese is on offer is quoted around 12¾c to 13c, but, as in colored, it is believed that smaller figures would be accepted if sales would result.

Receipts of cheese last week amounted to 113 boxes, against nil boxes previous week and 709 boxes same week last year. Total receipts to date amount to 2,054,111 boxes, against 2,351,085 boxes same period a year ago.

Owing to the great demand for new butter and the scarcity of the article, prices this week jumped up to 34½c and 35c. These figures are quite an advance on the quotations given in these columns last week, which were 29¼c to 30c for finest new make.

On Saturday last at Cowansville, 33½c was paid for the goods of one factory, which means about 34c in Montreal. Many other purchases are being made on a similar basis, but the cost of bringing the butter to Montreal would make the price in many cases one cent above that paid at the creamery.

Most of the arrivals of new butter are express, the make not being large enough yet to warrant freight shipments. In fact, demand is so strong for the new goods, makers are obliged to ship by express in order to place it as quickly as is desired.

It is expected that these prices will be easier after the first few days of next week, owing to the finishing of Lent, which ends to-morrow. It remains to be seen, however, whether they will be maintained longer than is expected.

Dairy butter is quoted to-day in the neighborhood of 28c to 30c. There is a fair supply on hand, and demand for it is good. It is for the new creamery, however, that there is the real demand, and dealers are at their wit's end to supply their various customers in a quantity which will satisfy them even in a measure. It is likely that the advanced figures asked this week will check consumption to a certain extent, as the high prices did a few weeks ago.

Receipts of butter last week amounted to 379 packages, against 167 packages previous week, and 579 packages same week last year. Receipts to date amount to 417,212 packages, against 613,797 packages same period a year ago.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

A scarcity of Canadian bacon and ham in Great Britain at present has forced that market into a somewhat more receptive mood, and a good demand for the best selections has advanced prices a couple of shillings above last week's quotations. Canadian goods now demand prices ranging from 6 to 10 shillings per hundredweight higher than the home product.

Even with the market in this encouraging condition little Canadian product has been going forward. Local deliveries have been exceedingly light and with a good demand here the local markets have taken practically all the goods turned out.

Deliveries at American points have also been light and as a result of market conditions summarized below, shipments from the United States to the British market were materially curtailed. The Danes, however, were just as busy as ever last week and sent over an aggregate of 50,000 boxes to the British market. Advices from England note that a material curtailment of Danish deliveries is expected for several weeks, shortly, and this should provide for considerable encouragement to the Canadian packing industry.

Prices ruling this week were, for hogs f.o.b. $6.10 to $6.15, and for hogs off cars at factory $6.50 to $6.70.

The New York Journal of Commerce gives the following summary of American market conditions last week:

"The past week has witnessed a marked falling off in speculation in hog products. Receipts of hogs have been a little more liberal but still moderate, and the advance in prices has been checked, though they have not yet reacted to any extent. But the shorts appeared to have been pretty thoroughly scared out previously, and demand has fallen off materially, as the packers have not appeared to have been supporting the market, except on weak spots to prevent a break. The publishing of the month's stocks, showing an increase after a month of light receipts in March, seems to have taken all the bull sentiment out of the market. But there has been no pressure to sell either from the packers or speculators, as the packers own the stocks, and shorts would only be putting themselves in their power by selling the market short. As a result, it seems to be drifting into a dull rut, with no public interest of importance, now that the shorts have been outsqueezed, although there may be some outside long interest yet. But if so, and of any importance, the next move will be for the packers to shake them out. The fear of this has materially curtailed spot demand this week, although there has not been selling pressure enough to produce any decline as yet from the late advance. Prospects of a better hog supply, when farmers have finished their spring work, are considered good, and improvement in this week's receipts is regarded as a sign in this direction."

FOOD INSURANCE IN MONTREAL.

Proposal to Form Company Which Will Guarantee Purity.

A novel scheme has been promulgated by the Medical Health Officer and other officials in Montreal with a view to organizing an insurance company in the city which shall guarantee the absolute purity of all foods coming under its control.

The insurance is to cover every mortal thing that a human being eats. The very poorest citizen is to be given the same protection against impure food as the citizen who has millions.

The plan of this quaint insurance is simplicity itself. In the first place large producers of food are to be asked to adopt a stamp which will inform the public that the article is absolutely pure and wholesome. This stamp will be a printed policy and a guarantee to the purchaser. That means if by chance the food so stamped is found not to be wholesome, all a citizen does is to return the food to the company, insuring it and he gets ten times the amount he paid for it. For this protection the suggestion is that the householder is to pay to the company, whether it be a private or civic one, something like fifty cents a year.

Dr. McCarrey, the city's chief food inspector, when interviewed regarding the matter, said: "It was true that the inauguration of such a company was contemplated in the city. He had not the slightest doubt but that an organization of this kind would be of great service. "Such insurance," he said, "would protect every householder against impure milk, and all other kinds of impure food. I do not think there would be many householders in the city who would object to paying a trifle like fifty cents a year to be protected against unwholesome food."

"Will the project be run by the city or by a company?" was asked.

Dr. McCarrey said he was not in a position to answer the question. While the matter had been discussed for some time among officials and others at the City Hall, no definite plan had been drawn up. It was likely, however, that a plan would very shortly be given out. So far as the big food producing companies were concerned, he believed that they would gladly welcome such a venture, as a stamp on their products, stating they were pure, would be of great commercial value to themselves. He understood that many large food concerns in the city had already approved of the plan.

WORLD'S SUGAR PRODUCTION.

An estimate by the British Board of Trade of the sugar production of the world for 1906 makes a total of 14,312,716 long tons, of which 7,317,472 tons were cane and 6,995,244 tons beet, the production of both kinds advancing practically at the same rate since 1898. In the production of cane sugar, British India had the largest output of 2,223,400 tons, and in beet sugar Germany ranked first, with an output of 2,362,187 tons. In consumption of sugar per head Australia stands first at 129 pounds, the United States coming next with 89 pounds, and the United Kingdom following at 81 pounds.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Flour and Cereal Markets Generally Steady—Better Outlook for Export Business—Lines of Candy Advancing.

The flour and cereal markets remain fairly steady this week, with no particularly new features to report.

Deliveries of both wheat and oats have recently been comparatively light, but the improved condition of the country roads, which are rapidly drying up after the passing of the snow, promises to help this feature of the business.

The fact that large shipments of flour have been made during the last week to foreign points shows that the market is again coming to an export basis.

Business in cereals is almost purely local, but demand keeps fairly steady.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—The flour market remains firm at the old quotations. Demand is good locally, and there is not expected to be any material change in this line until opening of navigation, which will be toward the end of the month.

FLOUR—The market remains steady in prices, though it is a little weaker than at last reports. Demand is fairly good, with an outlook for further export business shortly.

CEREALS—Business remains comparatively quiet, with somewhat light deliveries. Fairly good local demand is felt. Prices this week are quoted as follows:

CONFECTIONERY.

The confectionery situation remains about the same as at last reports. Manufacturers have advanced the prices of the cheaper lines half a cent, but as yet there has been no general advance on the higher grade goods.

With the added advance in sugar during the week, however, the feeling in the candy business is even more firm, and it seems probable that lines of confectionery in general will follow to some extent the increase in price of sugars.

CANADIAN FLOUR TO EGYPT.

Toronto Firm Made Another Shipment Last Week.

The Campbell Milling Co., Toronto Junction, made large shipment of flour to Alexandria, Egypt, last week. This is a continuation of business which was opened by a sample shipment some time ago—the quality of flour submitted meeting the demands of buyers in Egypt —and promises to develop somewhat extensively.

The shipments are made, peculiarly enough, via Boston and Liverpool, it being impossible to secure satisfactory rates direct from the American port to Egypt, though several steamers run direct.

TO EXPLOIT DEEP SEA FISHERIES

Largest Storage Plant in the World to be Erected at Prince Rupert.

Up to the present time United States firms have almost completely monopolized the deep sea fishing on the Pacific Coast.

This condition, however, if recent developments in Canada materialize, will not exist much longer. The United States companies are to have a powerful Canadian rival, the Canadian Fish & Storage Co., which has just been organized, with headquarters at Prince Rupert. The new company seems destined to play a large part in the development of the fisheries of the coast.

Commencing as soon as weather conditions permit, the new company will erect the largest plant for cold storage of fish in the world. At the head of the company as president is Andrew Kelly, of Winnipeg, president of the Western Canada Produce Company; the vice-president is James Carruthers, the Montreal grain merchant; J. W. Stewart, manager of Foley Brothers, the railway contractors, is a director; G. H. Collins is a director and the treasurer, and the managing director is Grier Stewart, formerly a manager of the New England Fish Company, the largest American company operating on the coast. The company is capitalized at $1,500,000, and already enough has been subscribed to go ahead with the building of the plant. Mr. Collins is in the East with the object of visiting New York and Boston to make arrangements with wholesale dealers and he will also visit England and Germany. He was in Ottawa recently consulting with the Department of Marine and Fisheries on questions arising in the deep sea fisheries. When interviewed regarding the outlook for the new company's success, he said:

"All these years the fishing banks of the Northern Pacific have been exploited by American firms doing business from Seattle and Vancouver. The greatest fishing banks in the world are within 50 or 60 miles of Prince Rupert, and we will have the advantage of distance. The southern firms have to steam 1,100 miles to and from the banks and we have only 100 miles. The fish caught are chiefly halibut, but carp, herring, salmon, sole and other varieties are also plentiful. Our plant will have a capacity of six million pounds, and we expect to ship to all parts of the world, Canada, the United States, Great Britain, Germany, Australia, China and Japan.

"Another branch of our business," continued Mr. Collins, "will be new. There are immense quantities of inedible fish caught there which are now thrown back into the sea. We will take these and the offal of other fish and make them into a fertilizer, which will sell for $35 or $40 a ton.

"Our plant should give employment to a fleet manned by at least 2,000 men and our proximity to the banks should enable us to land our fish 30 to 40 per cent. cheaper than the southern companies. Then we gain several days in ocean transportation, so I think the all-Canadian company should win success."

WILL MANUFACTURE CIDER IN CANADA.

English Firm Secured Plant in Nova Scotia and Will Ship to Home Market.

A recent letter by Harrison Watson, Canadian Trade Commissioner in England, contains some interesting information in regard to cider, which will be read with interest by the trade in Canada. Of particular note is the fact that an English firm has secured a controlling interest in a factory in Nova Scotia and will manufacture the beverage there for shipment to England. Mr. Watson writes as follows:

"In connection with some enquiries which were made for an Ontario producer of cider who wished to get into touch with firms on this side who would be prepared to purchase supplies of apple juice for blending and other purposes, it is stated that Canadian shippers are considerably handicapped in competition with American producers in having to pay during the winter months the necessarily heavy cost of inland transportation between Ontario points and Canadian shipping ports. The winter season is the time when importers chiefly require supplies. It is difficult to see how this is to be overcome, in so far that many of the American cider-producing districts are comparatively close to sea ports which are open all the year round, unless Canadian shippers also utilize American ports during the winter. Incidentally, it may be mentioned that there seems to be a considerable demand for imported cider this season, owing to the light crop of apples last autumn in the United Kingdom and on the continent. Several importers would apparently welcome Canadian supplies if they could be laid down here at a price to compete with United States quotations.

"I recently had a conversation with one of the principal English cider manufacturers, upon whose behalf I made some extensive enquiries a few years ago in connection with a proposal which this firm had under consideration for establishing a plant for the production of cider in some part of the Dominion. Negotiations at the time fell through, but since then the firm has been giving the matter attention, and a short time ago sent out a representative to personally look into the whole subject.

"I was informed that as a result the firm has acquired a controlling interest in a plant in the Maritime Provinces, which it is proposed to develop upon a larger scale. It is their intention to produce supplies of juice for shipment to their own factories in England, and also to manufacture cider for the Canadian market, by the employment of the same methods which have acquired a high reputation for their cider in the United Kingdom. I understood that the question of transportation had an important bearing upon their selecting Nova Scotia as the most suitable site for the purpose which they had in view."

LOBSTERS FOR PACIFIC COAST.

Experimental Shipment Sent From Halifax With a View to Propagation.

Several attempts have been made within the past two or three years to transplant lobsters from the Canadian Atlantic fisheries to the Pacific Coast, with but questionable success. It has been thought that not enough care was taken in the previous shipments and another experiment is now being carried out by officials of the Marine and Fisheries Department, the success of which will mean much for the lobster industry in Canada. On Friday, 10th, a shipment of 1,620 live lobsters was made to the Pacific coast, and is expected to reach its destination in about a week.

The lobsters were placed in fifteen specially constructed refrigerator packages. These packages are about four feet square and each contains twelve metal traps. The traps are made in sections, and one lobster was placed in each. On top of the refrigerator is an ice pan and underneath are air spaces through which circulation of air can be maintained, and attached to each is a thermometer. Each lobster is packed in a bed of sea weed. In the car were taken 145 gallons of salt water in jars and casks, and each day the lobsters will be saturated with salt water. The lobsters were specially selected, being caught last week, and they passed direct from the fishermen to the refrigerators. The shipment was made in a special car, provided by the Dominion Express Company, and is in charge of H. A. Cunningham, Superintendent of Fish Culture, Ottawa, and Alex. Finlayson, Inspector Fisheries, Ottawa. These officials are going through to the Pacific coast with the shipment.

On arrival of the shipment at Vancouver, a steamer will take the lobsters on to Victoria, where a special pond has been constructed to receive them. Extensive experiments will be conducted there, and the outcome will be awaited with interest, as promising the transplanting of this valuable Atlantic fishery to the Pacific Ocean.

CANADIAN-MADE LICORICE.

Will Be Manufactured in Quantity in Montreal Shortly.

Licorice is about to be made in large quantities in Montreal. The splendid new factory of the National Licorice Company, Brooklyn, is completed, and the many lines which are turned out at the American factory will be manufactured in Montreal within the next month.

Well located, the new factory certainly is. It is situated on Desjardins Avenue, corner Ernest Street, Maisonneuve. There is a twenty-foot lane at the back, while the company has six feet of property on the remaining side. Consequently, they will be sure of the very best of light at all times. The building is 100 feet by 96 feet, and is equipped with all the latest machinery for use in the manufacture of licorice. Throughout the firm has been governed in building by their experience in the factory in Brooklyn.

E. M. O'Brien, who comes from Brooklyn, has been appointed manager of the Montreal factory. Mr. O'Brien is widely known in the licorice trade, having been in the business for fourteen years. He is getting after the Canadian business in earnest.

J. M. Brayley will continue to act as sales agent for the company in Montreal, as will R. S. McIndoe in Toronto, Wiseman & Ashley in Winnipeg, J. F. Mowat & Co. in Vancouver, and H. S. Daly in St. John, N.B.

AUSTRALIAN DRIED FRUITS COMING.

Prospects Good for Record Season for Raisins and Currants.

The Canadian Trade Commissioner for Australia, D. H. Ross, writing from Melbourne recently, tells of encouraging prospects for a record season in dried fruits in certain sections of South Australia. He says:

The 1908 season promises to give a record in the production of Laxias, Sultanas and currants at the rapidly expanding irrigation settlements at Mildura, Victoria and Renmark, South Australia. From inquiries made, it would appear that the 1908 quotations to Canadian importers will likely be a shade less than last year. The export prices will be fixed in March by a conference of the growers. Special efforts have been made by the Melbourne exporters to secure a much larger outlet in Canada for Australian dried fruits, and first shipments are contemplated by steamer sailing on April 13, and due at Vancouver on May 7.

A LEADING NEW BRUNSWICK GROCER.

D. P. MacLachlan, of Chatham, Takes Active Part in Local and Provincial Politics.

One of the rising business men of New Brunswick is D. P. MacLachlan, whose photograph appears herewith.

Mr. MacLachlan is a son of the late Donald MacLachlan, who in 1860 established a wholesale grocery business under the name, D. MacLachlan, under which it is still run.

The young man became associated with his father in 1878, and with the rapid growth of the town, a retail business was developed, and trade is now done in both wholesale and retail branches.

On the death of his father in 1900, the son became the active head of the business. In the same year he was appointed a Commissioner of the County Almshouse at Chatham, and Secretary of the Board. This institution has the reputation in the Maritime Provinces of being the best conducted of its kind, and many committees from other parts of the Provinces have come to inquire into its working and study its methods of management.

In 1903 Mr. MacLachlan was elected an alderman of the Town of Chatham, in which capacity he served three terms. In 1907 he was elected Mayor by acclamation, which office he still fills.

On March 3rd, last, he was elected on the Opposition ticket for the County of Northumberland to a seat in the Provincial Legislature. This is the party that has just been returned to power by a sweeping majority throughout the Province.

Mr. MacLachlan was married in 1896 to Miss Isabel Edgar, of Chatham. He is a Presbyterian, and has been a trustee of St. Andrew's Church for many years.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Green Fruits Moving Unusually Well—Vegetable Market Active With Prices Easier—Heavy Holy Week Fish Business.

The consumptive demand for green fruits has been heavy during the week. Easter buying is almost as heavy as that of Christmas, the extra good quality of the fruit at present being, no doubt, a stimulating factor. Dealers report satisfactory orders. Prices remain firm all round. Navel oranges continue to monopolize the orange demand. Lemons are steady with increased supplies. The banana season is opening up well. There is not so much talk of higher prices. Pineapples are arriving in well-ripened condition with prices easier.

In the vegetable market the chief feature is the heavy shipments of southern fancy varieties. These arrivals have somewhat depressed prices and thus brought these lines within the reach of the buying public. Considerable declines are noticeable in nearly every variety of southern stuff, such as strawberries, tomatoes, cucumbers, onions, etc.

The past week has been active in the fish market. This week being Holy Week the demand has been particularly heavy and dealers have been kept pretty busy filling orders. Some buyers are still holding back for fresh fish, but the bad storms have delayed shipments. Cod is still scarce as are other lines.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—Business is much better this week, and all lines are in good demand for the Easter trade, although the weather conditions have been unfavorable. Cocoanuts are higher this week, being quoted at $3.75 to $4 per bag. Strawberries are arriving freely and are quoted at 35c per box. They are in good demand. Bitter oranges are also quoted lower, being down to $1.25 per box.

VEGETABLES—Local dealers report a brisk trade this week for the Easter trade, all lines being in good demand. Cabbage is becoming scarce, and is quoted as high as $1.50 per barrel. Turnips are also scarce and higher in price, selling at 75c to 95c per bag. Florida tomatoes are quoted lower this week, being $3.50 to $4.50 per crate. California celery is also lower, selling at $5.50 per crate. Potatoes remain firm in price at $1.05 to $1.10 per bag. Other lines are in ordinary consumptive demand at the old prices.

FISH—There is a very brisk demand for all lines of fish this week, owing to this being Holy Week, and there being three fish days. Fresh haddies, kippers and bloaters are arriving daily. GREEN FRUITS—The market has been exceedingly brisk during the week. Easter buying has been heavy, in fact, almost on a par with that of Christmas. Dealers are highly pleased with the orders received. Prices are not materially changed. A firm feeling is in evidence, but there is little probability of an advance. The first blood oranges of the season arrived during the week and are selling at $2.25 per box. Navels still monopolize the consumptive demand. Lemons are fairly steady. Bananas are in strong demand for Easter. Pineapples are arriving in larger quantities, sound and well ripened, with prices somewhat easier.

VEGETABLES—Business is brisk, particularly in fancy imported lines. Domestic vegetables are a little easier all around. Ontario potatoes have declined 5c. Cabbage and onions remain scarce. Turnips and parsnips are lower and more plentiful. Heavy shipments of southern vegetables are arriving. A car of tomatoes is on the market, with prices much easier. Nearly every other variety is easier, with quotations much lower. The prices enable the general public to buy heavier.

FISH—As anticipated, business has been quite brisk and will keep up during the week. Some buyers are still holding back for fresh fish, but the storms have delayed shipments. Frozen lines are moving well. Smoked fish is fairly active. Cod, halibut and mackerel are in short supply. Haddock is more plentiful. TRADE NEWS OF NOVA SCOTIA

Record Butter Prices—Staple Grocery Markets Steady—Good Apples Abundant—Experimental Shipment of Lobsters to Pacific.

(Special Correspondence to The Canadian Grocer)

Halifax, N.S., April 13.

The feature of the grocery markets last week was an advance in the price of butter. The limit has apparently not yet been reached. Record prices are now asked for any kind of butter, and all available supplies are being bought up. There is an opinion in certain quarters that some persons are trying to make a squeeze in the butter market. It is acknowledged that butter is a scarce article, but a jump of two cents per pound on the prevailing high prices seems to the consumer to be a little too much. The price now asked for choice creamery is from 32 to 33 cents, and even at these prices there is some complaint that the butter is short in weight. Some of the dealers are said to have fairly good stocks of butter on hand, and they are now realizing handsome profits. It is rumored that prices will go still higher, and the indications point likewise. The receipts of dairy butter coming to the market are very light. During the week some new made rolls were marketed, which sold for 30 cents.

As the result of cool weather conditions during the week, the receipts of eggs have very materially fallen off, and the price of the previous week has held firm. The change in the weather has helped the market wonderfully, and saved what a few days ago looked like a big slump. Seventeen cents is the price quoted by the case, and they are plentiful at that.

All staple lines of groceries are very steady. Sugar is unchanged since last report, but molasses is a little stiffer. According to advices received here, Barbados molasses is quoted at 1 to 1½ cents per gallon higher. The schooner Golden Rule, from Barbadoes for St. John, which put in to Yarmouth damaged, this week, has 272 puncheons, 68 hogsheads, and 50 barrels of molasses, and 100 barrels of sugar.

Better quality apples can be purchased at reasonable prices in the local market now than at any period during the present year. Good Greenings, Golden Russets, Nonpareils and Spies are now offered for sale by the dealers, and even some of the auction rooms are handling this class of stock, selling it at private sale. Strange to say, the demand is very light, though the price is within the reach of anyone for good apples at this time of the year. During the week some good Nonpariels sold for $1.50, Greenings about the same, and also Ben Davis, but the other varieties, such as Spies and Golden Russets, command much better prices. First-class Spies are worth from $3.50 to $4.00, and Golden Russets about the same. One reason given for the light demand is that the market has been stocked right along with a poor grade of fruit, and persons who wanted a superior article being unable to obtain it, bought this stock. A commission man who handles a lot of apples says that the growers endeavored to work off the poorest quality of fruit first, and held back the best, and, being unable to market it abroad, are now offering it for sale locally.

Another determined effort will be made to propogate lobsters in the Pacific, and with this object in view the Canadian Department of Marine and Fisheries have sent another shipment to the Coast. A special car with every modern equipment for keeping the fish in good condition, left on Friday for Vancouver. The outcome of this experiment is awaited here with interest, as its success means much for the Pacific.

STUDYING POSSIBILITIES FOR TEA TRADE.

J. Campbell Black, of Brooke, Bond & Co., London, who has been taking a three months' trip through Western Canada, with a view to studying the possibilities of the tea trade, called on The Grocer in Toronto this week on his return. Mr. Black is enthusiastic over the possibilities of business in the West, and will probably make rather favorable reports to his firm in London.

Mr. Black sails from New York on the 20th for Buenos Ayres, and while in South America will study the possibilities for business with Chile and other countries.

OUR NEW BRUNSWICK LETTER

Coasting Trade Opening Well—Declines in Flour and Oatmeal—Grocers Doing Good Seed Business—Large Sugar Business.

Special Correspondence to The Canadian Grocer.

St. John, N.B., April 13, 1908.

With the advent of milder weather the coasting trade has opened up and business is reported somewhat better. A number of schooners have arrived during the past week and some good-sized orders have been shipped to Nova Scotia and along the New Brunswick coast.

Oatmeal declined 25 cents a barrel last week and oatmeal in packages dropped off 25 cents a case.

Star flour is quoted at $5.65 a barrel, which is a drop of 10 cents. Wooden butter dishes have advanced five or ten per cent.

Butter reached a top notch price during the first of last week, 40 cents a pound being asked for creamery. On Wednesday it dropped to 35 cents a pound and as there is a considerable quantity coming in from points along the river now, it will probably continue to decline.

Seeds are being shipped now in large quantities and the retailers are preparing for getting their assortments to the front.

A large amount of sugar is being received now and the jobbers are looking for still higher prices. Both beet and cane sugars advanced again last week, but the local market is unchanged.

The death occurred at St. Martins on Wednesday, April 8, of Cudlip Miller, a local meat dealer. Mr. Miller was one of the oldest and most respected residents of St. Martins. He was born in Germany something more than seventy years ago and came to St. John with his parents while yet a young man. Removing to St. Martins, he engaged in the meat business, which he carried on extensively and in the days of shipbuilding supplied many vessels.

Mrs. Purdy, wife of Hon. D. J. Purdy, the north end grocer, is very critically ill and but slight hope is held out for her recovery.

TEA OUTLOOK IN UNITED STATES.

Richard Wayne Wilson, the veteran writer on trade and industrial matters, who prepared the series of authoritative articles on tea, which, appearing originally in the columns of the New York Tribune, during the spring and summer of 1906, have been so extensively quoted from, and copied by both daily newspapers and by trade journals throughout the country, and which have also served as the basis of much of the tea literature disseminated by great handlers of the Oriental leaf, is an enthusiast on the subject, He believes tea will eventually be accorded in the United States the rank it holds, as a beverage, in the United Kingdom, and that that happy consummation will be reached when the trade has thoroughly learned the necessity for properly stocking tea and for teaching customers the right methods for its use.

Mr. Wilson points to the inroads that Ceylon tea has everywhere made upon the trade of its rivals, as one evidence that his belief is well founded, saying, "The Ceylon planters are practically the sole tea producing interests that have systematically and intelligently undertaken to promote the use of its product. For years they have maintained what might be termed a 'bureau of information' for the United States and Canada; and it is from this that the sellers of tea have learned the necessity for blending it and for so expertly blending it as to secure a cup quality that will exactly suit the climate, the water, and the palates of the people the water, and the palates of the people of a given locality—for example, that a blend that will be adapted to the alkali plains will by no means answer for the alluvial lands ; and it is from this, too, that tea drinkers have learned that no tea is fit to drink that is ignorantly brewed."

MEN WHO SELL THINGS

We have just closed an arrangement whereby we will have the exclusive right to publish in Canada a book for salesmen, by Walter D. Moody, formerly traveling salesman, buyer and general sales manager for a large wholesale house, and now business manager of the Chicago Association of Commerce—the largest body of business men in the world, numbering about two thousand seven hundred members.

Mr. Moody's book is dedicated to the "Commercial Ambassador," and he has written it primarily for the traveling man. It also contains much educational matter for the business man, young and old, and there is a vein of business philosophy running through it that will appeal to any man or boy interested in self-development and a successful future. It is a book every salesman worthy the name will find indispensable.

Mr. Moody has been engaged for a year and a half in compiling these experiences and observations of his life's work in connection with the field of salesmanship as viewed from the standpoint of the traveling salesman, buyer, sales manager and employer, and as this book appeals to all who are concerned in any line of trade or business, it is just the book those in your own line who are engaged in the creative, money-getting side will find most useful and valuable.

The publication will be begun shortly in The Canadian Grocer and will run for several months. Special subscriptions will be taken during the time it is running, at $1.00. Of course, regular subscribers get it without extra charge. We would appreciate very much our readers drawing the attention of commercial travelers, and their clerks, to this announcement. Here are some selections which show the author's vigorous and entertaining style.

The salesman who hopes to win real success must change his negative qualities into positive ones, and then stick to some good reliable house where his chances for growth are assured.

A salesman of experience realizes that ideas —practical methods of selling goods—are of the greatest value, and he also knows that it pays him to search for them.

Time and thought taken in complaining of competition is useless expenditure of energy. It lessens your capacity for the accomplishment of things for which you were employed.

The Salesman goes out and digs up business, while the Order-taker just shambles around, waiting to be fed, like the hippopotamus in the menagerie.

A good salesman must know more about his goods than the man he is selling to knows about them. Knowledge and enthusiasm beat oratory every time. Enthusiasm in a salesman begets enthusiasm in a customer.

The best salesmen any house can have are the salesmen it builds for itself. The old saying, "Salesmen are born, and not made," is the veriest kind of tommyrot in this day of science and progress.

What the world of salesmanship wants is educated enthusiasm. The purest of king's English will secure an audience and hold attention for the salesman anywhere, while slang and short cuts of speech often excite distrust and offend the ear of the truly refined.

CANNED GOODS LABEL QUESTION

The Canadian Situation Discussed by Baltimore "Trade" in Light of U. S. Experience.

The request of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Guild that the Meat and Canned Foods Act be amended so as to allow jobbers to place their own labels on canned goods, which was noted fully in these columns two weeks ago, is arousing considerable interest among the trade in the United States. The Baltimore "Trade," recognized as the organ of the canning and allied industries across the border, reproduced the article from The Canadian Grocer in its last issue and comments on it as follows:

"American canners will recognize in this an old, old story, and the occasion of many hard battles to secure the very position Canadian canners now hold, and which the jobbers of that country are trying to break up.

"The Canadians as a nation are brainy, pushy, progressive men, and it is not likely the canners will permit the jobbers to take away the great advantage they have; an advantage which rightly belongs to the canner. Is there any reason why the canned goods packers should not have full credit for the goods they pack?

"All are familiar with the argument the jobber uses, that he works directly among the retail trade, and through them among the consumers at large, to establish a trade upon a particular brand of goods, and in order to protect himself on these goods he must place his (the jobber's) label on them.

"In one way of looking at this, the jobber is right, but going down deep to the root of the question, is it not the canner who is really responsible for the popularity of the brand—because of the carefulness of his pack? Of course, it is; and this being the case, the canner is rightfully entitled to his name on the goods.

"The one objection we have to the National Pure Food law is that it does not compel every packer to place his name on the goods. There is nothing in the world that will make a common-sensed business man always put out creditable goods, as the care of his own good name. For when a man has lost his self-respect, anything may be expected of him.

"We have long contended for this, and every year finds more and more canners insisting upon having their name appear on their goods; and if Canada has such a law, the Canadian canners should do everything in their power to keep it on the statute-books unchanged. It is the biggest asset they can have.

"The plan which allows the jobber's name to appear also is a very good arrangement and should be satisfactory. It allows the jobber to protect his trade in any special brand, and allows him full play at all canners to do so; for if one canner falls off in the quality or the quantity of his goods, other canners can be used and their goods appear under his (the jobber's) brand. It causes a competition among the canners that is bound to be beneficial to the jobber, and we wonder at the opposition on the part of the jobbers.

"We dearly wish, for the benefit of the entire industry, that such a condition existed in the United States."

GROCERY FACTS

Something About the Goods Handed Over the Counter Every Day.

SOAP AND ITS ORIGIN.

Who invented soap? That this is not a modern convenience is well known. But just when it came into general use is a mystery.

In Biblical times cleansing agents were used. The books of Job and Jeremiah contain the word "soap." But this is merely a convenient use of the word in translation. The Hebrew word "borrith," for which it was substituted, is a general term for cleaning substances. What these substances were is unknown, but were probably little like the modern soap.

Pliny speaks of the invention of soap by the Gauls, who, however, used it only as a sort of pomade or hair dressing. He also refers to the use of both hard soap and soft soap by the Germans. The use of fuller's earth, which has saponaceous qualities, for cleansing purposes, was known to the Romans.

The French word for soap—savon—comes from Savona, France, where it was manufactured. The first manufacture in London is said to have been in 1524, and previously Bristol had supplied it for use in the English cities. According to the historian Sismodi, a soap-maker was included in the retinue of Charlemagne, King of the Franks, at the end of the eighth century.

In the excavation of Pompeii a soap-boiler's shop was uncovered, with soap in it, showing that the making of it was known in the first Christian century.

Pliny, who wrote of the eruption of Vesuvius, which destroyed the two Roman cities in 79 A.D., stated that soap was made from tallow and ashes and that the German soap was the best. Galen also referred to the use of soap.

There are many words of which soap is one of the constituents.

Soap bubbles have formed the innocent amusement of children of all ages, with the ease of making them, their iridescence and the brief period for which they last.

A soap crutch is a crotched stick used for stirring the soap in a kettle.

A soapfish has a soapy skin, hence its name.

The soapnut is the fruit of an East Indian shrub.

A soaplock is a term used in this country in reference to a lock of hair which was formerly frequently worn on the temples and kept smoothly in place by being soaped, and the term has come to mean any lock of hair brushed apart from the rest and kept carefully in place.

The term "soft soap," for soft words of flattery, has been added to the English language, so that it is used in "Tom Brown at Oxford."—Grocers' Review.

NEUFCHATEL CHEESE.

Neufchatel cheese is a French make from pure cream thickened by heat and then pressed in a small mold. They weigh about half a pound each, and when fresh are considered a great delicacy, but when old they acquire an offensive odor from the vegetable growth often observed on them. In shape these cheese are long and round, like small pillars.

The original is produced at Neufchatel-en-Bray, but one kind—an imitation of the French. It is also made in Switzerland. These, however, are not so liquid in form as the "fromage de Brie," which usually contains 10 to 20 per cent. of casein with 40 per cent. of fat.

Another Store-keeper Sued for Damages

Dangerous stove polishes continue to get store-keepers into trouble. The daily papers of Detroit, early this month, report Mrs. A. D. ——— is seeking to recover in the courts $15,000 from Mr. C. Wise store-keepers will keep out of trouble by handling only the stove polishes which are safe in the hands of the user. RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish are made by reliable processes and are absolutely free from dangers of fire or explosion. PUSH THEM.

WARNING!

Crescent BM&Co. TRADE MARK. Brand

SODA-CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.

CANADIAN CANNERS, Limited

Are You a Creator

of desire? That is, do the canned goods which go over your counter result in your customer developing a particular desire for that brand?

That is the Keystone of a grocer's success. Handing out goods which are indifferent in quality will never put your reputation on a high plane.

Care in Buying is absolutely essential—especially in canned goods—and we ask you to put in a trial order for because we KNOW that you can sell it. We KNOW that Old Homestead quality will bring in continuous repeat orders from your customers.

OLD HOMESTEAD BRAND

That is Our Experience.

Our success is built on the supreme quality of Old Homestead goods. Not one can of inferior quality leaves our factory.

Ask Your Jobber

for Old Homestead Brand. If he's a good jobber he carries Old Homestead.

Profitable Goods

Are the goods that are a little better than the others: goods that will make sales where the others won't. Ozo Brand Pickles are good pickles, and show their quality. We have special facilities for turning out the best pickles, and we have made the most of them. For instance, we provide the seed from which the vegetables are grown and so get the best from the start; the cucumbers go straight from the vine to the factory, so that none of the fresh crispness is lost. We make our own vinegar and it cannot be beaten for pickling purposes. It will certainly pay you to specify that you want our goods when ordering pickles.

HOLBROOK'S Worcestershire SAUCE

A bare statement in an advertisement is not convincing unless it can be justified by experience in handling the article advertised. We could take up a good deal of your time in making true statements in praise of this Sauce, but instead we merely ask you to test it for yourself. Your decision will be that it is a Sauce which on first trial must secure permanent users. Its particular and pleasing flavor, free from excessive heat, suggests the blending of many choice ingredients and so tickles the palate that its use becomes essential. This has been the experience in the Old Country where its popularity is ever increasing. The next question which interests you is PROFIT, this will be found to be much better than that obtained on most advertised proprietary lines but an enquiry to

Canadian Manager,
H. Gilbert Nobbs

HOLBROOK'S LIMITED
25 Front St., East
TORONTO

Will bring you full particulars.

If you have anything for sale which a Grocer or General Merchant will be interested in, advertise it in our "Condensed Ad." column. It will bring you good results.

No More 25c. Tea

"It's wonderful what men can do if they try," said a tea traveler, who called to see the Merchant the other day. "I have just returned," said he, "from a territory, where up to the present year the bulk of the tea trade was in an article that retailed at 25c. When I went through on my previous trip I told the different buyers to put up their price to 30c.; the most of them scorned the suggestion. They said it couldn't be done; the people wouldn't pay the difference. However, I pointed out to them that if they wanted to make a reasonable profit, they would be compelled to do this, and that they might as well begin to do it at once. To-day I find that the majority have succeeded in establishing 30c. as their lowest priced tea, and I was quite amused to hear how little opposition they met with in their attempt to do it. A few words of explanation as to why it pays the consumer to pay the new price and how impossible it is to get anything worth drinking at a lower price, and the game was won. There are still, however, a few who think they must do business for nothing, and are continuing to supply a tea at 25c.; but they must eventually abandon this practice, as no man in business to-day can afford to sell an article that does not pay a profit. The day of the 25c. tea is gone and dealers should accept that fact and make the best of it."

I don't know who this traveller is or what firm he represents but I know what he states is correct as my travellers in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia are having just the same experience.——The sale of 25c. tea both in bulk and packets has practically stopped in these Provinces.

A few merchants took the lead and found it so easy others soon followed their example, and my travellers tell me that the consumers seem to pay no more attention to the advance in tea than they do the advances in butter, flour, etc. Why should they?

If you are selling 25c. tea why not show other merchants, who have less backbone, a good example? Make your lowest price 30c. They will soon follow you and you will have the satisfaction and credit of being the leader.

What To Do In May

Hints for the Retail Grocer's Business During Next Month—Make Preparations for Housecleaning and the Summer Season—Opportunity for Good Business in Seeds—Use System in Window Display.

May in the grocery trade is an anticipatory month—a month of preparation for the summer season ahead. The stock on the shelves will be shifted, and around the store a general clean-up should take place. The wide-awake grocer will try to be in the forefront with his spring cleaning, and that will cause him to think of the annual housecleaning going on in every home up and down the country. He will, therefore, put house-cleaning goods forward, and perhaps make an attractive window display of them. Effective pictures can be made with the many time-saving and labor-saving utensils now used about the home, supplemented with an attractive display of soaps, brushes, etc.

Time to Display Seeds.

While madam is superintending the housework, master will want to obtain for the garden some of the flower and vegetable seeds he saw placed invitingly before him as he passed Mr. Progressive Grocer's store on his way home from work. This may be a small matter but the first thing a wide-awake merchant should do is to attract his customer. If he is a shrewd man the getting of custom and keeping it will follow. Flower seeds are now put up in neat packages and they give some color relief set amongst other goods.

The Maple Problem.

Maple syrup and sugar will continue to be in demand this month; and, indeed, maple products, instead of being regarded as a spring line, are being carried by some grocers the year round. The Government's action in putting in force the provisions of the Pure Food Act has relieved the trader of responsibility in guaranteeing these goods, and placed the responsibility where it belongs.

Now that the warm days of summer are being prepared for, the grocer is liable to be wondering over the problem which confronts him with increasing seriousness each year—what to do about maple syrup. There is greater demand for the article each season, and grocers often lose money through carrying stocks bought from farmers over into the summer, with fermentation and consequent losses as the result. What is the matter with buying package goods? There are in Canada to-day many refiners of maple syrup who put up the line in packages which will keep for years in our worst warm weather. It is just as good a year from the date of purchase as it is on the day it arrives. This prevention of fermentation is achieved through the use of hermetically sealed tins and packages. This suggestion should enable grocers not already "wise" to supply their customers with this line during the summer months without running the risk of losing money.

Fruits and Vegetables Coming

Fruits and vegetables are coming in, in increasing quantities from day to day from Bermuda and the Southern States, and these will somewhat take the place of canned goods. Native vegetables, berries and small fruits will not arrive for a month yet. These fresh goods will attract attention, for housekeepers are asking for a change from the food products they have been buying during the winter.

This should not be interpreted to mean that there will be no call for canned goods. True there has been less call for canned goods, especially canned fruits, during the past few months than for the corresponding months in previous years, the people having asked for the more staple lines, and regarded fruits even in cans, much in the line of a luxury. For this condition of affairs we must, to some extent, blame the stringency in the money market. There was not so much work as usual, and, consequently, not so much money to spend.

Prepare for Preserving Season.

Sugar is expected to be in much more demand for preserving purposes this year than last. Reports from the South say fruit is plentiful, and the Canadian prospect, too, is hopeful. Rhubarb will soon be on the market in plenty and will be the first article to be put down, followed closely by pineapples, when the price drops a bit. Berries and the larger fruits will not be called for until later in the season. Some grocers have already stocked-up with sugar and thereby showed wisdom, as market quotations prove.

Warm Weather Trade.

The summer cottages will soon be opening and some of the men in the trade have already received inquiries regarding goods, prices and transportation facilities. Package and canned goods are used much for this purpose, and it might be well to make the windows attractive with various lines of canned goods. Canned meats are expected to be largely called for again this summer. The enactments of the United States Government of the past two years regulating the inspection of meats and meat-packing establishments, as well as the regulations of our own Government, have done much to restore confidence in this line of goods, and the favorable report of the British inspectors enabled one, at least, of the big Chicago houses to renew a contract for tinned meat with the British Government for the army. These canned and packet goods will surely be called for by picnic and excursion parties, which season will open on Empire Day—the first real summer holiday.

The situation in fish undergoes somewhat of a change. From now on the fresh water fish will be more plentiful and will be welcomed as a relief from the frozen lines we have been getting during the winter.

What About the Pastry Department?

Confectionery may have no special season during the month, but there is always a pretty steady demand for sweet meats during the warm weather. Home baking will be discontinued with a consequent larger call for cakes and pastry from the bakery.

Hints on Provisions.

Cheaper prices in butter and eggs should cause more sales to be made in these lines, and the weather should be good for keeping the articles fresh and in good condition. When sending out these goods be sure to make the packages neat and tidy.

There are various other lines which might be brought forward, all depending on locality and the constituency to be served.

A few of the potted plants you have for sale might be placed about the store or grouped in a prominent place. These will give a freshness and brightness to your establishment which is sure to be noticed.

Systematize Your Window Dressing.

A strong factor for attracting trade is the show window. It should be attended to constantly and faithfully, if it is to attract new customers to the store. For the month of May plan some outline of how your windows should be dressed. For the first week you might display house-cleaning articles—tubs, mops, brooms and brushes, surrounded by pyramids or castles of soap. The second week you might lay out canned goods in attractive fashion, after some of the hints given by The Grocer, letting the buying-public know you can supply all their needs at summer resorts, or can take care of their wants for excursions or picnics. The third and fourth weeks bring something new to the attention of the passer-by. In a short time your store will be commented on and your window display looked for.

Supplement this display with a little advertising—judicious and systematic advertising—and see how your business will grow.

What is Happening in the Trade in the Larger Towns and Cities of Canada—Our Own Special Correspondents Tell of New Ideas, Local Conditions, and Business Changes.

CHATHAM.

April 21.—The possibilities of a central delivery system in Chatham will probably be a theme for lively discussion among retailers in the near future.

A Michigander, Mr. Purser, formerly from this vicinity, but now located in a town near Ann Arbor, set the ball rolling last week by describing a system just inaugurated in his own town about eight weeks ago, and which was a close copy of one carried on very successfully for the past two years in Ann Arbor. He reports that the system works like a charm.

The system is run by the grocers themselves, each subscribing $250. They own their own central stables. The city is divided into twelve or thirteen routes, with central stables for each route. Wagons are sent out to the stores and all their orders, no matter what the destination, are taken to a central station, whence they are transferred to the various routes. There are five deliveries daily, all the wagons starting out simultaneously, and it is claimed the system works perfectly. There is a charge of 3c. per basket for delivering for subscribers, and 4c. per basket for non-subscribers.

Wm. Anderson, the new president of the local branch of the Retail Merchants Association, has personally expressed himself strongly in favor of such a system as above outlined for Chatham. He believed that it would prove cheaper than the present methods. At present the individual grocer has to maintain one or more horses, drivers and rigs, and even at four cents per basket, the cost of the new system would be less. In addition, more accurate and systematic deliveries could be ensured and the public would become accustomed to deliveries at fixed hours, and would as a result be educated to time their shopping accordingly.

Mr. Anderson expresses a desire to learn whether any such system is in operation in this country, in a city of Chatham's size. The results of such an experiment would prove of interest not only to grocers here, but elsewhere.

Following the attempt to rob the Leamington post office last week, a couple of robbers swooped down on Wheatley last Friday night. They first broke into Dobbyn's store, securing $4 in cash and two revolvers. Later they visited the general store and bakery of Jas. Reynolds, securing $12 in cash and two cheques. When surprised by the proprietor, they exchanged a fusilade of revolver shots with him before beating a retreat. Detectives are now on their trail.

The recurrence of so many robberies during the past month or more, particularly in Essex, is not viewed with any great amount of pleasure by rural and village merchants, and the failure of the authorities so far to effect any captures hasn't any tendency to tranquillize them. Merchants think that in a civilized country with an up-to-date police and detective force, the law could move less lumberingly than it does. The results of the efforts of the authorities in the Wheatley case, the most daring of the robberies on record, are being watched with interest.

D. B. McDonald, of Tilbury, has sold his interests in the butcher business of McDonald & McHardy to his partner, Jas. McHardy, and will leave shortly for London.

Leon Larvie of Belle River has made great improvements to his butcher shop and has opened a fine grocery store in connection.

The stock and assets of R. P. Adams of Tilbury, who recently made an assignment, were sold by public auction last Saturday. Mr. Adams' father-in-law, Arthur Cowan, purchased the business and will resume at the old stand.

A Leamington report states that the dullness of the tobacco market there is still unrelieved. A few crops have been bought, but the bulk of last season's crop is still in the hands of the growers. The leading buyers don't know when their companies will take the tobacco off the farmers' hands and have instructed the growers to grow no crop this year, as there will be no sale for it next fall. The farmers in the vicinity of Leamington are turning their attention to growing strawberries for the canning factory.

Geo. A. Stacey, the King Street West grocer, had a novel window display last week. It consisted of nothing more nor less than eggs. A few months ago a grocer would hardly have dared to display his eggs so prominently for fear of robbers breaking in and stealing the precious articles. Mr. Stacey's window was simply designed. The bottom, sloping down toward the front, was sprinkled with sawdust, which formed a background and helped to hold the eggs in place. The latter were so arranged as to spell the word "eggs." The window is one which, while unusual, must inevitably attract a second glance.

The local branch of Bradley & Son have just put up a handsome new sign with the firm name over their place of business.

M. Favata, the Italian fruit dealer on Queen St., has extended his show window facing on that street to the full depth of the store.

SEES THE GROCER EVERYWHERE.

Here's a tribute to The Grocer's circulation in the west, which came to us from Regina this week. F. Creed, of the F. F. Dalley Co., Hamilton, who is traveling in the west, writes in his brisk style :—"Just in from the north. Have seen The Grocer everywhere."

GALT.

April 20.—The trade in Galt is improving considerably, and grocers state that during the last two weeks the volume of business was almost equal to that of the same period in former years. The industrial situation is improving rapidly, and the outlook is brighter than for some time. "Give us a good crop in the West," said one merchant, "and we will be busier than for years past."

The Easter market was largely attended, and, as a consequence of the large demand for eggs, the price was advanced to 16 cents per dozen. Butter also advanced to 30 cents per pound, although it could be obtained from the grocers at 28 cents.

A number of the local clerks are again agitating for a half holiday during the summer months. The clerks made an attempt to secure the holiday last year, but owing to the objection of a couple of the large merchants, the attempt failed. It will probably be more successful this year, as the clerks seemed determined to settle the question once and for all. Surely during the summer months the clerks are entitled to one afternoon off, especially when they are confined to the store every Saturday evening, and also on nights before holidays.

The largest awning in town is that which has recently been erected for John Sloan, grocer. It is of the latest crank design and covers the whole front of his large store.

Allan Deans, of the Red Front, was dressing his window when your correspondent dropped in this week, and in response to an inquiry as to how often in his opinion windows should be dressed, he replied that windows should be changed twice a week, at least. "A newly dressed window attracts the attention of the passerby once, at least, and sometimes twice. On these occasions the passerby will probably stop and examine your display, but the third time of passing the contents of the window have become ancient history, and attract no notice. I figure it that practically the entire buying population of Galt passes the store about once in three days, and for this reason I make it a point to change my windows at least twice a week. So regular has this become that the passersby who come down town probably twice a week, can always depend upon seeing something new in the window of the Red Front. "I also make it a point when changing my windows to put in something entirely different. A window can be well dressed with very few articles if these are neatly and tastefully arranged so as to present an attractive appearance. Crowded windows do not attract the same amount of attention as in cases where only a few articles are prominently displayed."

*Contributions are invited from merchants, grocery travelers or clerks in places where there is not a regular correspondent of this paper.

The price of sugar has advanced in Galt, as elsewhere, but as yet the advance to the purchaser has not been very large.

Fresh lettuce all winter is the record of Mr. John Sloan's grocery. Mr. Sloan thinks that this record cannot be equalled by any grocery in a Canadian town.

Allan Deans spent the Easter vacation in Stratford.

The demand for fish has fallen off to a very considerable extent.

GEORGETOWN, P.E.I.

April 18.—Notwithstanding the very backward condition of the weather during the past week or so, business on the whole has been most satisfactory. Large orders are being daily received from lobster packers for cook house supplies.

The agent of the Quebec Steamship Company has received word that the S.S. Campana will leave Montreal on her first trip to Prince Edward Island ports on Monday, April 20th, ice permitting.

William Stewart and Hillard Muttart, of the firm of Sinclair & Stewart, Summerside, left Friday for Montreal and Toronto.

W. W. Jenkins, of the firm of W. W. Jenkins, Son & Co., of this town, is in Ottawa on a business trip.

Black oats are selling at forty-seven cents per bushel, and white at forty-six cents. Potatoes are bringing thirty to thirty-five cents and turnips sixteen cents. Butter is very scarce—never was so scarce—and is selling at thirty to thirty-two cents. Eggs dropped to fourteen cents, but are up again to fifteen cents. Chickens are very scarce and bring $1.15 per pair.

Mr. Davis, formerly in the employ of W. A. Poole & Co., Lower Montague, leaves this week on return to his home in England.

Miss Pearl Lavers has taken a position in the store of W. W. Jenkins, Son & Co.

HAMILTON.

April 21.—Our Saturday Easter market was the largest this year. Everything in profusion, lettuce, rhubarb, onions, etc., and a large supply of butter and eggs. Before the selling got fairly started it began to rain heavily and prices became easier. Everybody expected to see a great slump in the price of eggs, but the commission men, seeing the danger and knowing that a low price would demoralize the egg business for weeks, very considerately bought up everything in sight, and the price did not go below 18c., which action has benefitted the city grocers to an extent they possibly hardly realize. Good dairy butter still remains around 30c. and is likely to stay there until the grass comes. Maple syrup is plentiful and no person remembers to have seen the quality as good before.

KINGSTON.

April 21.—Frank Samuels, who traveled for W. G. Craig & Co. for some time, has severed his connection and joined the staff of Galbraith & Son, Montreal. Frank will get an insight into the tea business and learn how to draw trade and push the golden tip.

Tom, the grocer, picked up an invoice and read, "30 days less 2 per cent." "Now," said he, "this invoice is dated April 1st, and the Shedden Co. rolled off the goods April 10th, so that in reality I am only getting twenty days, instead of thirty. This is one of the many ways that retail merchants suffer."

"What did that lady ask for,?" said the retired army officer who comes in occasionally to have a chat with the knight of the tin scoop. "Why," said the grocer, with a sunny smile, "she asked for a pound of 'Mooney's sodgers britches.' She lisps, you know, and that is as near as she can come to saying soda biscuits."

Bert Robertson, son of B. W. Robertson, wholesale grocer, and traveler for the house, is spending his Easter holidays in New York. Bert, though young, is one of our city fathers.

Easter week brought an unusually large and eggs dropped in price as low as 15c a dozen. The grocers did a fair trade, but there is very little money any more in our business. Everyone wants to run a grocery, and a few dollars and credit will do it. Some suggest a license as a remedy, and applying the funds to making good roads. I am sorry to say we have the worst roads of any city in Canada, but we hope for a big change this coming season, as the road question is receiving attention.

Kenneth H. Munro is well pleased with the hold Jacobs' Irish biscuits have taken. They should have a permanent ad. in The Grocer, where I first heard of them, and sent a trial order and introduced them.

I wrote two letters to a firm who put an ad. in The Grocer lately. They are in Montreal and they did not have the courtesy to reply. I guess they thought I was no good.

Larry Murphy looks well after his trip to Ireland. I dropped in to have a chat with him but he was too busy so I left. He didn't bring the Irish lassie with him as prophecied by Jim, the grocer.

Gunns, Limited, of Toronto, ship a lot of meat to Kingston, and the quality is good.

The city is literally flooded with maple syrup, which is being offered at 75c an Imperial gallon.

Fred. Vanluven is not going to Toronto as reported. He is not worrying about any change of climate, but wants a few weeks rest, and now, that he has disposed of his stock, is the accepted time.

"Say," said a grocer on the market, "grocers' wagons are a few hundred pounds heavier than they should be." The wagons with small wheels in front are popular for the convenience of making short turns, but on the straight road the large wheels are better and run smoother. James Laturney is making a wagon with all four wheels same size, with patent gear. The hind wheels turn and follow in the track of the front ones and short turns can be made.

Tops on grocery rigs look nice, but break up the gear on a wagon in no time and have to be discarded, except for paved roads. Will some of the other correspondents say something regarding these vital matters, and say less about butter and eggs and grocers breaking legs and such.?

GUELPH.

April 20.—W. H. Fielding is by long odds the leader in some things in this city this year. He had both of his windows handsomely dressed for Easter, and both were so good your correspondent took photos of them for The Grocer. One had hams, bacon and eggs, with a pair of live rabbits, and set off nicely with Easter lilies. The other was a fruit display, including oranges, lemons, bananas, pineapples, strawberries and ripe tomatoes, set off with carnations. They drew the crowds on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The flowers and rabbits caused nearly everyone to stop and admire, and the price tickets did the rest.

Geo. Williams also had a fine display of Easter novelties, which were nicely arranged and were greatly admired. J. A. McCrae & Son also showed Easter novelties and did a good business. Peter Anderson had two good windows of dinner sets, fancy china, while Jackson & Son, J. C. Chittick, A. Groom, J. C. Hadden and Little & Costigan had nice displays of general groceries.

Benson Bros. were too busy putting in a nice new front, making their one large window into two smaller ones, with the door in the centre, and also giving the store inside a general new appearance to be in the running this year.

C. T. Hicks, the Paisley street grocer, has purchased a fine fancy driver and, sorry to relate, the old one objected to the change vigorously and kicked the new one so severely that it will need a few weeks to recover.

Jimmy Gow, the Ontario street grocer, has received a very tempting offer for his fine black horse.

There are still complaints coming in of some of the canned goods, such as corn, peas and tomatoes, not being up to the standard.

This has been a record year for maple syrup in this section, but to be fair, some of the samples obtained down east have surpassed any of our local samples and are a credit to the new Government Inspection Act. Some seem to think the reason is that the trees in this section are getting too old.

The friends of Adam Armstrong, grocer, of Fergus, will regret to learn of a very painful accident which befell him going to a sale in a rig the other day. He had his feet hanging out and one leg got caught between the rig and a pile of ice and snow, twisting the tendons very severely. He is around now on crutches.

Peter Anderson has the neatest and cleanest grocery store in Guelph and he may well be proud of the fact.

J. C. Chittick has had the shelving and window of his store refitted, which is a great improvement.

Greg. Foltz, the Elora road grocer, has his store all beautifully furnished with glass-fronted shelves and mirrored windows.

The new permanent roadway on Wyndham street, has been started, and while temporarily hard on business in that section, will be a great improvement. The telegraph and telephone wires are to be put underground, which will do away with all those unsightly poles. This is another bouquet for the Merchants' Association.

The very unfavorable weather on Saturday interfered with business to a great extent, but still a good trade was done. The Easter Saturday is generally one of the biggest of the year. Eggs got firmer in price and from 13c to 15c was paid. First-class butter was also scarce at from 27c to 30c a lb. There was a small supply of chickens at from 15c to 17c a lb. Other produce remained at about the usual prices. In comparing the prices of 1908 with 1878—30 years ago—there is not such a vast difference evident. Clover seed is the most noticeable, being $10 a bushel dearer. Butter and eggs are worth just twice as much. Chickens, also, are just double, but the other prices do not show much difference.

EDMONTON.

April 18.—There has been considerable activity in both the retail and wholesale grocery trade in Edmonton during the past few weeks. Owing to the large amount of railway construction on the C.N.R., G.T.P. and C.P.R. near Edmonton this year, hundreds of men are flocking to the city daily. As a result, business is very active in every line and the grocers as well as other merchants are feeling the benefit. Orders from the smaller grocery stores from the surrounding towns are pouring in on the wholesalers. Everybody is optimistic and collections are much easier, the smaller tradesmen meeting their obligations promptly. With the present prospects of an early and bountiful harvest there is every prospect that the season of 1908 will eclipse all the former records in the growth and development of the City of Edmonton and the surrounding district.

One regrettable feature in connection with the market trade in Edmonton is the absence of a suitable market building. This has been the complaint of both the buyer and producer for some time, and although the matter has been discussed by the council and several suggestions made, nothing has been done as yet.

J. R. Wilson, of Toronto, superintending agent for Lipton's teas in Canada, was in the city this week on a business trip.

A new kind of oats, known as Garten's Regenerated Abundance Oats, will be introduced into the Province of Alberta this year, and those farmers who wish to change their seed oats will be given an opportunity to do so. The Department of Agriculture of the Province has secured 1,500 bushels of these oats for distribution in the Province, and all those wishing to secure some of this seed should make application at once.

LONDON.

April 21.—Wholesale houses report trade fair and payments on the whole satisfactory. The prospects are still considered good, the belief being held that as soon as country roads get into good shape orders will come in more freely. The last advance in the price of sugar has set dealers wondering where this sort of thing is going to end. Teas are very firm, an advance of ½d to 1d being recorded the past week for fine qualities. Ordinary teas are expected to go higher. All other staples are firm. Retail trade in the city continues very fair.

The investigation into the affairs of the defunct wholesale firm of Laird, Kerrigan & Co., so far as it has gone, reveals the fact that the books were kept in a very slipshod manner and that the office management was far from efficient. What the final outcome of the quest will be, no one seems to know.

Mr. Barkwell, auditor for the D. S. Perrin Company, who has been in poor health of late, is about to leave on an extended trip throughout the Canadian west with the view of recuperating. On Saturday his fellow employes surprised him at the offices by presenting him with a handsome gold clock, as an expression of their esteem for him.

As a result of the new tobacco tax and uniform stamp, London is likely to lose five cigar factories, in addition to the Tuckett tobacco works, which has already left the city, throwing fifty men out of work. The King Buffalo Cigar Company has made a voluntary assignment in favor of its creditors.

It is said that local butchers, owing to the general advance in the price of young cattle, will shortly raise the price of the higher grades of meat. Some have advanced prices already and others are expected to follow suit.

Armstrong's grocery, at the corner of Richmond and Maple Streets, has changed hands, J. Peaslee being the new proprietor.

A deputation of the Retail Grocers' Association waited on the twenty-pounds-for-a-dollar grocers during the past week, and it is said succeeded in convincing them of the error of their way of doing business.

NEWCASTLE, N.B.

April 18.—Wm. Corbtt, jr., who has been conducting a grocery business here for the last seven years, has entered into partnership with Wm. Stymest, the business being enlarged. They will carry a full line of groceries and provisions, and some side lines. A cash business will be done.

The business conducted by the Rennes Bridge Lumber Co., will henceforth be run on strictly cash lines.

Charles Mugerall, general grocer, Chatham West, reports a steadily growing business. Starting in a very small way eight or ten years ago, he has now one of the largest stores in Nelson.

KENTVILLE, N. S.

April 18.—One feature this Eastertide was the demand for better class goods, all classes seeming to demand the best going. The call for best fruit and confectionery is growing, and grocers are compelled to carry good-sized stocks if they want to hold their trade.

Although the spring is backward, it is no great drawback, as the fruit trees are safer to bloom not too early, and so far they have come through the winter in fine shape.

What we need most is, for the people of Ontario to come down and visit us and see what a summer pleasure resort this is and get acquainted with our people. The businessmen might find it would add to their business relations and increase their orders. It is time some of them knew a little more about Nova Scotia.

At a meeting of the Board of Trade the other evening, when the business of the recent Horse Show was being concluded, in tendering a vote of thanks to the committee and Press, the name of M. G. De Wolfe was specially mentioned as having taken a particular interest in the show.

ADVANCE IN RATES.

Wages in the mechanical departments of The Grocer have increased 55 per cent. in the last nine years, and in an agreement made some months ago with five different unions employed in our offices. further increases will have to be given. In addition to that, our editorial and other staffs have grown enormously. in the salaries paid and in the number employed. To-day the editorial staff of The Grocer is larger than any other weekly paper of any kind in Canada, or of any grocer paper in the world. The latter may seem, on the face of it, an absurd statement, Canada being so much smaller in population, but it is nevertheless true. All but one or two of the seventy or eighty grocer publications in the United States are merely organs of some one jobbing or manufacturing house. The others are handicapped by the reputation these illegitimate papers give to them as a class, and they cannot afford to give their readers the high-class publication that the trade in Canada receive. They circulate only in their immediate neighborhood. The Canadian Grocer covers the entire Dominion. In Great Britain there are two good papers which are a credit to the trade, but, having a smaller field to cover and fewer interests demanding information, they do not require the organization the Canadian Grocer has.

There are probably more failures in the publishing business than in any other, probably because so much of the cost of getting out a paper is wages. According to the census returns, a greater percentage of the cost in the publishing business is paid in wages than in any other business in Canada and it requires staying power, sometimes years of it, to get a newspaper on its feet, but once it is there and the business grows, the percentage of profit is greater. This has been the position of The Canadian Grocer. While our expenses have grown enormously, it has hitherto not been necessary to increase the circulation and advertising charges, excepting in the case of special issues, because of the great growth in our business, equalling about 400 per cent. in ten years, and lower overhead expenses. The latter, which include rent of our various offices, taxes, insurance, etc., foremen's and managers' wages, subscription agents traveling everywhere in Canada, and many other charges, are distributed over and shared by our nine other papers. They have helped very materially to overcome the increased cost of getting out the paper. Each paper has, of course, its own exclusive staff of editors, correspondents and contributors.

We have during the past year made many improvements editorially, and have several others under way which will still further materially strengthen the paper. These, combined with the increase in wages referred to, make it necessary for us to advance our advertising rates this year, and a further increase next year, making our present page rate of $600 a year $800 on the 1st June, and $900 on the 1st June next year.

Even on this basis, the rates will be very much lower than papers of similar standing in the United States and Great Britain. That our rates have not been highly remunerative is proven by the failure of more than a dozen papers established in Canada to serve the foodstuffs' trade in the last twenty years. In fact, the complaint of other publishers is that we give too much for the money and do not give them a fighting chance. Our aim is to put The Grocer on a 7 per cent. dividend paying basis and spend everything over that on improvements. We are constantly on the lookout for good writers, who know what is accurate news of vital interest to business men, how to get it and present it in the briefest form. We have some good features in store for our readers. which will be introduced in the not far distant future, if the business continues to grow as it has in the last few years.

STREET RAILWAY CARTAGE IN MONTREAL.

A plan which is somewhat novel in its conception has been promulgated in a resolution which has been presented to the City Council by the Montreal Board of Trade, which it is hoped will relieve the situation and hasten a return of normal conditions. The resolution which has been addressed to the City Council, requests them to grant to the Montreal Street Railway the power to build sidings where necessary and use their lines to transport freight from the warehouses to the wharves and railway sheds. It has been proposed that the largest amount of this work be done at night in order not to interfere with the passenger traffic. The serious incompetancy of the cartage facilities in Montreal has long been a source of annoyance to the business men of the city, and it is hoped that this innovation may result in a solution of the difficulty. However, in any case, the business men of Montreal have displayed their faith in the idea sufficiently to importune the City Council to grant the Montreal Street Railway the necessary privileges as set forth in the following resolution:

> "Resolved, that the Council of the Montreal Board of Trade hereby advocate to the City Council that an arrangement should be made with the Montreal Street Railway Company, whereunder, with proper safeguards for the rights and interests of the city, that the company would be permitted to carry freight in Montreal, due provision being made therein that such carriage of freight should not interfere with the passenger service. That because it is not desirable that heavy freight should be carried through the leading residential and shopping thoroughfares, the City Council should reserve to itself the right to approve the routes on which the freight cars should operate."

It will be observed that this resolution, if acted upon by the City Council, is sufficiently comprehensive to protect the rights of the citizen, and not in any way interfere with the fundamental purpose of the system, whilst, on the other hand, if successful, will render valuable and much needed assistance to the shipper.

OLD CANNED FOODS ACT REPEALED.

At the resumption of the House of Commons after the Easter holidays, on Tuesday, Hon. Sydney Fisher's bill to repeal the old Canned Foods Act, which has never been put in force, came up.

Mr. Fisher explained that the old act conflicted with certain features of the act passed last session, particularly in regard to local inspection.

Mr. Borden and other members of the Opposition pointed out that under the old act the local consumer was protected, and thought that to repeal it would remove a safeguard as to the purity of food.

Mr. Fisher claimed that the question of inspection of canned foods for local consumption was one which should be left to the provincial authorities to deal with. The existence of the old act had led to confusion with regard to marking.

The bill was reported to the House and passed.

Following this Mr. Fisher moved the second reading of his bill to amend the meat and canned foods act of last year. Section 11 of the act placed under the operation of the statute only such factories as were declared to be so by the Minister. The amendment proposed to repeal that clause and to substitute the provision that the Governor-in-Council might, on application of the owner, exempt any establishment from the operation of the act.

Mr. Kemp, of East Toronto, inquired as to the effect the act would have in regard to the use of private brands. Some wholesale merchants, he thought, who had been selling canned foods for many years, had worked up and advertised a private brand. They objected to having to put the name of the packer on their cans, and contended that their own guarantee in many cases was better than the guarantee of the packer, and that it destroyed the value of their private brand when they had to put the name of the packer on.

Mr. Macpherson proposed an amendment which he thought would meet the point raised by Mr. Kemp. It was to the effect that the merchant first purchasing from a packer should be permitted to put his name instead of the packer's on the can.

Mr. Fisher saw no objection to that amendment, which he believed was strongly favored by the wholesale trade.

The bill passed through committee, and now stands for third reading.

NEW FIRM OF FRUIT JOBBERS.

An office has been opened on Front St., Toronto, this week by F. L. Sanna, who represents the Cuneo Importing Co. and the Banana Distributing Co., of New York.

The firm will bring in large quantities of bananas and also Malaga grapes and dispose of them among the trade in Toronto and vicinity. A. F. Spada will be the city representative.

MR. CARSLEY BETTER.

John Gibb Carsley, president of the Ozo Company, Montreal, is at his desk again after a severe attack of la grippe, which kept him away from his work for several days.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST

Wheat Markets Show More Strength—Increased Interest in Raising Live Stock Real Estate Resumes Activity.

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Winnipeg Correspondent.

The short week in the wheat market seems to have brought with it a tendency to higher prices, though whether this will be continued is difficult to say. When the market opened Saturday morning, after the Friday holiday, there was news of abundance of rain in the southwest, where drouth was supposed to be working havoc, but instead of the market going down on this news, it advanced quite sharply on the estimated world shipments for Monday, which were only 6,750,000. No reference was made to the fact that Argentine had two holidays during the week in which no wheat was shipped. Russian shipments were reported very low, as were also Australia and India, with a good big decrease in Americans. Wheat on passage also showed a marked decrease. If there had been markets from Britain and the continent there would probably have been less marked influence from these shipments. The local market was firm with a good wide fluctuation and a moderate demand only, export trade being again very light. It is one of the significant facts that although there are 12,000,000 bushels of grain of all sorts at Fort William and Port Arthur, up to Friday night charters had only been written for about four million. A number of boats have not written charters for their first trip as yet and if reports are correct, practically none have been chartered for a second trip. Statistically wheat is very strong but actually it seems quite the reverse and there are many anxious holders of long wheat in Winnipeg that was bought at fancy prices last fall. All season long it has been a market that few dared go short on, and as has been remarked before it is the usual unsatisfactory fag end of a short crop. Returns show that there is not more than 2,000,000 bushels in country elevators and as every farmer in the country is busy seeding, receipts are very light and will be until after the crop is in.

The weather has been ideal for seeding for almost the entire week, though Saturday was too windy to be good. However, the work of seeding has been pushed rapidly in all directions and the seed bed could hardly be better, though in a few sections in Saskatchewan it has been too dry. Two light showers have fallen through the week, but no general rain is needed until after the seed is in and then it cannot come too soon.

There has been a small but perceptible advance in the price of fat cattle during the week, though no dealer is ready to quote higher figures. The fact is that a number of carloads of fattened stock have changed hands at some country points at figures as high as $4.75 per cwt., while on the other hand dealers have been worried with shipments of so-called fat cattle that are not worth 2½c. There is a limited movement in export steers already; and the past week witnessed a notable departure, in that a couple of carloads of hogs were sent east. So far as could be learned this is the first time that an attempt has been made to export hogs, as there has never been enough for home consumption. As far as that goes present receipts are below requirements and it is a little difficult to understand what this shipper is after. The fact remains that the hogs were shipped.

One of the indications of the increased interest in the live stock raising is the number of inquiries being received by prospective breeders with reference to the sales of foundation stock, both at Winnipeg and Calgary, to be held next month. Old breeders are looking out, but there is evidently a decidedly increased tendency to go into mixed farming and to start right by getting pure-bred males. Those interested in the promotion of these sales seem to feel confident of remunerative prices and as the winter has been so exceptionally mild stock of all ages is in prime condition.

Two things of significance to the farming and ranching world have been announced this week. The first is the intention of the Gartons Limited to open a house in Winnipeg and as a preliminary to that to make a large exhibit at the leading fairs during the summer, beginning with the Dominion at Calgary in June.

These noted breeders of plants as well as growers of seeds have had their eyes on this western country for some time and the youngest brother of the partnership, T. R. Garton, has just concluded his third visit to the Canadian west during the past twelve months. He has been making a close study of climate and conditions and has sent home a number of samples of the soil for analysis. The larger portion of the seed oats brought from England by the Dominion Government were secured either from this firm or are of varieties propogated by them. These are known as the Regenerated Abundance oat and are an extremely fine sample. The Gartons make the claim that the oats bred by them, in addition to being larger, more hardy and more prolific than the varieties usually grown in Canada, will also produce meal of a very distinctly higher food value than the ordinary oats. If this is true, and there seems no reason to doubt it, it would be well for manufacturers of rolled oats to keep their eyes open for the sections of the country to which these oats are going and be prepared to buy up the crop in those sections at harvest time.

The other matter, which is of immediate interest to cattle men is the proposed new regulations of the Dominion Government as regards dipping for mange. The rule that has been followed for several years is compulsory dipping of all range cattle within two months and in a solution especially approved by the Government. Now, however, this rule is not to be enforced, the cattle man may dip his stock in any mixture he likes, all that is required of him is to have cattle with a clean bill of health when the inspector calls. A number of practical cattlemen will be put on as range riders, and these will work under a veterinary district inspector. If after a reasonable time cattle are found undipped and with the mange, then the Government will dip the cattle in the sulphur and lime solutions which is recommended by the department. The plan of letting the rancher do his own dipping, how, and in what he likes, should simplify matters considerable for the ranchmen. Cattle are in fine condition, it will be no hardship for them to be dipped early this season if they show any indications of mange, and as there are probably 350,000 cattle which require dipping, more or less, to be able to spread it over a longer period is very much in the interests of the cattlemen.

The real estate market has been fairly active during the week and a notable feature has been the inquiry for market gardens. This is much more active than it was at the same time last year, the early season as well as the good prices for vegetables evidently being stimulating factors.

Another department in which real estate is more active than was at all looked for is the purchase of houses. Of course, house property has come down somewhat in price. There was considerable building on small capital last year and holders have found it necessary to make sales at considerably lower figures than last year. The best indication of there being money in the country is the way in which any bargains of this kind are taken up and the very fair cash payment that is regularly made on them. House property was too high last year and the year before, and now that it is more normal it looks like a good investment to people who formerly would not touch it. There is also a very considerable amount of English capital seeking investment in this class of property.

To sum the western situation up in a single sentence, "It looks mighty good to me."—H.

CANADIAN DIES IN THE EAST.

Had Developed Canada's Export Trade With China, and Made a Mark in the Orient.

The death was announced by cable on April 15th, from Hong Kong, China, of A. H. Rennie, a Canadian who had made his mark in the east. The deceased was born in Hamilton, Ont., where his boyhood was spent, and where he received a thorough business education. At an early age Mr. Rennie went west, settling in the then village of Fort Garry and growing up with the place.

Twenty years ago he went to Hong Kong as the representative of Wilcox Co., Portland, Ore., then the largest wheat shippers on the continent. Leaving that concern, he established the Hong Kong Milling Co., which is now the largest establishment of its kind in the east, and which was the first concern to take Canadian flour to the Orient.

During the time Mr. Rennie had lived in China he had become a multi-millionaire. It is only a short time since press despatches announced a gift from him of $150,000 to Hong Kong University. In appreciation of his efforts for uplifting the British race in Hong Kong, Mr. Rennie was some years ago made a member of the colonial government.

Mr. Rennie was a brother of D. M. Rennie, at one time with Eby, Blain & Co., Toronto, and was for a time interested in the wholesale grocery business in Hamilton. He was married 25 years ago to Miss Florence Mowat, daughter of Mrs. John Mowat, Brockville. The late Mr. Rennie was about 50 years of age.

LARGE DELIVERY IN GLASGOW.

Twenty-three Lorry Loads of Coffee Attract Attention on City Streets.

The photograph and description of the record delivery of starch mentioned in the Grocer some two weeks ago has attracted considerable comment. In connection therewith the story of a somewhat similar delivery in Glasgow recently is sent in by Rose and Laflamme, Montreal, who are agents for "Camp" coffee, the article mentioned. The item is clipped from a recent issue of the Glasgow Daily Mail. "Those who were in Argyle Street, yesterday, about midday, witnessed a unique spectacle, and one which held their attention for some time. Even the policemen on points duty, accustomed to the constant streams of traffic, were surprised.

"One after another in a procession which extended for the greater part of the thoroughfare from the Cross to Union Street, came 23 lorries laden with boxes of "Camp" coffee. They had come from the works of Messrs. R. Paterson & Sons, and were being conveyed to the docks for shipment to various ports in England and Ireland.

"Had they been allowed to pass the crossings together other traffic would have been suspended for about ten minutes; but the constables so regulated the traffic that the lorries passed along in groups. Nevertheless, they made a striking display—something reminiscent of the carters' parade, only more practical—and the familiar red and blue trade marks on the boxes must have emphasised in the minds of those in the vicinity the popularity of Camp coffee.

"'What army is this to feed' asked a bystander to one of the lorrymen who was waiting until the crossing traffic had passed. 'Oh, the greatest of all armies,' was his reply—'the British public.'

"Then the policemen gave the signal, and the lorryman went laughingly on his way."

L. E. Geoffrion of L. Chaput Fils et Cie. Harbor Commissioner has left on a trip to the United States where he will visit various seaport cities with a view of obtaining new ideas which may be incorporated in the anticipated improvements on the Harbor.

DEATH OF INSPECTOR KELLY.

Was for some years a Toronto Grocer, Latterly Inspector of Weights and Measures.

There passed away on Monday last, at his apartments, 70 Bond Street, Toronto, Daniel Kelly, J.P., Inspector of Weights and Measures for the city. Five years ago Mr. Kelly sustained a stroke of paralysis, and a month ago was carried home unconscious, suffering from a second stroke. From that time he gradually sank until his death on Monday.

Daniel Kelly was born in Belfast, Ireland, in 1840, and was educated there at King's College. Coming to Canada in 1854 he first settled in Prescott, and in 1872 moved to Toronto. For some years he kept a grocery and liquor store at King and Sackville Streets. He always took a great interest in politics, and for a time was connected with the Customs Department. Since 1896 he has been Inspector of Weights and Measures for the city of Toronto. Mr. Kelly leaves a widow, four sons and three daughters.

DEATH OF J. R. KIRKWOOD.

It is with feelings of sincere regret that we are obliged to record the sudden death on Saturday of J. R. Kirkwood, who was on the staff of S. H. Ewing & Son, Montreal.

Mr. Kirkwood was born in Montreal in 1836 and most of his life has been passed in Montreal. He was educated in the public schools and subsequently engaged in business for himself as a grain merchant. This he abandoned to accept a position with S. Ewing and on the reorganization of the business in 1897 as S. H. Ewing & Son, he became cashier of the firm, a position which he occupied at the time of his death.

Mr. Kirkwood was for many years connected with the military of the city, having been a commissioned officer of the Royal Victoria Rifles. He saw active service with this regiment during the Fenian Raid.

Modern business men have a way of expressing their views briefly, and perhaps the finest encomium to be uttered with regard to the life of the deceased would be the words of a man intimately associated with him in business when he said, "He was an upright man."

REMOVING TO LARGER QUARTERS

The head offices of the Queen City Oil Co., Toronto, have been removed to the third floor of the Ogilvie building, 63 Bay street, southeast corner of Wellington street. For the past ten years the executive offices of this busy house have occupied the whole of the fourth floor in the Lawlor building, but these premises had become entirely inadequate to give the necessary working space for the executive trade and accounting staff of this constantly growing business. By securing the entire third floor in the new Ogilvie building, where up-to-date offices have been fitted up, nearly double the floor space affords ample accommodation in the centre of the wholesale district.

Markets and Market Notes

QUEBEC MARKETS

Montreal, April 23, 1908.

POINTERS—
Beans—Advanced.
TEAS—Firmer.
Evaporated Apples—Easier.
Butter—Severe decline.
Eggs—Lower.

The Montreal market seems to be suffering in a measure a reaction from the Easter trade. However, this condition is not very marked. Sugar remains about the same, although some expect a small advance soon. Beans show the most conspicuous advance this week. Evaporated apples are lower, also butter and eggs. The trade in maple products is in a healthy condition just at present, the demand being good and the supply is quite satisfactory. Eastern Townships sugar is quite up to its past records in quality. Business men anticipate a general brightening up of trade as soon as navigation opens, as it likely will in a day or two, as many wholesalers will be able to reach their customers more expeditiously than during the period when the channel is closed. Provisions remain about the same, being rather dull after the cessation of Easter demand.

Collections are reported fair to good.

TEA—The tea market shows signs of being much stronger. In Japans it is too early to state probable opening of price in comparison with former years. It is expected that market will be opened any day now if weather conditions remain favorable. Importers are expecting cable advices regarding definite dates. Locally there is not much change in the markets. There is not much selling in large quantities. Prices show a tendency to become firmer. There is a better enquiry for China greens and young Hysons. Ceylon greens are very scarce and the price is firmer.

RICE AND TAPIOCA—Rice is firm in primary markets and there is not much demand locally. Prices will not give way much. Dealers have sufficient to carry them along for some time, since there has scarcely been the usual spring demand this year. Tapioca is dull of sale on the spot, rather suffering from the general depression. Primary tapioca markets are firm and shipments small. There are no great stocks on hand either here or in the United States. There is an almost complete absence of buying.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Slightly lower prices prevail for evaporated apples this week, as will be noticed from quotations. Demand is not so good as usual, there being in some districts a surplus of green apples, which take the place of the dried fruit. Prunes are being pushed with greater energy than evaporated apples by some houses.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—French peas are a little lower, but otherwise the situation in canned goods has not changed since last report. Canned fish are beginning to sell. Fruit and vegetable staples are in fairly good request at the old prices.

TORONTO—Jobbers report a more active demand for canned goods this week and considerable business is passing.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—
Sugar—Firm.
Canned Goods—Moving well
Teas—Firmer in primary markets.
Maple Syrup—Demand Brisk.
Collections—Better.

Toronto, April 23, 1908.

Wholesalers report more encouraging business this week and it seems that the spring business is about to open.

The grocery markets in general are steady, with few changes to report. Sugar continues exceedingly firm with further advances in raws.

SUGAR—Business continues brisk locally, the retailers seeming to appreciate the strong position of the markets and laying in supplies.

While no further advance has been made in refined the market continues exceedingly firm, and all tendency is toward advance.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES—Business in pure and compound maple goods is quite brisk. Other lines are quiet. Absolutely pure maple syrup is quoted at $1.50. Quotations on other lines are given below.

TEAS—Business locally continues quiet, with an absence of anything like sharp demand.

Reports from the London markets indicate the tendency to stronger position as is evidenced herewith.

Gow, Wilson & Stanton, reporting on Indian, say:

"Offerings were rather heavier but demand was strong for all kinds. Commons were fully firm and occasionally showed a slight advance, but medium and fine, particularly when quality was at all desirable, were again a somewhat dearer market. It now seems evident that there must be a good deal less of the crop remaining to be disposed of than was the case at the same period of last year."

Their note on Ceylon tea also bears out the statement of a move toward higher prices, as follows:

"Demand continues good for all classes of tea, and as has been the case during the last few weeks, the keenest competition was for good and fine qualities which were again occasionally dearer. Common kinds also showed a firmer tendency than of late."

DRIED FRUITS—Business continues quiet in nearly all lines. Advices to local brokers this week from Dania rather counteract the tendency to higher prices on valencia raisins mentioned in these columns last week, and point to the fact that some stocks are still held in the primary market.

RICE AND TAPIOCA—Light supplies of Japan rice are arriving. Demand is rather quiet.

NEW JOBBING HOUSE IN TORONTO

H. T. Wilson, W. E. McMurtry and H. E. Beattie Compose Firm.

Toronto is to have another grocery jobbing house to add to the large number of wholesale businesses established in the city.

This week the offices and warehouse at 31-33 Front Street East, are being refitted, and in a short time a jobbing business will be carried on. The new firm is composed of T. Wilson, formerly with the Canada Brokerage Co.; W. E. McMurtry, till recently with Eby-Blain, and H. E. Beattie, the famous 'Varsity Rugby player and athlete, who has been out of the city for some time, but returns to enter the business.

The details of organization are not as yet quite completed, but it is understood that a general grocery jobbing business will be carried on.

TOOK PART IN DEPUTATION.

Mr. Beckett Gives Details as to Guilds' Opposition to Co-operative Bill.

In response to a request for definite details as to what steps had been taken by Wholesale Grocers' Guilds to oppose the Co-operative Bill, in pursuance of a letter published in these columns last week, H. C. Beckett, Hamilton, President of the Dominion Grocers' Guild, has forwarded a letter from which we quote the following paragraphs pertaining to the situation:

"Owing to the antiquated business methods that prevail at Ottawa in not keeping business men of this country informed on prospective legislation, it frequently occurs that bills get their second reading before the real purport of them is generally known, and in this instance the quiet slipping through of this bill is a splendid illustration of the need of better protection to the business man.

"When the Co-operative Bill was rushed through and got to the Senate it was done so suddenly and unexpectedly that prompt measures were necessary to enter a protest, and the officers and members of the guilds were asked by the Retail Merchants' Association to assist the retail trade in opposing the bill. Very little time was at the disposal of the trade to get together; whatever could be done had to be done hurridely, and at an emergency meeting, one of which was held in Toronto and at which representatives of the guilds were present and spoke, it was decided the only thing to do was an immediate trip to Ottawa by as many members of the trade as could go on short notice, wholesalers and retailers working together. Members of the Ontario and Quebec Guilds in Hamilton, Toronto, Ottawa and London were notified and requested to go to Ottawa, and representatives of the wholesale trade did go, together with about two hundred retailers, every one at their own expense. The cost to the trade, at a conservative estimate, would be at least $4,000, an awful tax on the business men of this country, when it is only one of such trips frequently made necessary by reason of the Government not giving more publicity to proposed legislation.

"The retail grocers should know by this time that closer relation between them and the jobber is desirable, and in this respect the guild policy, as shown by the records, has always been to assist in every possible way to advance the interests of the retailer."

WAS SON OF GROCERY TRAVELER

Bennett A. Qua, the Technical School boy, who was so suddenly killed by a Toronto Street car on King Street, on Wednesday morning, April 15, was a son of Samuel E. Qua, a city traveler for Davidson & Hay, Toronto.

The accident came as a very great blow to Mr. Qua and family, whose home is at 11 Gwynne Avenue, and much sympathy has been felt by his friends in the trade in consequence of the very sad event.

THE OLD RELIABLE

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

(Though many imitations)

All grocers should carry a full stock of ROYAL BAKING POWDER. It always gives the greatest satisfaction to customers, and in the end yields the larger profit to the dealer.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 9 a.m. Thursday, April. 23, 1908.)

Seeding is in progress in all parts of the west and with favorable spring weather the prospects are considered very bright for a good crop this year. All branches of trade are feeling the effects of the resulting spirit of optimism abroad in the land. Country stocks are low for buying during the last eight or ten months has been restricted pretty much to immediate requirements. With the prospect of much better times there is a tendency towards more liberal buying.

TORONTO GROCER NABS THIEF.

Chased Him Down a Lane and Held Him Till Help Arrived

While Henry Burns was passing James Goodchild's store 1066 Queen Street west, Toronto, on Friday, he noticed a box of groceries which had been left standing in the delivery wagon. He attempted to steal the goods, but Mr. Goodchild saw him and gave chase. Burns dropped the box and sprinted down a lane, but was overtaken while climbing a fence. Mr. Goodchild grabbed him and hung on till he got help. Col. Denison, Saturday morning, sent Burns to jail for 20 days.

NEW INDUSTRIES IN NELSON, B.C.

As a result of the large number of fruit ranches started in the vicinity, a jam factory, with English capital behind it, has begun operations in Nelson.

Joseph Edinger, representing the British Columbia Colonization Agency, has purchased for a grape industry, 345 acres of land on Kootenay Lake, near Nelson, and will settle there a colony of Germans and other foreigners who have been employed in the grape culture in European vineyards.

DOUBLING HIS FLOOR SPACE.

W. M. Leigh, general merchant, Kirkton, Ont., has sold his hardware department to Wm. Moore, also of Kirkton. This is giving Mr. Leigh additional space, but he is also enlarging his store so that he will have just double the old space to facilitate the handling of his groceries and other general lines.

Arrivals of New Cheese Easing Prices—Butter Also Easier This Week—Hog Market Firm, With Better Outlook for Export.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, April 22, 1908.

With the arrival of the first new cheese of the season prices have gone down a little, the new goods being procurable at a figure which averages 12c, for white or colored. Old cheese is firmer than the new, being quoted at 12¼c.

Receipts of new cheese have been light so far, as the weather has been unsatisfactory, being cold and unsuitable for the factories. Then, as has been stated in these columns before now, the very poor care taken of cows by farmers during the winter, owing to the scarcity of feed and the high prices demanded, has left the animals in bad shape for the spring, and it is but natural that receipts should be light at first. For that matter, the unfitness of the cattle at the commencement of the season will result in quite a delay, as the milk supply to factories cannot improve until the cows are in first-class milking condition.

There is certainly very little old cheese now held by dealers in Montreal, all having been pretty well cleaned out by the steady sales made all through the winter, in small lots, to the domestic trade, and by the occasional demands from the other side for Canadian cheese. During the months since the close of navigation there have not been any large export transactions to speak of, that is, such as characterize the seasons as a rule. New Zealand cheese has been so seriously considered by Old Country houses this past while that the Canadian article has been almost neglected. Of course, nothing else could be expected when the prices of the New Zealand exporters were so much more favorable to English importers than the quotations furnished by Canadians. However, since the boards are practically clear for the opening of the new season, it has resulted in the reaching of the same end by a different means.

Receipts of cheese last week amounted to 743 boxes, against 113 boxes previous week, and 2,452 boxes same week last year. Total receipts to date amount to 2,054,854 boxes, against 2,353,537 boxes for the same period one year ago.

Of recent weeks the butter market has certainly been performing some attractive acrobatic feats. At the beginning of the new season particularly steady markets are rarely expected, but this season the market has been acting like a clock pendulum, suddenly gone crazy, going up and down in the course of a few weeks, by leaps and falls, instead of swinging steadily with small margins of difference.

A week ago prices were given at 34½c to 35c for finest creamery, while to-day 29c is the highest asked by dealers for first-class, new make creamery, and there are some who will sell at 28c, though what they offer may not be so attractive.

Of course, lower figures are expected as the make increases, and receipts in the city become consequently larger. It is quite probable that these figures will look rather high by this time next week,

The future action of the market is difficult to tell, however. That is, for the next few days at any rate—after that receipts may be considerably larger than they are daily at present. But just now the boards are about bare, and should there spring up an active demand there would be but little stock on hand to take care of it, and there would naturally be an advance. But nearly every dealer is endeavoring to get the price down, and it is likely that lower figures will rule.

With the decline in prices many cheese factories now making butter will revert to cheese, and the creameries will then have the field to themselves. The milk supply is improving, and with continued warm weather the market will be a better one on which to do business.

Dairy is quite scarce, and what there is of it commands a good price. One firm reported buying at figures which would mean a selling price around 27½c to 28c for choice rolls. Others quote dairy at 25c to 26c.

Receipts last week amounted to 637 packages, against 379 packages previous week, and 766 packages same week last year. Total receipts to date amount to 417,849 packages, against 614,563 packages same period a year ago.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

The British market is on rather a more receptive basis this week and in consequence the outlook for export business is rather brighter for Canadian packers.

Danish deliveries fell off somewhat last week from the record shipment of the past few weeks, and the "killings" were noted at 40,000, a drop of about 25 per cent. below the previous week. Even yet their deliveries are enormous. The smaller supplies from them, however, coupled with comparatively moderate American shipments which aggregated 19,000 last week, are affording some little better opportunity for the Canadian firms who are interested in that market.

Local demand also is very good, and these two features combined have provided for a very firm market. But with this is coupled the rather discouraging fact that the hogs are not forthcoming. Though the prices offered are very encouraging, farmers seem to be holding their stocks in hope of still further advances. Whether they are justified in doing so and paying for feeding in the meantime is rather an interesting question. Prices offered this week for live hogs are a shade better than at last reports. $6.25 is paid f.o.b., and hogs off cars bring $6.55 to $6.65. These figures are a great improvement on those a month ago, when $4.90 and $5 was the best offering, but the advance does not seem to have had much effect in stimulating deliveries.

Conditions prevalent last week in American markets are summarized in the following paragraph from the New York Journal of Commerce:

"The past week has shown a decided halt, the bull speculation in hog products, with increasing receipts the first half of the week, although they fell off again the latter half. But the market for products continued easy and receding in absence of support from the packers or shorts, if indeed there are many of the latter after the late squeezing out given them by the Cudahy Co. before they left the market to take care of itself, and after the appearance of the increased monthly stocks April 1st. The market has acted since then as if they had worked off their load, prior to that appearance, of which any of the large packers must certainly have been aware beforehand, though it was probably larger than they expected, owing to reduced consumption which appears to have been greater also than they expected. At all events none of them have appeared supporting prices since then, while they have appeared as sellers at times and severally. It may only be selling current production for future delivery, but this is contrary to their policy earlier in the season, when they were willing to take all the hogs coming in and fill their packing houses with what they then regarded as cheap products. Whether they have since changed their minds on this point, or are letting prices down to get hogs cheaper on the eve of the increasing movement expected so soon as farmers are over the rush of their spring's work. That both may be true is possible, and the trade are not inclined to stock up in face of a dull trade this summer, owing to so many unemployed people and such wide industrial depression. Nobody now is talking any higher prices for hog products, no matter what may happen in other meats."

GROCERS' PICNIC TO BUFFALO.

Toronto Retailers' Association Arranging Big Outing for July 15.

The annual summer picnic was the principal item of business at the meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association on Monday evening.

For some years the outing has been arranged to end at Buffalo and the excursion has always proved exceedingly popular. Buffalo seems to have attractions all its own for it was unanimously agreed on as the objective point for this year's outing. The date, too, was fixed after some discussion, for Wednesday, July 15th. An attempt will be made to have that date kept free from other large excursions which put a damper on the success of the outing as far as numbers are concerned.

In regard to the question of route there was some difference of opinion. Two or three different routes have been taken so far and the majority was in favor of choosing a new one. Ultimately it was decided to go by boat to Queenston, thence by International Railway on the Canadian side to the Falls, across to the American side and on to Buffalo. Returning, the party will leave Buffalo at 5.30, will be carried on a route through the main streets of the city and back to Queenston in time to catch the late boat.

"Dick" VanLoan always has to get his little joke in somewhere, and he objected to this arrangement as providing for saying too early a good-bye to Buffalo. "There are lots of things to do over there," he said, "and it's hard to

Flour is Firmer with Good Local Demand—Export Business Quiet in Consequence of High Prices—Cereals Easier.

The prices of flour remain steady with even a tendency toward greater firmness this week. Local demand is good and millers are being kept fairly steady, but with prices on their present basis there is practically no export demand. Millers say they expect to export little of the flour made from the new crop wheat to Europe. Continental countries of late have been importing wheat from the Argentine at the rate of four to six million bushels a week. This means that the flour can be manufactured in England or on the continent at perhaps 50 to 75 cents a barrel less than if the flour were brought into the country from Canada already ground.

An easier feeling in rolled oats is evident as a consequence of price-cutting by a few millers. This was done merely as a temporary means of business getting and was scarcely justified by market conditions. Demand for cereals from local points continues good and a fair amount of business is passing.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—Local millers report a very satisfactory call locally for various grades of flour, at prices which are not changed. Export demand, however, is not at all good, owing to the high wheat prices which rule.

TORONTO.

FLOUR—The market is strong and advancing and while prices have not advanced as yet there seems probability of a higher basis shortly. Millers report supplies of wheat free and local demand is brisk enough to keep most of them busy. Practically no export business is being done, the market being scarcely on an export basis at present prices.

CEREALS—A decline of 50 cents a barrel in rolled oats is the feature of the week in the cereal markets. This was not warranted by market conditions, but was a result of price-cutting on the part of the millers. The decline can scarcely be permanent. Demand continues fairly good from local merchants.

INCREASE THEIR CAPITAL.

Supplementary letters patent have been granted by the Dominion Government to the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Montreal, allowing them to increase their capital from $3,250,000 to $4,500,000, and permitting the extension of the undertaking to embrace such additional powers as transportation by water, as required by the business and the conducting of the business of warehousemen for their own purposes.

VERY WORTHILY "ORGANIZED."

British Columbia Grocers Have Admirable Local Associations and Are Planning Provincial Body.

A story of progress along right lines is always welcomed. We are very pleased indeed to give space to the following letter from the secretary of the Retail Grocers' Association of Vancouver, B.C. The grocers of Vancouver have displayed commendable enterprise and are working along lines the Grocer has been advocating for some years. In the thoroughness of their organization and the possibilities thereby gained for effective work, they are laps ahead of their brethren in the trade in the east.

The letter reads as follows :

"Editor Canadian Grocer :

"In an article that appeared in the Grocer on March 27, you use the heading 'B.C. Retailers Organizing.' This heading appearing in the Grocer would naturally leave an impression in the mind of the reader that the grocers of B.C., and particularly of Vancouver, were as yet unorganized and to use a modern expression, not up-to-date, which impression would be decidedly wrong as regards Victoria, Vancouver and New Westminster.

"In Victoria, the Retail Grocers' Exchange is one of the strongest in Canada. New Westminster has also a strong organization. In Vancouver the Retail Grocers' Association was organized without any outside assistance last August, and has now a membership of 110 with the following officers : President, W. J. Andrews; vice-president, L. McTaggart; secretary-treasurer, T. J. Hunter; directors, W. Clark, H. O. Lee, J. F. Foran, G. Hobson, F. Wright; active secretary, W. J. C. Hunter.

"This association has offices in a central location and employs an active secretary who devotes his entire time to association work. Its credit system is unequalled, inasmuch as this association not only conducts a collection department and issues a delinquent list to its members, but goes further in this work, adopting a uniform method of rating all customers, each member of the association supplying a full and complete list of his customers rated as per the association's standard. Their lists were compiled in proper shape by the secretary and it is estimated that fully 80 per cent. of the consumers of groceries in this city are now rated 'a la Bradstreet,' which simplifies a grocer's dealings with the public, as he is not only warned against a deadbeat or a slow pay, but he is able to obtain reliable information regarding anyone who may ask him for credit. Special reports are made on parties residing less than six months in the city. This department is open to anyone in the retail business in this city at a nominal fee monthly and is filling a long felt want, judging by the long list of applications now on file.

"Uniform prices prevail throughout the city in the grocery line as a result of association work. Many other benefits have been derived from the same source. Steps are now being taken towards the formation of a provincial association. Hence the exception to the word 'organizing.' Let it read hereafter in speaking of the grocers of B.C., 'organized.'

A PANTRY-SHELF WINDOW

A Suggestion to Attract the Housewife and to Induce Her to Buy One or Two of the Less Handled Lines.

If there is any one class of passersby that the grocer wishes particularly to interest by means of his window, it is probably the housewife. This, as will be seen at once, is the idea which has been followed in planning the window suggested in the sketch shown herewith.

The primary idea, of course, is to represent a set of pantry shelves. And what woman wouldn't stop to look at pantry shelves, even if they were put in the most out-of-the-way place imaginable. Then, when her attention is secured, it will be easy to make an impression which should lead to sales by an attractive display on the shelves.

The more closely the window is made to represent a pantry for this display the better the effect will be, and for that purpose a background should be put in, not too far back, which might be made of white paper tacked on a light framework to represent the plaster wall. The effect would be heightened and the window's attracting power stronger also if the sides were also covered to represent the end walls of the room. These, and the background, too, might be covered with wallpaper of a light pattern as a good suggestion of a bright pantry.

The shelves may be fixed in several ways, either fastened by brackets to the rear wall, or tacked to the side walls, or in a pinch, they might be even hung from the ceiling. The principal thing is to give the idea of shelves. They may be made of light packing case stuff, but should be carefully covered with clean paper just as our mother's pantry shelves were covered at home. It would add to the effect if colored paper were used and the edges pinked or fringed. This is one of the points where daintiness in arrangement will count a good deal.

Every grocer will know best what to put on the shelves to suit the people in his own locality. Whatever is used, however, should be bright, fresh goods, free from flyspecks and the different articles should be arranged daintily. Don't try either to put too many things in the window. A few good suggestions are better than a lot of distracting ones.

One peculiar feature about this idea—and peculiar features quite often count for a good deal—is that there are no goods in the window proper. If the floor of the window is of polished wood so much the better, but if the bare floor is not attractive a square of kitchen carpet or a strip of oilcloth laid in will help the general idea.

And then there's the sign which gives the idea of buying. The one in the sketch is given as a suggestion, but variations may, of course, be made from this. In any case, the sign ought to be an attractive one, and big enough to be easily read a few feet away.

The ideas given here may be varied in different ways, which will suggest themselves to any window dresser who cares to think about it.

WATCH INSIDE DISPLAY.

It is important to have attractive window displays, but it is also well to remember that there is opportunity in plenty for the employment of taste, cleverness and artistic and business ability upon an inside store display.

A display to attract attention must possess sufficient originality to at once arrest the eye with a happy color arrangement or a scheme so harmonious and beautiful as to be truly artistic.

It pays to give proper attention to interior displays. Such displays lighten up the store, they soften and subdue the hard business effect and add a charm which alone possess a pecuniary value.

The most cultured people admire a fine interior exhibit. The great mass of people are swayed by it, and the dealer who is wise remembers this.

Just a little thought, just a few ideas, just a little work, and something new and effective meets the visitor's eye.

The man in the store may not see these effects as quickly as do the customers. To outside eyes, fresh with outside impressions, these inside displays appeal much more readily than to inside eyes accustomed day in and day out to inside impressions.

He who is wise gets up an inside display to accentuate the window display, and makes the two work hand in hand. —Retail Grocers' Advocate.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Business Quieter After Heavy Demand for Easter Week—Oranges Firming up Cheap Southern Fruit.

Business fell off to an appreciable extent in the wholesale markets this week as is usual after large holiday business. This was felt particularly in fruit and fish lines, but the quietness is not expected to continue.

The feature of green fruits is the stiffening of the orange market. Prices at the coast are higher this week and it is having an effect on local quotations. Bananas are coming in very satisfactorily and prices are slightly easier. Demand for imported fresh fruits is quite active.

Advices from the South point to the probability that fruit of all kinds will be considerably cheaper during the coming season. Crop prospects are said to be bright and the unsatisfactory financial conditions prevailing there will curtail demand to some extent.

Garden truck imported from the South continues active and supplies are coming in freely. The business in these lines has developed materially during the last few years.

The fish markets are quieter than last week, but the arrival of several new lines is expected to liven matters somewhat. Several lines are easier this week as a result of the quieter markets.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—Satisfactory business is being done in most lines of green fruits. Bananas are slightly easier this week. Cocoanuts are extremely scarce and advanced 50c. Demand for the line is not very brisk, however. Valencia oranges have jumped slightly also. Cranberries are firm, finest stock being in small supply. Frozen grades are obtainable at a low price. Strawberries are coming in freely from Florida and nice stock is procurable at 36c a quart. Apples are firm and demand for them not up to much.

VEGETABLES—Dealers anticipate constantly improving conditions from this on. There was quite a spurt in trade for Easter and demand for the various imported lines seems to be keeping up, since prices are easing a trifle owing to increased receipts. Potatoes are firm and in good demand at prices quoted. Other roots are firm also. Several new lines will be noticed in quotations. Onions are firming up. Reds are selling freely, the good ones, there being an active market. Yellows are scarce. A lot of about 100 cases of Egyptian onions arrived last Saturday and were offered at about $3.25 per 100 pounds. Quality is said to be not of the very best, however.

FISH—Several price changes will be noticed in the fish market this week. Haddock, halibut, pike and whitefish are among the cheaper lines. Many new varieties are quoted also, including flounders, bluefish, striped bass or bar fish, and shad. There has been a falling off in the demand since Lent has finished and dealers have got down to the "one fish day a week" basis again. Haddock is reported scarce, though quite a lot has been brought into Montreal lately, 100,000 lbs. at least, having been shipped to Montreal last week. Haddies are being brought up from the coast later than ever this year. The fish market is in a healthy state at present, frozen lines being almost entirely cleaned up, leaving bare boards for the fresh lines arriving in constantly increasing quantity.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—Dealers report a brisk business during Easter week but conditions are naturally somewhat quieter this week. The cold weather has been to some extent responsible for this, as well as the usual after-holiday quietness. Oranges are a little stiffer in price this week, as a result of shorter supplies, the advance working out at about 15 cents. Pineapples are a little easier and a good business in these is beginning with the warmer weather.

The various lines are opening this year fully two weeks earlier than a year ago, and prospects seem bright for a remarkably good season's trade.

VEGETABLES—The demand for imported truck continues quite brisk with good supplies arriving. Potatoes have stiffened again after last week's decline and are now quoted at the old prices. Southern tomatoes are arriving in quantity of excellent quality. Egyptian onions are on the market for the first time, taking the place of the Canadian stock, which was becoming rather scarce, and will be arriving in quantity for the next few months. Bermuda onions, also the first of the season, have just come in. New Bermuda potatoes are quoted at $9.50 per bbl., or $3.25 per bushel.

FISH—Business has fallen off to a very appreciable extent this week, as an immediate reflection of the end of the Lenten season. Several new lines are on the market, such as fresh halibut, new ciscoes, and fresh trout. Demand for these lines is good. Finnan haddie still remains firm. Oysters in the shell have eased somewhat during the week in consequence of a desire on the part of dealers to be free of this line. Grocers interested in Municipal Elections—Increase in Winter Port Business—Merchants' Week Planned for Moncton.

Special Correspondence to The Canadian Grocer.

St. John, N.B., April 20.

Considerable interest is manifested in the civic elections, which take place tomorrow. Among the candidates nominated are a number of grocers and men closely connected with the grocery trade. Thomas H. Bullock, manager of the Imperial Oil Co., and for the past few years representing Queen's ward as alderman, is opposing Mayor Sears for the chief magistrate's chair. Charles A. Clarke, the Sydney street grocer, is seeking a place on the board as alderman-at-large. Alderman John W. Vanwart, the Charlotte street grocer and meat dealer, who was returned last year for Duke's ward without opposition, has an opponent this year in the person of Frank W. Potts. R. R. Patchell, grocer, of Stanley street, is contesting Victoria ward against Ald. H. H. Pickett. Five of the present aldermanic board have been returned without opposition.

The opening of navigation on the St. John river is looked for almost any day now. North-end merchants have some very large shipments of seeds, fertilizers and provisions to send to various points as soon as the river steamers can get away. At present the ice is firm, but the mild weather is weakening it all the time.

Burglars entered the grocery and provision store of Ira B. Kierstead, of Marsh Road, recently, but secured only about a dollar from the cash drawer. The thieves evidently tried to get the safe open, but were unsuccessful.

The exports from this port via the winter steamers show a big increase over last year. Ninety-one steamers up to date have taken away cargoes valued at $19,233,378, as compared with $14,298,479 for the same number last year, showing an increase of $4,334,899.

According to a statement made by the United States consul, the exports to the United States from this port for the quarter ending March 31, 1908, shows a falling off from the same period last year of $337,200.24.

The steamer Sobo, which arrived here April 12 from the West Indies, brought 1,000 casks of molasses for local dealers.

The recent advances in the price of sugars is one of the most interesting features of the grocery trade in this section. Most of the dealers had stocked up fairly well and they are now reaping the benefit of their foresight. The highest price at which sugar sold in this period was $6.10, which was the wholesale price in January, 1905, while the lowest figure was $3.95, which ruled from June to October, 1902. The advance in molasses is in consequence of the high prices of sugar and the indications are that the price will go still higher, Fancy Barbadoes molasses is quoted now at 32c, which is an advance of 3c a gallon since the first new stock came in, 1902, $4.10 ; 1903, $4.35; 1904, $5.15 ; 1905, $5.10 ; 1906, $4.50 ; 1907, $4.70 ; present price, $5.25.

The confectionery manufacturers in this section have all advanced the price of the cheaper grades of confectionery half a cent a pound.

The Sussex and Studholme Agricultural Society are applying to the Provincial Government for a grant of $2,500 for the holding of an exhibition in Sussex during the coming fall.

James Collins, the Union street grocer, has made extensive improvements in his premises. New shelving, metal ceiling and walls and new electric fixtures have been installed and the store has been enlarged by the removal of a partition half way back, so that the store is now about double its former size. W. W. McElwaine, formerly in business for himself on Sydney street, has entered Mr. Collins' employ.

It is proposed to hold a merchants' week in Moncton during the summer, probably in July or August. The Board of Trade have the arrangements in hand.

There has been quite a slump in the price of potatoes in Carleton county. They are quoted now at $1.15 a barrel.

* * *

In the feed line, middlings has advanced $1.10 a ton during the past week. Otherwise there has been practically no change in prices from last report.

Frank Loughrey Opens New Business at Amherst with Bright Prospects

The thriving town of Amherst, N.S., is known all over Canada as a commercial centre, and this fact was the principal reason why Frank Loughrey, of London, Ont., decided to locate there and embark in the grocery business.

Born on April 4th, 1878, at London, Ont., where his father and his brother-in-law, Alf. Johnson, still conduct grocery businesses, Frank may be said to have grown up in the trade. Mr. Loughrey launched his business on the 9th of April, with a full line of groceries, fruit, confectionery, tobacco and cigars, and already his store seems to have taken a hold.

FRANK LOUGHREY.

A New Grocer, of Amherst, N.S.

The store, which has been named "Olympia," and is situated on Church street, is a three-storey, brick and cement structure, is thoroughly fireproof, and compares well with any in the Maritime Provinces. The whole establishment, fittings and stock, are a credit to the town of Amherst, and, no doubt, Mr. Loughrey will meet with the success he deserves.

A note from Amherst this week says: "Frank takes a great interest in The Canadian Grocer, especially the pictures and reading regarding the window display, in fact he has his window trimmed at the present time after a scheme suggested in The Grocer."

Major John Sloan, of John Sloan & Co., wholesale grocers, Toronto, returned to the city on Monday after a week's outing at Preston and vicinity.

THE DAWSON COMMISSION CO., TORONTO

VANCOUVER CORRESPONDENCE

April 18.—J. W. Stewart, of Foley, Welch & Stewart, who have the contract for the construction of the G. T. P. east from Prince Rupert, was in the city the other day on his way to the north, and stated that not a single article will have to be ordered in the East, either for the commissariat or the camps, as the prices quoted by local dealers are quite as favorable as those given by Eastern merchants. Commenting on this, a local business man remarked that conditions had already improved, and when construction was rapidly under way, there should be considerable activity. If the company faithfully carried out its contract this year would be a fine one for Vancouver merchants.

Oscar Brown, of Oscar Brown & Co., the wholesale fruit dealers, returned on recently from a three months' trip to Mexico. He is interested with people of Victoria in an enterprise in Mexico. They will cultivate a large area, and after the construction of a railway about nine miles in length to afford transportation, will land their own cocoanuts, pineapples and bananas on this market, as well as in other Pacific Coast cities. They will have control of about 400,000 acres, though part of this tract will be sub-let for the growing of cotton and corn. At present, pineapples are brought in large quantities from Hawaii, and it is claimed that the Mexican fruit has no superior. The starting of a service between British Columbia and Mexico has rendered an enterprise like this feasible.

Perhaps one of the most important features will be the growing of onions. At this time of year, the whole of the union supply comes from Australia, and each steamer brings in many crates. Onions will be grown in Mexico to be available here in the late winter and early spring, and the quality will be up to the best.

The first cucumbers are on the market at 25c each, or an average of five cents an inch. At this figure, they are the limit of luxuries, still quite a trade is done in them. In Seattle, they have Florida tomatoes, and the first strawberries, the latter retailing at 40c per box, but none have yet reached here. All that can be got are sold there, and as there is no surplus, Vancouver has to wait until they are more plentiful. The usual green stuff from California is now arriving in greater quantities than ever, and of fine quality.

During the past week or two there have been several victims of ptomaine poisoning in Victoria, supposedly from eating canned tomatoes. Some of these were prominent people, and prompt medical assistance prevented serious results. All have now recovered. The tomatoes in cans seem to be more disposed to carry ptomaine than other canned goods, although they have not an exclusive privilege in that respect.

Niagara vineyards, grapes from which reach even this out of the way portion of Canada, may soon have a rival in British Columbia. Thomas Earl grows some very fine grapes at Lytton, and now they are being cultivated in the neighborhood of Grand Forks. Since fruit growing is being practiced on a large scale, and orchards are being laid, owners of ranches are also turning their attention to the growing of grapes, and in a few years this industry should be a large one. The interior dry belts are just the place for the best varieties, and even semi-tropical fruits may be grown in greater profusion.

Distinctive labels are being prepared for Kootenay fruit, and these two words will be printed in prominent letters and colors at the top of the label for the information of purchasers.

Agents in British Columbia of Fry & Co., the cocoa and chocolate manufacturers, of the Old Country, were in the city from Victoria last week taking orders for next Christmas stock. They found trade good.

MEN WHO SELL THINGS

We have just closed an arrangement whereby we will have the exclusive right to publish in Canada a book for salesmen, by Walter D. Moody, formerly traveling salesman, buyer and general sales manager for a large wholesale house, and now business manager of the Chicago Association of Commerce—the largest body of business men in the world, numbering about two thousand seven hundred members.

Mr. Moody's book is dedicated to the "Commercial Ambassador," and he has written it primarily for the traveling man. It also contains much educational matter for the business man, young and old, and there is a vein of business philosophy running through it that will appeal to any man or boy interested in self-development and a successful future. It is a book every salesman worthy the name will find indispensable.

Mr. Moody has been engaged for a year and a half in compiling these experiences and observations of his life's work in connection with the field of salesmanship as viewed from the standpoint of the traveling salesman, buyer, sales manager and employer, and as this book appeals to all who are concerned in any line of trade or business, it is just the book those in your own line who are engaged in the creative, money-getting side will find most useful and valuable.

The publication will be begun shortly in The Canadian Grocer and will run for several months. Special subscriptions will be taken during the time it is running, at $1.00. Of course, regular subscribers get it without extra charge. We would appreciate very much our readers drawing the attention of commercial travelers, and their clerks, to this announcement. Here are some selections which show the author's vigorous and entertaining style.

The salesman who hopes to win real success must change his negative qualities into positive ones, and then stick to some good reliable house where his chances for growth are assured.

A salesman of experience realizes that ideas—practical methods of selling goods—are of the greatest value, and he also knows that it pays him to search for them.

Time and thought taken in complaining of competition is useless expenditure of energy. It lessens your capacity for the accomplishment of things for which you were employed.

The Salesman goes out and digs up business, while the Order-taker just shambles around, waiting to be fed, like the hippopotamus in the menagerie.

A good salesman must know more about his goods than the man he is selling to knows about them. Knowledge and enthusiasm beat oratory every time. Enthusiasm in a salesman begets enthusiasm in a customer.

The best salesmen any house can have are the salesmen it builds for itself. The old saying, "Salesmen are born, and not made," is the veriest kind of tommyrot in this day of science and progress.

What the world of salesmanship wants is educated enthusiasm. The purest of king's English will secure an audience and hold attention for the salesman anywhere, while slang and short cuts of speech often excite distrust and offend the ear of the truly refined.

GROCERY SHOW OPENED.

Montreal Exhibition of Groceries Enjoying Great Success

A large crowd attended the opening of the Montreal Exhibition of Groceries in the Arena on Friday evening last. Mayor Payette, of Montreal, officially opened the exhibition, and spoke a few words regarding the value of the fair as an educative factor. Mayor Galbraith, of Westmount, who is known to hundreds of grocers as the head of William Galbraith & Son, was there in an official capacity, while others present included L. A. Rivet and Mr. Robitaille, representing the House of Commons; ex-Mayor Laporte, of Montreal,; A. Laniel, president of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association, and Ald. Lariviere.

The manner in which the numerous exhibits are arranged at the Arena is well worth seeing, even were the food products shown not there at all. There has been an infinite lot of work done to make the showroom attractive in order to enhance the value of the actual displays, and the promoters of the fair, the Province of Quebec Retail Grocers' Association, aided by the advisory committee, have certainly succeeded in turning out something worthy. All this week there has been excellent attendance.

J. A. BEAUDRY,
Secretary-Manager of the Exhibition of Groceries in Montreal.

A more comprehensive account of the exhibition, together with illustrations of a large number of the exhibits, will be given in these columns in next issue.

P. C. Larkin left on Monday night for a visit to the branches of the Salada Tea Co., in Montreal, Boston, New York and Buffalo. Before returning to the city he may also visit the offices in Chicago and Detroit. The American business of the Salada Tea Co. has made enormous progress during the past year.

NOVA SCOTIA GROCERY NEWS

Large Arrivals of Molasses—Lobster Shipments to United States—Bridgetown Grocer Captures Thieves.

(Special Correspondence to The Canadian Grocer)

Halifax, N.S., April 18.

Considering all conditions the grocery trade this season has been very good, the most of the dealers reporting business up to the average. Prices are steady, outside of butter. The recent advance in the price of sugar in New York has not yet caused any further rise here. Molasses is soaring upwards and the dealers here refuse to quote prices at present. There is a corner in molasses in Barbadoes, and it is impossible to say when the market will be steady. The receipts here have been very limited, but this week the schooner Frances arrived from Barbados, and landed 600 puncheons, 225 barrels, and 25 half-barrels. The steamer Sobo has quite a cargo to land this week, and several sailing vessels are on the way to this port.

The receipts of eggs fell off very greatly the latter part of this week, and as a result prices held firm at 16c to 17c. The cold weather caused the hens to cease working overtime, and the declining prices to hold steady.

The butter situation remains unchanged, both as regards prices and receipts. Dairy butter is very scarce, the week's receipts, outside of creamery prints, being limited to a few small tubs of fresh made stock, for which 32c was asked. All the commission men are complaining of the high prices, and the restrictions of business, which is attributed to this cause. It is not likely that these conditions can last much longer. Butter must be obtained somewhere for the next few weeks until the cows get on the grass, when it is hoped that the receipts will increase.

The market was well supplied with choice Easter beef this week, the most of which was raised in Nova Scotia. Very little poultry was offered for sale, it being much more scarce this Easter than usual, particularly as regards turkeys. Some spring chickens were offered for sale, the first ever raised and marketed here for Easter. These birds were raised at Windsor, N.S., and retailed at $1 each. They weighed only 2½ lbs., but this is considered a good weight.

Fresh fish was rather scarce during the week, the dealers finding difficulty in securing sufficient to supply the demands of their customers. Stormy weather prevented the fishermen from reaching the grounds.

There is a heavy demand from the United States for lobsters, and about one thousand crates per week are being shipped from Nova Scotia ports to Boston.

Bridgetown, N.S., possesses an efficient grocer detective, in the person of C. L. Piggott. Though he only started out last week he has two captures to his credit to date. Mr. Piggott has noticed traces of pilfering in his grocery for some time and he had purposely left small sums of money in the cash drawer over night to verify his suspicions. After satisfying himself that thieves were at work he determined to watch for them. and about four o'clock one morning last week he caught two local men in the act. When searched, the prisoners had in their possession keys that would unlock nearly every store in town.

Robert McCaughin, aged 72, who was for many years engaged in the grocery business on Lockman street, Halifax, died at his home in Falmouth this week. After retiring from the grocery business he purchased an orchard and farm at Falmouth, and has since resided there. He was a native of Ireland and came to this country half a century ago.

R. W. Oliver, of the Oliver Milling Co., Montreal, has been elected to the vacant vice-presidency of the Corn Exchange.

GROCERY FACTS

Something About the Goods Handed Over the Counter Every Day.

HISTORY OF RICE.

Considered from the standpoint of its general use as a food, and its almost exclusive use by the people of many parts of the Orient, rice is indeed the staff of life. It is also consumed in great quantities in the countries of northern and eastern Africa, the West Indies, Central America, and the Malay Archipelago, while the people of all other tropical and semi-tropical countries class it among their food necesities. In many sections of India and China, and in Japan and other countries of Asia, where the merits of rice as a food have long been established, the people are so dependent upon it that a failure of the rice crop means great suffering to millions and starvation to many. The failure of the rice crop in the district of Behar, India, in 1873, where 15,000,000 people were dependent upon it for subsistence necessitated the expenditure of £6,400,000 by the British Government for food for the people of the stricken district. The dire consequences of the great shortage in the rice crop in some of the provinces of Japan were brought to the notice of the people of this country in 1906.

Rice was probably an article of food in Asia in pre-historic times. It is known that the Chinese have used it for nearly fifty centuries, and in India, too, its use antedates authentic history. It was introduced into Europe in the fifteenth century, when it was taken to Italy and Spain from northern Africa, where it had been planted by the Mohammedans in their migration from Asia Minor.

In 1647 Governor Berkeley, of Virginia, planted some seed rice received from England, but the experiment was not a success, and it was not until 1694 that rice-growing was really established in this country. In that year the Governor of South Carolina planted some rice given him by the master of a trading vessel which had put into Charleston on a cruise from Madagascar. The seed grew well, and in a few years rice planting on the lowlands of the coast became one of the chief industries of South Carolina. From this state the cultivation was extended to North Carolina and Georgia, and later to Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana. The French who settled about New Orleans and the Acadians of south-western Louisiana cultivated rice in a primitive way in the latter half of the eighteenth century, but the methods of growing were so crude that the industry did not become commercially important until after the American civil war.

The conditions resulting from the civil war gave considerable stimulus to the planting of rice as a staple crop in Louisiana along the Mississippi river, and impoverished planters, who had formerly relied on other crops requiring great outlay of capital, began to grow rice as a means of quick financial relief. For several years the production was small, but it gradually increased. In the decade following 1870 the annual average reached seventy-one million pounds and in 1880 more than fifty-one million pounds of clean rice were marketed. A part of this was produced in the extreme eastern part of the now famous rice belt of southwestern Louisiana.

The milling of rice consists in reducing the rough rice, or paddy, as it is sometimes called, to an edible state by the removal of the outer shell, which is commercially referred to as "hulls," and the inner cuticle, which is known as "bran," and by a finishing process that removes the "polish" from the kernel and gives it a pearly lustre that it may satisfy trade requirements. The finishing brushes remove the most nutritious part of the grain—the flour, or polish—and leave only the hard endosperm, or kernel.

The polished rice is graded according to the perfection of the grain, which depends upon the variety of the rice, the care used in the harvesting and in the threshing, and the efficiency in milling.

Another Store-keeper Sued for Damages

Dangerous stove polishes continue to get store-keepers into trouble. The daily papers of Detroit, early this month, report Mrs. A. D. —— is seeking to recover in the courts $15,000 from Mr. C. G. —— who sold her some inflammable, liquid stove polish that exploded and severely burned her face and arms.

Wise store-keepers will keep out of trouble by handling only the stove polishes which are safe in the hands of the user. RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish are made by reliable processes and are absolutely free from dangers of fire or explosion. PUSH THEM.

The Slogan of the Future

An expert in trade progress makes this bold statement:

"Each year it becomes more and more necessary for the retailer to confine his attention to goods of known value."

And on the firm and lasting foundation of merit and worth

stand forth. Their "known value" has been demonstrated for more than a quarter of a century.

The Grocer who "confines his attention" to them reaps his reward in profitable trade.

What are You Selling?

and hence the saying "As Pure As Windsor Salt"

Things don't "just happen" in this world—there's a reason for everything, and there's a splendid reason why Windsor Salt has reached that much sought for pinnacle that entitles the makers to justly claim it "best."

¶ To-day it is the Standard Salt from which comparisons are made when some one is trying to sell an inferior product—something "just as good." The purity, whiteness, dryness, and free-running qualities of Windsor Salt are almost proverbial. "It's the Standard"—isn't that enough?

LEA'S

The Pickle with the Home-made Flavor

History of the Lea Pickle.

1901 For the last twenty years made by Mrs. Lea for her own table.

1902 Made by Mrs. Lea for sale in their store.

1903 Demanded by the outside consumer. A small factory started.

1904 Premises too small, moved into a larger place and unable to supply the demand.

1905 Factory used last year too small; unable, on account of accommodation, to supply the demand; another addition.

1906 Demand so large that stock was all sold in March, and large orders received through the balance of the pickle season were not filled.

1907 Formation of the Lea Pickling Co., to enlarge premises and carry on the business on a larger scale, with more up-to-date packages, using the same care in packing the goods, and processing done as before under the supervision of Mrs. Lea.

1908 April 15th, and we are again sold out of all bottle goods, after doubling last year's output, and preparation being made that we hope to be able to fill all orders received during the coming season, we are adding to our already large line a TID-BIT pickle that we think will be the finest goods ever offered to the Canadian trade, and at prices in reach of everybody. The fame of these goods is reaching from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and we are daily receiving inquiries from all parts of the Dominion, when you consider that these goods have not been formerly advertised and only now in a small way, that the HOME-MADE flavor must be popular with the consumer. If you will try a small quantity of these goods when they are again offered in August, you will be surprised that so home-like a pickle can be turned in a factory.

Profitable Goods

Are the goods that are a little better than the others: goods that will make sales where the others won't. Ozo Brand Pickles are good pickles, and show their quality. We have special facilities for turning out the best pickles, and we have made the most of them. For instance, we provide the seed from which the vegetables are grown and so get the best from the start; the cucumbers go straight from the vine to the factory, so that none of the fresh crispness is lost. We make our own vinegar and it cannot be beaten for pickling purposes. It will certainly pay you to specify that you want our goods when ordering pickles.

Rose & Laflamme, Limited

Montreal Toronto

(Reprinted from "Power," New York)

"It Was Magnificent, but It Was Not War."

The Atlas Engine Works, of Indianapolis, Ind., is in the hands of its creditors.

Men familiar with the manufacture and marketing of machinery and men familiar with advertising have predicted this for some time.

This company has been spending great sums of money, probably more than $100,000 in the past year or two, that was charged to advertising but should have gone on its books under the heading of "Vanity Account."

Through an agent, this concern has used page after page in the general magazines, of pretty copy, to offer steam engines to the general public—not one in ten thousand being a possible buyer.

One quarter, yes, an eighth, of the money spent in the mediums that go to the power users of the country would have produced a sensation in engineering circles—and an increase of business.

General Pierre Bosquet said of the charge of the Light Brigade, at Balaklava: "It is magnificent, but it is not war."

This waste of money, this offering steam engines and boilers to the women and children and non-power users in flaring pages of pictures was "Publicity, but it was not advertising."

You can get publicity by shooting your wife—but it is not advertising.

A duck hunter on his way from New York to Barnegat Bay might just as well shoot into the air all the way down in hopes that a duck would fly into the shot, as to advertise steam engines to the general public.

Advertising must stand the charge of all such failures—and does not deserve it.

So few know the difference between Publicity and Advertising.

Advertising is salesmanship, the creating of a favorable impression of the goods advertised in the minds of possible buyers. Ah, there's the rub—possible buyers.

One page in Power would have reached more possible buyers of the Atlas product than a full page in all the magazines in Christendom—and there would not have been enough waste circulation to light a pipe.

But Power would not have allowed an agent a commission.

Power would have created no wonder in the home circle, the women's clubs or the Lincoln County Medical Society, it would have reached power users, and let it go at that.

Power is sorry for the troubles of this old, honest and reputable concern. Sorry because unthinking people will say they were ruined by too much advertising, which is not true.

Had they spent this amount of money pasting "stickers" on the inside of box cars it would have been the same kind of publicity—it never was advertising.

Moral—If you are selling a specialty advertise big in the papers devoted to that line—and nowhere else. If you are selling shoe strings or grape nuts get into the general publications.

There is a difference between Publicity and Advertising. Real advertising will give you publicity enough, publicity does not always advertise.

If your tailor should call on you just when you had decided that your clothes looked shabby, he would have an extra good chance of an order; if a book agent should offer you a pocket dictionary, just at a moment when you were wondering how to spell "embarrassment," he would probably land you.

The best time to put your claims before a consumer is when his mind is already interested in the subject.

—Curtis Publishing Company

THE strength of the technical or trade paper lies in just that timeliness and assured interest. The reader is a reader simply and solely because his bread-and-butter interests are involved in the particular subjects of which a given paper treats, and because he knows that practically all the matter in that publication will apply directly to, or have a bearing upon, the subjects on which he must have the latest authoritative word in order to compete successfully for business.

And in no other class of publications are the advertisements so essentially a part of the text—so necessary to completeness of the information furnished.

To the progressive manufacturer, the technical or trade paper has become an important part of his business machinery—a machine for impressing his name and that of his product on the minds of prospective customers, for keeping in close, constant touch with old customers, for removing prejudice unfavorable to his product, for creating interest and molding favorable opinion—a machine whose finished product is a desire to buy, as expressed in an inquiry; a mind prepared to receive and assimilate the salesman's arguments or an order.

Are you using the modern machinery for marketing ?

Are you buying and using it with the same care as you buy and use the machinery whose profits are so dependent upon its intelligent selection and use ?

Montreal's Exhibition of Groceries

Splendid Success of Third Annual Fair—Attendance Over 40,000—Represented Outlay of $50,000 to $75,000—Men Responsible for the Success—Descriptions and Photographs of Exhibits—Exhibition Flashes.

Whether or not Montreal may lay claim to having had the finest pure food fair ever held on this continent, in the exhibition of groceries just concluded Wednesday evening at the Arena, is a question for those to decide who consider themselves fit to act as critics. If one may judge from the remarks of those who had seen such fairs in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and other large centres, Montreal's exhibition is without parallel. In point of attendance the fair in Canada's metropolis may not be able to stand favorable comparison with shows held in such places as New York, but allowance must be made for difference in population of the two centres, and the consequent greater advantage possessed by the larger city in having so many hundred thousand more people from whom to draw attendance.

But for artistic arrangement of a show, excellence of pure food products shown, and general air of quality about the whole thing, Montreal heads the list with her third annual exhibition of groceries.

Was Bound to Succeed.

It is not surprising that the exhibition should have been such a grand success. It would have been astonishing, to say the least, had it been anything else, for it was planned and executed by some of the most successful men in the grocery business to-day.

The fair was held under the auspices of the Retail Grocers' Association of the Province of Quebec, which organization was assisted by an advisory committee composed of the ablest men in the manufacturing, wholesale and brokerage business.

These gentlemen worked night and day, taking valuable time from their own business to devote to the exhibition, in order to ensure its success. When such leaders put their shoulders to the wheel the wagon is bound to go at a merry clip.

Large Crowds Attended.

The exhibition opened on the evening of April 17 and continued until April 29. During all this time the attendance was excellent. There were a few evenings, it is true, when the crowds were not as large as might have been desired, but that was before the fair was well started, and because the fact of its being in progress was not known to everybody. Between the opening and closing dates it is estimated in the neighborhood of 40,000 people visited the Arena. And it is safe to say that few of these were disappointed in what they saw. It was noticeable, and remarked by many, that the class patronizing the show were a most intelligent lot of people, the kind whom every manufacturer desires to interest in his lines. There was a pleasing absence of "sample-chasers," the bane of every food show. The average lady at the Arena was more attracted by the promise of some pointers she might apply to her cooking than by the offer of samples, with no explanations or demonstration thrown in. Some will smile at this—those who gave away thousands of samples—but it's a fact. Witness the crowd of ladies always before the booth of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, who were giving actual demonstrations of their Royal Household flour. At the same time it must be said that these same ladies were not refusing samples.

GENERAL VIEW OF EXHIBITION FROM THE GALLERY.

P. DAOUST,
President Executive Committee, Montreal.

They wouldn't be human if they did—from a food fair point of view.

Fair Was Expensive.

To attain what results they did, and well, the firms taking space were forced to expend a large amount of money. The displays themselves represented thousands of dollars, while cost of booths, display material, help, extra light and incidentals would run well up in the thousands. It is difficult to give a figure representing the whole outlay for the fair, but it was at least between $50,000 and $75,000. This sum represents the show, its cost, and the goods displayed.

A. E. LABELLE,
Of the Ogilvie Flour Mills, Montreal, Member of Advisory Committee.

Manufacturers, however, feel that they have been justified in any expenses they have incurred, for they have conducted a grand educative campaign, the results of which will be most beneficial to the retail trade of Montreal and district, as well as to themselves.

A man may have a pure food, an excellent article, but unless he lets the people know about it he will never realize on his possession.

Outside Grocers There.

Besides the thousands of Montrealers who visited the fair there were numerous visitors from outside. Grocers by the dozen came from Sherbrooke, Quebec, Richmond and nearby places, taking advantage of the reduced rates to get into the city to transact business and to see the show, thus killing two birds with one stone. A delegation representing the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association, composed of F. W. Forde, president; C. J. Prevost, treasurer, and A. G. Johnston, secretary, came up from the Capital City to have a look around and to gain a few pointers to use in their pure food show, which comes off in September, at the time of the Central Canada Exhibition. Needless to say, they were duly impressed.

Secretary Executive Committee, Montreal.

A Banquet to Montreal Doctors.

On Thursday evening, April 23rd, a most successful banquet was held, the doctors of the city being the guests of the management. Besides the doctor guests of honor, Hon. L. P. Brodeur, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, was present, Hon. Mr. Brodeur was to have officially opened the fair, but was unable to be present, and Mayor Payette, of Montreal, and Mayor Galbraith, of Westmount, officiated. Several interesting addresses were delivered at the banquet, which was attended by over two hundred. Hon. Mr. Brodeur praised the grocers for getting up such a fair to educate the public to the value and necessity of pure foods. A. P. Murray, sales manager of the Edwardsburg Starch Company, and chairman of the advisory committee of the exhibition, made an interesting address in both English and French, while several other grocers and some of the doctors made short speeches also.

A. P. MURRAY,
Of Edwardsburg Starch Co., Montreal, Chairman Advisory Committee.

A Beautiful Display.

From the promenade gallery of the Arena one could appreciate much more the artistic perfection of the show, because of being able to see the whole of the booths from above. In the centre of the rink was a central row, five large booths, each containing four small ones, the size of those running around the sides. As will be seen from the photograph reproduced, these five large booths as well as the smaller ones, were kept uniform. Another feature about the five booths in the centre was that each one was occupied by one firm, instead of by two or more, as in the past, and as a result, the individual booths were uniform, which added to the appearance of the whole when looked down upon from the gallery. The central booths were illuminated at the top by colored lights, a different color scheme for each of the five, which made the effect most pleasing. The booths around the side were all lighted by electric bulbs in large, frosted glass globes on the top of a square post placed at intervals separating the booths. This arrangement added much to the beauty of the show. The ugly rafters near the roof, and the vacant benches around the Arena, were hidden by white cloth, trimmed, where rows of electric light showed, with pink cloth hanging down about a foot.

Show Cases An Improvement.

A decided improvement over the counters used in each booth last year were the fine counters employed on this occasion. Exhibitors were very much pleased with the inauguration. These show cases, supplied by Jones Bros., Toronto and Montreal, besides lending a richer air to the whole fair, permitted of a very neat display being made inside. They were very useful for displaying small package goods especially, and when lights were installed these displays appeared to be about as neat as one could desire.

A Suggestion Regarding Dates.

It might be a timely suggestion to note that the dates chosen for the fair were not as convenient as they might have been. They broke up three weeks. Some of the exhibitors were conducting demonstrations in other places and were forced to cut short their week in order to have their demonstrators present for the Friday evening the fair opened. Many of these thought it would have been much better if the show had not opened until the following Monday. This is worth thinking over. Everybody understands the difficulty of getting dates at the Arena to suit everybody, but future exhibitions might be arranged so that they would not break more than two weeks for a ten-day show.

The Committees in Charge.

Special praise is due the members of the advisory committee, who spent much of their time in making the fair a success. This committee was composed of A. P. Murray, sales manager the Edwardsburg Starch Co., chairman; A. E. Labelle, local manager Ogilvie Flour Mills Co.; W. W. Hutchison, local manager Lake-of-the-Woods Milling Co.;

Wm. H. Dunn's Exhibits — Booths No. 1 and 2

Wm. H. Dunn.

One of the busiest men during the fair was Wm. H. Dunn, who occupied more space than any other single exhibitor. The first booth to greet the eyes of the visitor was the large central structure immediately opposite the entrance, where Mr. Dunn made the greater part of his display, which consisted of the most inviting grocery lines, for which he is exclusive agent. This central booth was divided into four smaller ones, though the ensemble effect was not in the least destroyed, the idea acted upon being such as to give each line shown a space all its own, yet at the same time to make the display pleasingly uniform. The result was that Mr. Dunn's was one of the most interesting and attractive booths at the fair.

Mr. Dunn himself spent considerable time at the Arena, supervising the work of several of his salesmen, who were assisting, and of the staff of lady demonstrators. He also availed himself of the opportunity to meet many visiting grocers whom pressure of business does not permit him to see as frequently as he might desire.

E. D. Smith's Pure Preserves.

E. D. Smith's pure preserves, jams and sealed bottled fruits have won a reputation among the public which could not be obtained except that the goods were as nearly perfect as science, skilled help and the use of selected fruits and sugar alone can make them. E. D. Smith procures the fruits used in his lines from his own large farm of 625 acres. Being located in the Niagara peninsula, Canada's great fruit and vegetable growing centre, the fruits employed in the making of E. D. Smith's preserves and jam are the very finest. E. D. Smith's factory is located right on the farm, so that it is not difficult to understand how it is that the fruits he secures arrive in the factory, and are put up, ready for the consumer, in their natural fresh flavor state. As will be seen in the illustration, the various lines were so displayed as to attract the attention of the least interested visitor. But there were few who admitted themselves strangers to these excellent products of Canadian orchard and factory —for the name E. D. Smith is becoming synonymous with the best in preserves, jams, canned fruits and vegetables.

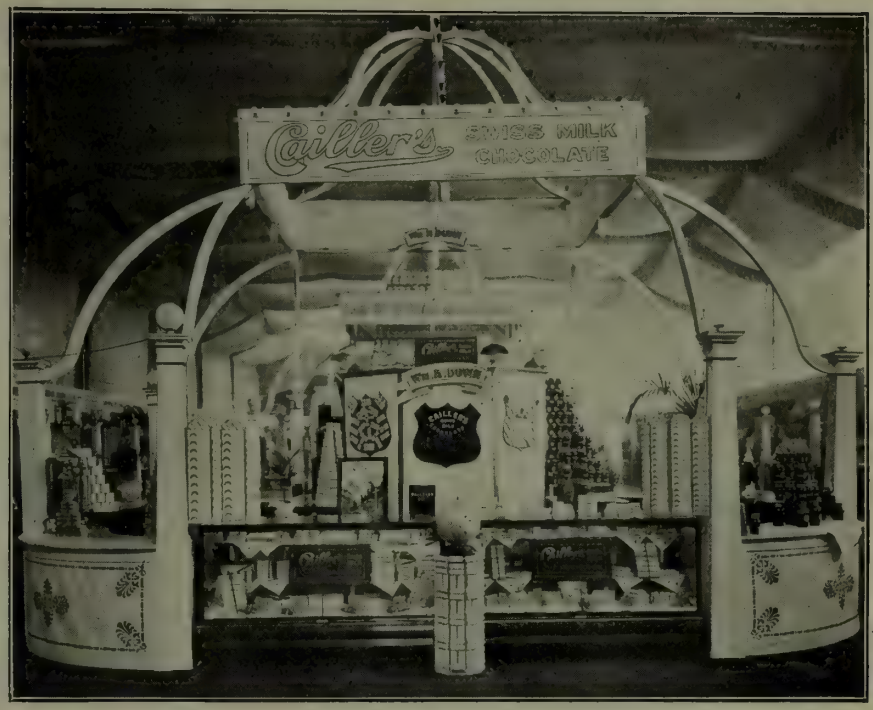
Pure Gold Specialties.

How few grocery stores have not at one time or other handled Pure Gold products? That is, if they are not at present handling the goods, and for that matter, if they have ever stocked up they are still in the front rank with Pure Gold Brand, for such is the unvarying excellence of the jelly powders, spices, flavoring extracts, cake icings, salad dressing powder, quick puddings, etc., that once known they are always desired. Dainty dishes of jelly made with Pure Gold jelly powder attracted much notice and led to many sales. Pure Gold extracts were given considerable prominence in the show case, while on the counter to the left Pure Gold Jelly Powder, quick puddings and salad dressing were to the fore.



W. H. DUNN'S EXHIBIT OF CAILLER'S MILK CHOCOLATE.

Cailler's Chocolate.

There was a time when Canadians did not know anything about Cailler's Chocolate but there are few lovers of Swiss Milk Chocolate who are not now acquainted with this most delicious chocolate from the land famous for its perpetually snow-capped mountains. The campaign to introduce Cailler's to the Canadian public was most energetic, thousands being spent in publicity, and everything being done to aid the dealer in hs efforts to make wdely-known this delightful Swiss Milk Chocolate. But all this effort would have been in vain were not quality considered of paramount importance by the manufacturer, F. L. Cailler, in Switzerland. A Swiss Milk Chocolate has to be something extra fine to succeed on the market these days, and permanent success can be secured only through the merits of the line. The hold that Cailler's has upon the consumers in Canada is one that will last because "impossible to imitate" delicacy of taste possessed by it cannot be equalled anywhere, and people will have what they want.

Borden's Condensed Milk.

It was somewhat surprising to those who had not watched the stupendous strides toward success in Canada made by Borden's Condensed Milk, to hear so many lady visitors exclaim when passing this display, "Oh, there's Borden's Condensed Milk booth." That they should be interested in a line shown before coming to the exhibition was rather strange. But it is not at all surprising when one considers the circumstances. Borden's Condensed Milk has won its way into thousands and thousands of Canadian homes. It is the greatest milk on which to successfully raise babies that the country has ever known, and mothers have found this out. Hence the popularity of Eagle Brand with the ladies. Considerable attention was paid to this display by Mr. Dunn. Eagle Brand Condensed Milk and Peerless Brand Evaporated Cream were the two lines shown in the Borden Condensed Milk booth. The latter line, by Borden's process, is the result of treatment of milk by evaporation. It is of the consistency of fresh cream, and serves all the purposes for which that article is required.

Bensdorp's Cocoa.

A cocoa which saves the user half the expense that cocoa usually costs is worth some consideration. Such is Bensdorp's. In making a cup of cocoa with Bensdorp's only half the quantity of cocoa should be used that is required of any other brand. This is because of the superior strength, quality and flavor of this widely known article. More than one housewife would scarcely believe the demonstrator who informed her that only half the quantity should be used to secure the same results obtained by using any other line.

Tillson's Oats.

Most pleasing was the display made of Tillson's Oats "A Food, Not a Fad," as some literature distributed stated. As this little booklet further states: "Fad cereals come and go, but a cereal food, such as Tillson's Pan-dried Oats, will always be the popular breakfast food with those who aim to be sturdy Canadians." And this is surely the case. It is something substantial that one requires for breakfast in this day of progress when man does so much on his morning meal. Tillson's (premium) 5-lb. package is very popular with the Canadian public generally. It retails at 25 cents.

C. B. Knox.

Knox' Sparkling Gelatine sells at 15 cents a package and at that price is a favorite with housekeepers, who have long since learned that it is a desirable gelatine because it is always the same —can always be depended upon to give the greatest satisfaction. At the exhibition the Knox booth was always a centre of interest to the fair sex, and Knox's No. 1 Sparkling Gelatine and Knox's No. 3 Acidulated Gelatine gained many new friends. The latter is an improved package, 15 cents, and is superior

Gillard & Co., London, Eng.

People who appreceate a first-class sauce and an A1 pickle, as well as grocers who desire to get the best trade and who wish to hold it when they do get it, should become acquainted with the goods put up by Gillard & Co., London, Eng. This famous Old Country house made a very creditable showing of their specialties at the fair. They supply, by royal warrant, sauces and pickles to His Majesty, the King, and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. Gillard's pickle, while it costs a little more, is certainly worth the extra price, for it gives continual satisfaction to the consumer and steady profit to the grocer.

Ogilvie Flour Mills Co.

The average visitor did not fail to read with interest the attractive electric sign over the booth of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, which told in the following words, flashed at intervals of a quarter of a minute, the story of Royal Household Flour and its perfections very eloquently :

There was a fascination about the myriad colored lights, which continually flashed in English or French, and those reading the words were impelled to visit the booth, where they were amply repaid in the practical demonstrations given daily on the way to use Royal Household in order to get most satisfactory results. M. A. Gray, chief of the company's chemical laboratory, was in charge of the actual baking proceedings, while H. Merrill was assisted by Messrs. Jeffrey and Malette, of the city traveling staff, in looking after the booth. At all times when visitors were in the Arena the booth of this company was almost inaccessible from the front. It is difficult to imagine the great interest taken in the demonstrations by housewives. Many of them were very much surprised on sampling the dainty bread, cake and other pastry prepared for them to learn that there were no "extras" in the making of these delicious specimens of the cooking art—simply the employment of Royal Household Flour and careful cooking. What was more surprising to numbers was the knowledge given them that Royal Household Flour is equally good for bread or pastry. No need to have two varieties of flour in the house when Royal Household is there, for it is equally satisfactory in plain and fancy baking.

The booth of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company was exceedingly attractive, the background most tastefully prepared representing our western provinces, there being scenes depicting the prairies, mountains and forests. Then there were four well built arches in front of these scenes making a most pleasing frame for the pictures. The famous Royal Household cook books were eagerly sought and thousands were distributed.

Wm. Clark.

Those who saw the exhibition of groceries last year thought that the display made by Wm. Clark, of Montreal, would be hard to improve on, but this year this packer of canned meats greatly surpassed his last year's efforts.

The booth occupied by this firm was in practically the same position as last year except that it was larger and gave more room for display.

The feature of the exhibit was a large pyramid of Clark's pork and beans of all sizes and kinds, the building of which required over 5,000 tins. The blue, gold and pink labels of the pork and beans in tomato sauce, chili sauce, and plain, respectively, were tastefully blended together, giving the whole a very pleasing appearance and showing the goods to advantage.

The Inglass brand of sliced smoked beef ox tongue and mince meat, as the brand name implies are put up in glass. There will be added to this list in the near future concentrated soups and the various kinds of potted meats. The Inglass brand of meats were greatly admired by the public and they will certainly be big sellers.

To the left and right of the pyramid of pork and beans, were displayed all the other lines of preserved meats and soups in tins prepared by this firm. In all some 400 cases or over 1,200 dozen canned meats, pork and beans, etc., were used in this exhibit.

Particular attention was given to display to the public some of the lines that are not quite so well known as Clark's corned beef, lunch tongue, roast beef, etc., and the visitors at the exhibition were very much impressed with the quality and general appearance of these specialities, among them being: Jellied hocks, Cambridge sausage, Paragon ox tongue, jellied veal, boneless pigs' feet, etc. This, with the photograph reproduced herewith, will give the reader some idea as to the magnificence of the display made by Wm. Clark.

Jones Bros. & Co.

Everybody admitted that the show cases, or silent partners, which were used in the booths at the fair were a decided improvement on the old counters which were utilized last year. Jones Bros. & Co., Limited, Toronto, supplied all the show cases (over 600 feet in all) and they certainly have reason to be proud of the line they manufacture. They occupied a booth themselves also, where were to be seen their various other store fixtures. The model counter made by this company is something very attractive, and in going around there were few grocers who did not see and admire the compact and complete build of this counter, which is in every sense of the word "model." This company manufactures a large line of silent salesmen ranging in cost from $5.50 to $15 a foot. No grocer will deny the advantage of a good silent salesman. It adds to the attractiveness of the store, permits of a prettier and larger display of stock and wins trade. While catalogues were not distributed indiscriminately—they cost so much to prepare—the firm will mail one on application to the office in Toronto (29 to 31 Adelaide St. west), or Montreal, (43 Bluery St.)

Quaker Canned Goods.

JONES BROS.' DISPLAY OF SHOW CASES.

Goods as it is better known. They were one of the five firms occupying a large booth in the centre four spaces. And their display—it was surely effective. It would be difficult, indeed, to imagine it anything other than a Quaker Canned Goods Booth. And during the course of the fair there seemed to be people hovering around it all the time, even when the crowds were smallest. Quaker quality is known everywhere first-class, A1 canned goods are appreciated. Being the largest independent fruit and vegetable packers in Canada it is not surprising that the Bloomfield Packing Company should be able to secure the most choice fruits and vegetables for use in their lines, but though they were among the smallest, rather than permit Quaker quality to deteriorate, the management would go out of business. So much for a reputation, and the grocers of the country know this to-day and buy Quaker Canned Goods, knowing them to be the kind they can recommend with safety to their customers.

A great deal of care was taken in arranging the booth and the effect when the display was completed was well worth coming a distance to see. Stanley Pearce, who had charge, was rewarded for his efforts in the result achieved. A few of the lines on display might be mentioned. These included Quaker Little Gem sugar peas, early June peas, sweet wrinkled peas, Petit Pois French peas, corn, succotash, beans, Petit haricots, French beans, tomatoes, pumpkins and in fruits apples, pears, peaches, red and black raspberries, several varieties cherries, strawberries, gooseberries, various lines of plums, red and black currants.

No effort was spared to get the best results out of the fair, in order to assist the grocer, through educating the consumer, to the greatest extent possible. Excellent tea spoons, bearing the Quaker Canned Goods imprint were distributed to the housewives, a constant reminder that Quaker goods should always be on the table. Beautiful pictures, quite free from advertising matter except for the Quaker stamp on the back gladdened the heart of many a woman, while the great limerick competition was talk all over town. Beginning Tuesday, April 21, two cases of Quaker Canned Goods were given in prizes daily for the best missing lines received for such limericks as follows:

For Quaker goods, our firm is noted
You can always hear them quoted
Tomatoes, corn, peas, beans and pumpkin

Needless to say, replies came in by the hundred and the prizes were delivered by the Montreal and Quebec Province agents of the company, Mathewson's Sons, 202 McGill St. There was a new limerick each day.

Hudon, Hebert & Co., Limited.

There were many pretty displays at the Arena, but there was one which looked as if infinite care had been taken and no expense spared to make it as perfect as man could from an artistic and common sense business standpoint. That was the double booth used by Hudon, Hebert & Co., Ltd. The firm showed a variety of small goods taken from the immense stocks they carry for three of their foreign principals, Alex. Cairns & Sons, Paisley, Scotland, jams, jellies and marmalades; the Bon Ami Company, New York, makers of the famous cleansing soap, Bon Ami; and the Stavanger Preserving Co., Norway, who pack the world famous Crossed Fish brand boneless sardines. Hudon, Hebert & Co., Ltd., have the reputation among the grocers of Canada of handling only the best lines of groceries, domestic and imported, while their agency lines, on a par with those mentioned in the foregoing, are of the best in the world. Then there was "Gazelle" brand canned fruits and vegetables. These must not be forgotten. "Gazelle" brand, which is the special, private brand of the house, has secured for itself a most enviable place in the progressive grocery stores throughout the length and breadth of Canada, signifying as it does highest quality—the kind that the packers are willing to guarantee. Cairns' marmalades, jams and jellies are delicious. A big bunch of satisfaction most assuredly goes with every jar. These goods are put up in 1-lb. patent glass jars, 1-lb. porcelain pots, and one line, Cairns' pure calves' feet table jelly, is packed in neat 1 and 2-lb. square glass patent air-tight caps. Also 7-lb. tins are procurable. Naturally the range of fruits put up is broad, and quite sufficient to permit of a wise selection for a trial order, should the grocer not already be numbered among the fortunates selling Cairns' to satisfied customers.

Bon Ami is so widely known that it is hardly necessary to say anything about it. "It hasn't scratched yet," as the literature given out very aptly states.

It is a well known fact that the best sardines in the world have been caught recently off the shores of Norway. In fact, they have been pronounced par excellence by French and Spanish experts. Crossed Fish brand boneless sardines are very small and tender, and having been slightly smoked before packing, their delicacy of flavor is enhanced, while that "rising" after eating, which is the bane of sardines generally, is done away with by the special process. Hence the popularity, the lasting favor, given this famous brand by connoisseurs.

EXHIBIT OF THE SNAP COMPANY.

ST. LAWRENCE SUGAR REFINING CO.'S BOOTH.—See Description of Exhibit on Page 57.

The Snap Company.

"Better Than Soap" is the wording on the tins containing Snap, the antiseptic hand cleaner, and after witnessing a practical demonstration of this fact the average person was bound to admit that Snap was a wonderful cleanser. Although Snap has not been on the market a full year it is known almost everywhere in Canada. Being a paste cleaner, as well as antiseptic, and seeing that it does not chap the hands when used, it is not surprising that it should catch the fancy of practical mechanics, who find it difficult to get machine grease off their hands; of housekeepers, who find it invaluable for sinks, baths paint work, etc.; of printers, who remove ink from their hands with ease through its use, and others who find the ordinary cake of soap a poor means of taking off real dirt in a thorough manner. With the grocery and general store trade Snap has been a great success. It is packed in cases of three dozen tins, which retail at 15 cents each or 2 for 25 cents, and few grocers keep a case long in the store, so strong is demand for it. C. W. Gregory, manager of the company, was in charge of the simple, but attractive booth which the company occupied. Samples were distributed by the thousand during the course of the fair. It is the grocer who really should sell this necessary household article, the housewife calls regularly and a hint of "Snap" means a sale every time.

EXHIBIT OF BALMORAL PURE FOOD PRODUCTS.

Balmoral Pure Food Products.

Quality certainly is the outstanding feature of Balmoral Brand marmalades, james and jellies. The proprietor is J. W. Windsor, Montreal, and no expense has been spared to ensure the Canadian public being offered something they can depend upon, the first time, the second time, and all the time, when they ask for, and receive, Balmoral, from their grocer. That through their strenuous efforts, they have succeeded in accomplishing their purpose seemed to be the unanimous verdict of housewives who tasted of the dainty goods which were given out on little dishes by a couple by expert demonstrators.

Balmoral Scotch marmalade is worthy of special mention. The oranges for this marmalade are procured from Seville, the finest bitter orange-growing district in the world. Being carefully selected, the very finest only are accepted. These oranges are brought into Canada, and turned over to the company's marmalade expert, who, in his own way and using only pure Canadian granulated sugar, turns out a jar of marmalade which cannot be surpassed in Canada or out of it.

The same judicious care is exercised in securing the fruits from which Balmoral jams and jellies are manufactured. The most excellent Canadian-grown peaches, pears, plums, raspberries, strawberries, red and black currants, are bought by men who know what first-class fruits are and they will take nothing but the best. These fruits are placed with jam and jelly experts and are offered the public in the form of Balmoral jams, jellies and preserves, pure, true always to be depended upon. Another special line in Balmoral goods was that of preserved sliced oranges in glass jars. This is something new for Canada and looked exceedingly delicious. All Balmoral goods are attractively labelled and frequently sell themselves, they make very attractive shelf and window displays and once a customer tries them he or she, is converted to use only Balmoral. It is not simply the package, but the package and the real quality inside the package. Balmoral pure food products are obtainable in one and two-pound glass jars, hermetically sealed caps, and in tins which contain 1, 2, 4, 5 and 7 pounds. A very pretty card, two children carrying a jar of Balmoral, with the words "It's Guid" underneath, attracted much attention.

A. Stewart is manager for all Balmoral manufacturers and is responsible for the neat and attractive display made at the show.

Thomas J. Lipton.

That the extensive advertising campaign carried on by Thomas J. Lipton since the opening of the Canadian office at 75 Front St. east, Toronto, coupled with the genuine merit, has convinced the people of the Dominion that the name of Lipton is synonymous with the highest quality in pure food products was demonstrated at the exhibition of groceries which was recently held at The Arena in Montreal, no one will question.

The large double booth occupied by this firm was constantly filled with visitors who, seated at the tables so daintily arranged, were given an opportunity to test for themselves Lipton's tea, Lipton's coffee and Lipton's table jelly and, becoming acquainted with the merits of these goods, should go to their grocer and secure the same. Everybody was satisfied, in fact, everybody was more than satisfied. The seven employes in attendance were very anxious to give every information as to the manner in which Lipton's goods are prepared in order to make them the market leaders, and were kept constantly busy.

The fact of Thomas J. Lipton owning large tea estates in Ceylon insures the grocer in obtaining absolutely the finest tea grown, packed in an airtight tin which is by far the best package to pack this commodity in and he should have his stock well assorted with this particular line at all times. Their 40c and 50c lines have met with wonderful success since their introduction on the Canadian market. Their success has been such as would not be possible but for the fact that the tea wins and holds customers. It appears to be "once a Lipton tea drinker, always a Lipton tea drinker." This is a solid foundation upon which to build for success, and the two million packages packed by this firm weekly speaks for itself.

A. E. Carson, Canadian manager of Thomas J. Lipton, spent a few days in the city, and in speaking to The Grocer said that he was more than pleased with the sales since the first of the year, each month showing a large increase over the previous month. He said, coupled with other advertising, their demonstrations which they have been giving in various parts of Canada pleased the trade immensely, besides increasing sales to a marvelous extent. During these demonstrations, in order to help the grocer introduce Lipton's jelly tablets and Lipton's coffee, certain free days were set apart on which with every sale of one pound of tea one jelly tablet was given away free. On one certain day in each store in which they have demonstrated they gave away one pound of coffee with two pounds of tea 40 cents and upwards, and in this manner have increased, not only the sale of their tea, but their coffee and jelly tablets, these two lines being second only to Lipton's world-famous tea.

EXHIBIT OF THOS. J. LIPTON'S PRODUCTS.

D. F. Carter, traveler for the Province of Quebec, was in charge of their exhibit.

The Ozo Company, Limited.

The wonderful growth of the Ozo Company, Montreal, has illustrated the advancement of the pickle, vinegar, jam and catsup business in Canada. The marvelous progress of the one is indelibly connected with the magnificent success of the other. In 1901, when the Ozo Company began to manufacture in Canada, they occupied a small one-storey building. To-day the company occupies a series of factories and warehouses, the largest of which is six storeys in height and comprises two city blocks. There are different factories and warehouses for the various lines manufactured by the company. When they started operating Canadians felt that they could not obtain a first-class pickle, catsup, vinegar or jam unless the label bore the imprint of an English or American house. To-day there is not a true Canadian in all of the Dominion that does not know and appreciate the lines put up in Montreal by Canada's premier pickle and vinegar house. Ozo pickles have got the reputation of being the equal of anything made anywhere in the world, and superior to anything but the very best products of the old established firms in England, which they easily equal. Canada has now got the reputation of being able to hold her own in these industries. It is not surprising that such success should attend the efforts of the Ozo Company. No expense is too great, no detail too small to look after, which will enable them to further perfect their products. When they started they had just finished a most expensive tour of examination of the finest English pickle, sauce, vinegar and jam manufacturing houses, as well as the leading continental and American factories. Their experts gained every pointer possible from these firms. A most tiresome research was conducted for the purpose of finding out what seeds would produce best results in Canada. Then the farmers in the vicinity of Montreal were supplied with the seeds which passed the critical experimental test, and there are to-day hundreds of farmers, in one vast organization, who are doing nothing else but growing vegetables for the Ozo Company. This is but one simple instance, but it illustrates the pains taken by the company to make their product perfect. John G. Carsley, president of the company, has been its moving genius throughout, and has probably done more for these industries, for Canada, than any other one man.

Lake-of-the-Woods Milling Company.

Artistic simplicity characterized the display made by the Lake-of-the-Woods Milling Company, but the arrangement of Five Roses Flour and Five Roses Breakfast Food was such as to enable visitors to see the various sizes in which these goods are obtainable, and also, if they were so minded, to secure information on the composition of Five Roses Flour—how it is that it possesses so many thousands of friends among the housewives. As is usual at such fairs, the company had placed at intervals on their counters vases containing five beautiful roses, each significant of the famous brand.

In building the pyramid, with four side arches, which is the form the display took, in the neighborhood of two thousand various-sized bags were used, which will give one an idea as to the pains taken by the company to make their showing a good one. That they succeeded in their efforts was made manifest by the numerous flattering remarks passed daily by visitors.

Five Roses Flour is sold in all parts of Canada in packages from barrel size down to 7-pound bags, while Five Roses Breakfast Food is put up in bags ranging from 6 pounds up to 98 pounds. These packages were all made to show up attractively in the large centre booth, consisting of four spaces, which the firm occupied. As already remarked, the arrangement of the booth was very attractive. Six show cases were used on the four sides, these containing the smaller flour packages in great number and the Breakfast Food. The frosted white electric globes adorning the top of the arch framework of the booth marked it from a distance as a distinguished display.

them to get even better results from the use of Five Roses than they do to-day, by hearing something from competent demonstrators, or securing some literature—and they were not disappointed in their visit. F. Laing, J. MacGregar at the fair, which was the object of many flattering remarks on its attractiveness, was under the control of their Montreal manager, Oliver B. Leslie, who with three city travelers, were not a little bit backward about telling visitors

A considerable number of grocers, both local and from outside points, expressed themselves as being very well pleased indeed with the showing made by the manufacturers of the famous Five Roses brand, with which all were very familiar. As for the housekeepers, they were there by the hundred every day, anxious to learn a few more pointers if possible which would make it possible for what Perrin's biscuits were. That is, Mr, Leslie was not backward about advertising the biscuits and confectionery when he was there—for the constantly growing trade of the firm in this part of the country requires increased attention from Mr. Leslie and his traveling and office staffs each month. biscuits. These were much appreciated by visitors. It was not possible, of course, to show all of the three hundred varieties manufactured by the firm, but their leaders were very much in evidence, such lines as their Sterling cream sodas, and an extensive range of hard sweet biscuits, and attractive package goods being given especial attention. Newport chocolates, manufactured by this firm, possess a very enviable reputation in Canada as high-class and dependable chocolates. D. S. Perrin & Co. are the largest biscuit and confectionery manufacturers in Canada, employing a staff of over forty traveling salesmen, and having branches in Montreal, Ottawa, Hamilton, Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver.

Chocolats Meurisse.

Most pleasing indeed was the excellent display made by J. A. Herreboudt, the Canadian agent for Chocolats Meurisse, those dainty lines which seem to have met with the approval of all lovers of what is best in plain and fancy chocolates. This firm engaged two booths at the Arena, where very neat displays of all their lines were made, and competent lady demonstrators, under the charge of travelers, looked after the interests of the company. Meurisse croquettes, tablets, of different sizes, de luxe chocolates, chocolats aux naisettes, Rhum Orange Bars, assorted bon bons, cream chocolates and cream bars, are only a few of a great variety of lines made by this enterprising firm, which was established in Antwerp, Belgium, in 1845, and which has been going ahead steadily ever since. It is not more than a year that these people have been going after the Canadian trade, but in that time they have been able to gain a wonderfully large number of customers, all of whom are pleased—and what is more, their customers, the people who eat the chocolates, are delighted with what they are being supplied with.

During the course of the fair Mr. Meurisse was in attendance for a few hours, having come out from Belgium to visit the trade with Mr. Herreboudt, who has just returned to Canada from an extended trip to the country of his birth. Mr. Meurisse will look around the trade in different Canadian cities before returning home, and will make provision for the handling with greater facility of the many lines he is placing on this market through his Canadian agent, at 22 Lemoine St.

SPLENDID BOOTH OF CANADIAN CANNERS.

Canadian Canners, Ltd.

At the north end of the Arena, the northern-most booth of the five in the centre, was the magnificent display of the Canadian Canners, Ltd., of Hamilton. As a glance at the two photographs accompanying this description will show, no efforts were spared to make the showing as pleasing and excellent as possible. The many brands put up by the Canners and known all over the Dominion, were all given equal prominence, and most of the housewives visiting the fair recognized old friends in the brands on display, which included Aylmer, Canada First Horseshoe, Auto, Log Cabin, Little Chief, Simcoe, Kent, Maple Leaf, White Rose, Thistle, Grand River, Lion and Hygiene. This latter line particularly, is one worth the careful consideration of every grocer who considers himself progressive. The fruits and vegetables packed under this brand are put up in enamel-lined cans and the caps are put on these tins by being clamped. The point of excellence is that no solder at all is used, while the employing of enamel lining maintains the fruit or vegetable in all its natural flavor and freshness. So far the brand has made a great hit wherever introduced, and without a doubt, it will be the most popular line on the market once it is generally known. Besides the sanitary and flavor preserving state of the tin used the label is one of the finest it is possible to get in Canada, and, of course, the quality of the fruits and vegetables is right up to the mark, the Canadian Canners sustaining their well-known reputation.

Besides the canned goods on display the visitor noticed a neat showing of catsups, sauces, jams, preserves, marmalade and table relishes. Demonstrators served tasty dishes of peas and other canned vegetables as well as delicious fruits which left a lingering longing for more.

Speaking of peas, there is much good work that can be done by the retailer in educating the consumer to the fact that we Canadians are producing peas every bit the equal in quality to the finest imported. Many think that it is only the imported pea that should be produced when a customer calls for the best in the shop, or else one of the more widely known brands of cheap peas is handed out. The Canada First Faultless Pea, put up by the Canadian Canners, is, in point of size and flavor, every bit as good as the best French line. The pea is not colored in the least, but is in its natural state, retaining all the flavor and excellence it possessed at the time it was packed. This brand and other sweet wrinkled peas of the Canners could be advantageously pushed by many a grocer.

Thousands of visitors called at the booth during the course of the show, and it is safe to say, none of these went away without being attracted to the excellent display of the Canners, the majority of them carrying with them a taste for canned fruits and vegetables which they will satisfy with the Canners' well-known brands. This is where the grocer comes in. First-class souvenir post cards were given out.

J. Alex. Gordon & Co., who are agents in Montreal for the Canadian Canners, report an enormous increase in business this past couple of seasons.

EXHIBIT OF CANADIAN CANNERS, OF HAMILTON, ONT.

Laporte, Martin & Co.

A splendid, large picture of the company's excellent, modern fireproof warehouse formed a fitting background for the booth occupied by Laporte, Martin & Co., one of Montreal's most progressive wholesale grocery houses. The new building, which is located at 562 to 568 St. Paul St., is one of the finest of its kind in the city. It is seven stories high, and is constructed of solid stone and brick. Each floor is tested to stand a weight of 400 pounds to the square foot, which will give one some idea of the storage capacity of the place. With the splendid new building at their disposal the firm will be in a position to give ther customers even more satisfactory service than before, looking after all their requirements, expeditiously, completely and otherwise satisfactorily.

At the fair the firm's widely known "Soleil" brand imported French canned goods occupied prominent position. Among the many excellent lines put up under this brand might be mentioned Pate de Fois Gras, in terrines and tins. Asparagus, peas, haricots etc. "Soleil" fruits in glass pots are very fast sellers, because of their genuine merit. All in all "Soleil" brand goods are well worth trying out if the grocer does not already handle them.

them by the famous house of Boule, in France. This olive oil is put up in litres, quarts, pints, half-pints and various sized tins. in the many lines put up by this widely known firm of biscuit and confectionery manufacturers. The attractive advertising which this firm has been doing of late has certainly given the people "McCormick Biscuit Fever" and once they get that it means steady sales of these lines for the grocer. Quality is the watchword at the factory and nothing is allowed to go to the grocer in the way of biscuits or confectionery which the firm is not willing to guarantee as the finest. Perhaps this in a measure accounts for the wonderful success attained by McCormick in the Canadian market. Their Jersey Cream Soda has come

Many thousands of biscuits were given out as samples by the demonstrators, which will result, no doubt, in a noticeable increase in the sales of McCormick's biscuits by grocers.

Mr. Hargreave, the Montreal Branch Manager, was frequently at the exhibition and was always willing to give visitors information. The large number of grocers who visited the show were quite interested in the display.

McCormick's Biscuits.

"How Many Tons is the Daily Capacity of Jersey Cream Sodas at the McCormick Factory, London?" This was the query which greeted the eyes of the visitor at the booth of the McCormick Biscuit people, of London. It was a "Guessing Contest" and it certainly kept the people guessing and interested to be recognized as a necessity on the table at meal time and the wise grocer who carries a stock is reaping profits daily. Then there are all those fancy biscuits made by McCormick.

To name a few of them, Graham Wafer, Windsor, Cafe Noir, Five O'Clock Tea, Banana Finger, Tourist, Maple Mallow, Fig Bar, Raspberry Sponge, Cracknels and Society biscuits are well worth looking up. They are the acme of perfection and gain new customers, the kind that stay, because no other biscuits seem to be of such quality as those bearing the name McCormick.

For that matter, it is always to the fore, for it has won a place for itself in the homes of Canada, and in the grocery stores perforce, from which it cannot be dislodged. Housekeepers visiting the Arena were presented with dainty miniature cans containing a sample of the famous brand, and in this way those not acquainted with Crown Brand were given an opportunity of tasting it. The large central booth occupied by the Edwardsburg Starch Company was a model of neat simplicity and excellence. Many expected the company to make a large display, employing thousands of tins, but instead few tins were employed and these were placed so that the effect was much better because of the lack of quantity.

Crown Brand Corn Syrup is obtainable in 2-lb., 5-lb., 10-lb. and 20-lb. tins. Having such a large booth, it was easy for the company to make also a very pretty display of Benson's Prepared Corn Starch, Silver Gloss Starch, Enamel Starch and their other lines. These goods possess, besides the ever-important quality, the extra advantage of most pleasing packages, which makes the work of the grocer easier. For that matter, so well and widely known are the products of this progressive house, and so great has been their advertising that little effort is required to even introduce their lines, let alone sell them after they are introduced. Edwardsburg No. 1 White Starch, such a favorite for laundry work with the housekeepers of Canada, was given a prominent place, too. Much interesting and novel advertising matter was distributed.

EXHIBIT OF CHRISTIE, BROWN & CO., TORONTO.

Christie, Brown & Company.

Only by having perfect quality to fall back upon, only when success is built upon perfection in the product manufactured can a firm maintain for years the confidence and patronage of the grocery trade of Canada, as has the Toronto firm of Christie, Brown & Company. These biscuit manufacturers occupied a double booth, and the neat display of their various leading lines attracted the attention of hundreds of grocers who visited the fair, as well as of thousands of housekeepers, who were there to get in touch with the best pure food products. To the majority of the householders the name of the firm was not new, for they had been using Christie's biscuits for years. The firm's well-known zephyr cream soda biscuit has hosts of friends and users in every little village in the country. The neat half-pound package which retails at 5 cents has been a successful innovation. While there is not space to mention all the varieties manufactured by this enterprising firm, it is at least, worth while stating a few of the leading varieties of the six hundred manufactured, which include assorted sandwiches, water ice wafers, Alexandria, social tea cheese wafers, cafe noir, oatmeal, fruit, ginger bread, short bread, arrowroot, fig bars, rusk, wafer rolls, reception wafers, home-made ginger wafers, etc.

There was on view also Christie's Infant Food, which is well and favorably known to the Canadian trade.

The attendants were ready and willing at all times to give particulars and samples to visitors, demonstrating the superior quality of the goods.

Aylmer Condensed Milk Co.

One of the booths which all visitors found most interesting was that of the Aylmer Condensed Milk Company. Here demonstrators were kept busy during the whole time of the fair telling people about Canada First Evaporated Cream (unsweetened) and Canada First Condensed Milk (sweetened). It is pleasing to those desiring the best evaporated cream and condensed milk to know that the factory of the Aylmer Condensed Milk Company is located in the finest dairying district of Ontario, and is the most modern and sanitary in the country, no expense having been spared to ensure its perfection while it was being built. Their milk inspector keeps tab on the farmers from whom they buy, insisting upon strictest cleanliness. Farmers' cans are sterilized before leaving the factory to go back to the dairy, and even with all these precautions the milk, before passing through their process, is strained six or seven times. This process is one of the most scientific imaginable, so that when the milk comes out ready to be tinned it is as pure as can be. The cream turned out has not that cooked taste which spoils many a line. After passing through the sterilizing room it is held in storage for thirty days, and then if it passes the exacting tests it is labelled and shipped. The cream leaves no sediment in the bottom of the can nor any objectionable butter fat on the top of the contents. The packages used are most attractive, and what is more, they are sanitary. Great success has attended the efforts of the company in placing the new lines on the market.

In Montreal J. Alex. Gordon & Co., the widely known brokerage firm, is looking after the new lines.

St. Lawrence Sugar Refining Co., Ltd.

A unique booth was that of the St. Lawrence Sugar Refining Co., Limited, who, with raw and manufactured sugar made a most pleasing, interesting and instructive display. As will be seen in the photograph reproduced here, the tall sugar cane sticks from the West Indies are given prominence in the display. In the background are tiers of sugar in bags, running from 100 pounds to 20 pounds. Then there are pyramids of barrels, which contain Golden Yellow, extra ground, powdered, confectioners' granulated, bright coffee, No. 1 Yellow Berry granulated and extra granulated. Above the bags will be noticed a large picture of the company's magnificent big works in East Montreal. The raw sugar is brought in here direct from the West Indies by Canadians, and the finest granulated and yellow sugars are turned out by Canadian labor.

This booth was the Mecca of visitors, all of whom seemed proud in the knowledge that Canada was turning out sugar the equal of any manufactured anywhere, and that Canadian workmen, backed by Canadian capital, were accomplishing this.

J. Alex. Gordon & Co. are sales agents for the St. Lawrence Sugar Refining Co., Limited, and had charge of the booth.

A BOOMERANG.

The proprietor of a store, a man of most excitable temperament, was forever scolding his clerks for their indifference in the matter of possible sales. One day, hearing a clerk say to a customer, "No, we have not had any for a long time," the proprietor, unable to countenance such an admission, began to work himself into the usual rage. Fixing a glassy eye on the clerk, he said to the customer, "We have plenty in reserve, madam, plenty downstairs." Whereupon the customer looked dazed, and then, to the amazement of the proprietor, burst into hysterical laughter and quit the shop. "What did she say to you?" demanded the proprietor of the clerk. "We haven't had any rain lately."

THE SALMON SITUATION.

There is every indication that the market for canned salmon will be higher this season. Of late the interest of the trade has centred largely on salmon and it is interesting to know what prospects are. There can be no doubt about the fact that holdings are light. There is not a great deal of stock held locally while what is in first hands on the coast is very limited as well. In the States business last fall and winter was larger than for years, so that they are pretty well cleaned up there. In Canada many jobbers report business last fall and winter as having been rather slow as regards salmon, attributing the cause largely to the high prices and to financial conditions. It is safe to say, however, that we will go into the new season with small stocks everywhere, with the scarcity on the coasts particularly noticeable. Then, tending to firm up the market still further, reports seem to indicate that this will be the shortest pack in the four year period so that there will not be relief in bountiful receipts. Speaking of the run of sockeyes expected on Puget Sound, one American authority recently stated that 75,000 cases was the most that could be expected this season, while there would be no occasion for surprise if the pack did not total more than 50,000 cases. The proportion packed on the Columbia River will not be much greater.

A firm of brokers in Montreal showed the writer a letter from the British Columbia Packers' Association, of Vancouver this week, in which the statement was made that a very poor run was expected on the Fraser River the coming season and in consequence only seven canneries would be operated, out of twenty-two run last year. The British Columbia Packers' Association will run only three. Continuing, the letter says that stocks are limited to a few halves, and holdings in England are lighter than they have been for a number of years. Packers do not desire to make quotations for Eastern Canada for some little time yet, as they wish to know what they will have to sell before making the prices. The pack, however, will be small and prices higher. This letter was dated April 14.

One sale of Fraser River Sockeye was made on the coast just recently at $6.50 which is 50c. higher than the opening price. One Montreal broker, closely in touch with the situation, estimated the pack as one-half of last year, and it will be remembered the yield for 1907 was small.

THE FARMERS' FINANCIAL POSITION.

By J. W. Wheaton.

The financial position of the farmer at this juncture is of some importance in the business world. The rush of the spring season is on. Larger business is looked for. Its coming will depend in no small degree upon the farmer. Is he in as good position to buy as other years? Have the somewhat trying experiences of the past fall and winter impaired his power to buy? Is there as much ready money in the country as there was a year ago? Will trade be seriously hampered by the farmers' financial position this spring?

During the past few weeks the writer has received reliable information from a number of well-informed people in all parts of the Dominion on this question and is in a position to give a fairly accurate summary of the farmers' financial position. Leaving the West out of the reckoning, it is, generally speaking, fairly satisfactory. The farmer has come through the financial crisis in good shape. He has had, in some cases, to expend more for feed than usual and to economize in his feeding operations. This has left him in the one case with less ready money this spring and in the other with his live stock in thin condition. Aside from these drawbacks the farmer has little ground for complaint and begins the spring season without any serious handicap. There is a tendency to economize, however, which may affect trade more than any lessening of the farmers' power to buy. This tightening of the purse string will be applied largely to the luxuries and not to the necessities. The farmer, this spring so our correspondents tell us, is buying and is able to buy everything necessary for carrying on his farming operations, but he is indulging very little in unnecessaries. In some instances the old binder will do duty another year, the old harness will be polished up a bit and the young lady will have to wait awhile for her piano. Economy is in the country air as well as in the city air and a little of it applied to both may do good and not harm.

The feed scarcity has been more acute in Ontario than in any other part of Canada. Live stock husbandry is the chief industry of Ontario farmers. Comparatively little grain is sold off the farm. It is fed largely to stock. A feed scarcity with high prices means expensive production of stock. And it is just here where the Ontario farmer has been hit the hardest and more particularly the one who depends upon cattle and hogs for a revenue. During the winter these have been low in price and the price of feed being high there has been no profit in their production. The hog raiser should have had, at least, $6.50 a cwt. for his hogs to have come out even on the deal. But he got less than $5 a cwt. most of the time, which, of course, meant a loss. Dairy farmers who are in the majority in Ontario, have had several good years and can stand a little setback without interfering with their financial position very seriously. The feed scarcity will no doubt hamper dairy operations this spring somewhat. Cows have come through the winter in thin condition. Many, because of the feed scarcity last fall, sold their cows. These conditions will affect the output of cheese and butter for a while and lessen receipts. But they are by no means general, even in Ontario. Fully one-half of the farmers have had plenty of feed and some to spare, which has helped to swell the year's income considerably.

Quebec is somewhat similarly situated to Ontario, though the feed scarcity was, on the whole, not so serious. In some districts, notably those supplying milk to Montreal and there are a number of these, farmers have had to buy larger quantities of feed than usual at high prices, so that there has been considerably less profit in producing milk.

In the outlying country districts, our correspondents say, there was plenty of feed and farmers are no worse off this season than a year ago. Dairying plays an important part in Quebec agriculture. Prices have ruled high and farmers have been making money in the business, and though the cost of production has been increased by the higher prices for feed their financial position has not been seriously impaired as they have had little feed to buy. On the whole, therefore, the Quebec farmer financially speaking, is in very little different position from what he was a year ago.

As we journey east and get into the Maritime Provinces, the farmers' position this spring materially improves. That part of Canada had a good average year in 1907, and in some parts an exceptionally good year. Prince Edward Island had the best crop yield for many years and as prices for cereals were high farmers there are in splendid shape this spring. They realized nearly twice as much for their grain and he is a poor fellow, indeed, who did not make money out of his farm last season. The Island farmer begins the spring operations under flying colors. He is able to buy what he wants and is not stinting himself. In Nova Scotia and New Brunswick the farmers' financial position, generally speaking, is very little different from that of a year ago. In the Yarmouth district there are reports of a feed shortage, but east conditions are better. New Brunswick farmers are generally no worse off than a year ago and are in a position to do as much buying. There is a tendency to economize, however, which may affect business somewhat.

This is in brief an accurate summary of the situation from Ontario east. It shows a condition of affairs that the business man need lose little sleep over. Of the West, little need be said. Conditions there are well known, and what are not known, the Westerner is not saying anything about. He is not talking of the past. It is buried. Let it remain. The 1908 crop is the thing to look to. Seeding operations are well advanced. The acreage sown shows a large increase. Seeding conditions are the most favorable in years. The outlook is splendid. Thus you are loaded up. The 1907 crop was poor. Farmers are hampered somewhat. But they will recover, 1908 has big things in store. Such is the West. The now is less important than the future. Let it go at that.

CANNED GOODS AGREEMENT.

An effort is being made to revive the agreement of last year between the packers and wholesalers in regard to canned goods. Some conferences have been held during the past week, but it is understood that nothing definite has yet been done. It is expected new prices will be issued shortly.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST

Prospect for Best Harvest in Country's History—Some Interesting Facts About Western Live Stock—Materials and Labor Cheaper in Building Trade.

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Winnipeg Correspondent.

If there is any truth in the saying that "Well begun is half done" then, indeed, is the Canadian West half way on the road to one of the most bountiful harvests in her history.

After 25 days of almost perfect seeding weather, on a seed bed in excellent condition, there has been two days of a gentle, general rain with fair weather promised. Over 85 per cent. of the wheat is in the ground and from more than one section comes the report that it is up two and three inches. A considerable amount of oats has already been seeded and by the end of next week the bulk of the crop will be in all over the Canadian West. All the wheat will be seeded fully one month ahead of last year.

The market conditions are very much more bullish than they were a week ago. Receipts have fallen off steadily in the face of higher prices, and on Saturday they reached the lowest point, being only 49 cars of all grains against 349 in 1907. The demand for low-grade wheats has been good all week with an increased inquiry for contract wheat towards the end of the week, and a shrinking of the spread between two and three northern. The only distinctly bearish factor in the western market to-day is the limited demand for tonnage out of Fort William and Port Arthur, a number of the boats have not made their first charter even yet.

George Fisher, Canadian representaiev of the Scottish Co-operative Society, who are heavy consumers of Canadian wheats, returned from a two months' stay in Britain during the week and reports that the British millers, his own society among them, are shy of our very high prices. With a spread of 23c between Winnipeg and Chicago July wheat the British miller is buying Chicago. Of course, Winnipeg July is old wheat and Chicago July is new wheat, but even so the British miller thinks the spread is too great. The British miller will have to have a certain amount of Canadian Western wheat, but according to Mr. Fisher, he will have as little as possible at the present high prices. There is just the chance, however, and it looks daily greater, that the West has so little wheat to offer that in the end the British miller will have to take it at our price and not his own. It is one of those things about which it is impossible to foretell correctly.

The movement of live stock is increasing and the demand has improved for well-fed beasts, both for local consumption and for export. There has been a general advance in prices and good export steers brought 5c at Winnipeg on Friday with 5¼c paid for a few extra choice steers running to 1,400 pounds. Dealers continue to complain of the very small percentage of this class of steer that is offering and a visit to the stock yards is instructive to the feeders of cattle, if they would only take the lesson. On Friday morning last a stock train of some 13 or 14 cars came in off one of the branch lines between three and four in the morning. By 5.45 one of the largest exporters in the West and a well-known M.P.P., was at the yards and had the very choicest of the steers culled and bargained for before his rivals in the trade were on the spot, though it is doubtful if one of them was later than 6.30 that morning. While the high figures already quoted were paid for the few, the many brought only 3 to 3½ and some of them only 2¾.

There has been a sharp advance in the prices of hogs 5¾ being paid freely Friday and Saturday and 6c will rule for all offerings on Monday with prospects of still higher figures.

One of the best illustrations of how it pays to feed animals was given this week, when Mr. Henderson, of Carnduff, sold a bunch of 100 yearling lambs that he had fed through the winter on elevator screenings. These lambs brought 7c per pound on the hoof at Winnipeg and averaged 85 to 90 pounds live weight. They had been sheared about February, as is the custom here when feeding screenings to lambs or sheep in pens, to prevent them suffering from ticks. The sheep were well bred and of good quality and the wool unwashed would bring 10c per pound. This, at the lowest calculation, would bring $60 for the wool and the lambs brought at least $600. Not a bad result from five months' feeding with food that would otherwise be burned. In addition to the cash Mr. Henderson has the additional value in his land of the scavenging of the lambs last summer and fall and the manure this winter. The lambs when slaughtered made a wonderful show on the hooks of the packing house. There was not a spot on the kidneys where the fat was not at least three-fourths of an inch thick, while the veil covered the lamb clear down to the neck.

This is another case where the merchant at country towns might get in good work and establish closer relations with his customers. He is in the town, near the elevators and it would be easy for him to manage the securing of screenings. Again, correspondence is an easier matter to him than it is to the average farmer and he could readily find where bunches of just such lambs could be bought in the fall for winter feeding. The more the supplies of food of all kinds fall below the requirements, the more it seems to your correspondent that it is a lack of unity between the man who produces or should produce and the man who buys and sells. A man from England, who had spent many years in Australia, looked at these lambs and said, "What a shame that the West should bring mutton from Prince Edward Island. I have eaten mutton in the best districts of Australia, I am used to the very best in England, indeed! I come from the Southdown country, but with the single exception of the famous Welsh mutton, I have never tested any that has so good a flavor as the mutton raised on the Western prairie and finished on refuse grain. The Australian mutton is simply not in it."

One of the farmers who was in selling cattle this week, and whose steers brought the top of the market, was asked by your correspondent why there were not hundreds of such steers instead of only a score or two. He was a great big Westerner and he straightened himself and looked the questioner in the eye and said, "Do you really want to know?" "Yes." "Well it ain't polite, but the truth is they're too d——n lazy." And some of the merchants are not much more energetic, or, for their own sakes, they would have prodded the farmers up to doing better, long before this.

A week or two ago attention was called to the increased demand for land for truck gardens and poultry runs round Winnipeg. The Real Estate Exchange has been getting out some figures along the line of the market for garden truck and poultry. They are very conservative, but serve to show the opening there is for gardens and runs of this kind near Winnipeg. Last year Winnipeg brought 750,000 pounds of onions from the United States, 200,000 pounds from Australia and 300,000 from Egypt; 750,000 pounds of cabbage and cauliflower was brought in mainly from the American side, 300,000 dozen eggs and 350,000 pounds of poultry was also brought in from the East and the United States.

At last Winnipeg is able to claim that there is a reduction in the cost of building. In the first place there has been a drop of nearly $5 per 1,000 feet on all kinds of lumber, laths are 25c per 100 cheaper and wall plaster is $1 per ton cheaper. Builders report also that labor is cheaper and more abundant and as there is no fear of a strike in any section of the building trade, contractors are making estimates with greater confidence and on narrower margins than at any time in the last four years. Dealers in building materials report demand very brisk, and The Alsip Brick Co., one of the largest in the West, report orders on hand for over $2,500,000 of brick. Architects report business good and that it opened much earlier than last year. The building season has five weeks longer at the beginning than it was last year, whatever the end may be.

Tar paper is one of the great factors in building in the Canadian West and Winnipeg is at last to have its own factory for the making of this material. It is being erected by the firm of Merrick, Anderson & Co. in the Elmwood suburb. The plant is to cost $28,000 and will be complete and ready for use on June 15th. It will be of reinforced concrete with a wooden warehouse 120 feet by 60.—H.

WHOLESALER'S NAME ON LABEL.

Bill to Amend Meat and Canned Foods Act Passed House on Monday.

From our special Ottawa correspondent.

The bill to amend the Meat and Canned Goods Act passed the House of Commons on Monday evening after a long discussion of great interest to the grocery trade of the Dominion. The act of last year contained the limitation that the markings on canned goods, whether of fruit, vegetables, fish or meat, should be those of the packer only, but in committee Mr. Macpherson, of Vancouver, secured the insertion of an amendment providing that the first dealer obtaining the canned goods direct from the packer might, if he so desired, affix his own label upon the cans, but that such dealer must, upon request of the inspector, disclose the name of the packer of the article.

Mr. Marshall, the well known canner, of Aylmer, who represents East Elgin, protested strenuously against putting a law on the stateute-book one year and changing it the next. He pointed out that the canning industry of the Dominion was a large industry, and was likely to increase. There would be no object in improving the quality of the goods unless the name of the packer was on the label, whereby the consumer was protected. The canners would not object to a special label, but he believed the name of the packer should be on the label in every case. Often goods changed hands two or three times, and if the name of the packer was not on, it was a very easy thing for the man behind the counter to say, even unintentionally, that the goods were packed by a certain firm when such might not be the case. Speaking on behalf of the Canadian Canners, he declared that they were not sending a thousand cases to the Old Country to-day except those which contain their own label, and he regarded that as the best advertisement that the canned goods of this country could have.

The plea for the wholesale dealers of Canada was first made by Adam Zimmerman, of Hamilton, who contended that the firms who had advertised and established the reputation of their labels for the last thirty years should be allowed to continue to use them. The object of the act was to protect the public. The wholesale dealers had canneries of their own until recently, when they sold them out to the Canadian canners, who had now some 35 or 40 canneries in their association. He insisted that under existing arrangements the public had no guarantee that they were getting the goods of particular canneries even when they asked for them, as the Canadian packers could take the goods of any of their canneries and place on them the name of a favorite brand. He insisted that when the wholesale grocers put their own names on the cans it was a guarantee to the public that they were getting first-class goods. Such firms as Balfour, Smye & Co., and Turner & Co., of Hamilton, had used their own labels for many years.

Mr. Macpherson acknowledged the paternity of the amendment, which had been inserted in the bill in committee. He said he had received from the Wholesale Grocers' Guild of British Columbia a resolution passed at the last meeting, pointing out that the majority had been operating for years on specific labels, more particularly for canned salmon. It had been the custom of the wholesaler to go to a small packer of salmon and purchase his output, the wholesaler labeling the cans with his own brand, and assuming full responsibility for the purity of the article. He was the man who would be held responsible under this amendment. For instance, a man dealt in what he called the "Sunset" brand of canned salmon, using that brand for years, and buying his canned salmon possibly from four or five different canners. This was necessary for the reason that a good run of salmon in a certain river one year might mean a poor run the following year, making it necessary for the wholesaler to go to a different part of British Columbia for his canned salmon next year. The point of issue was not the changing of the label, but of maintaining a dealer's right in his own brand. In reply to this Mr. Marshall asked the pertinent question, "Who had the most money in the business, was it the man who supplied the label or the man who builds a plant to put up the goods?" The Canadian canners would not object to special labels, but they wanted the packer's name to be on the label. The canners would put on any label that the wholesaler might require, but in the interest of the canners, and to protect the consumer, the name of the pavker should go on.

In the course of the further discussion Mr. Marshall mentioned that the special "Triangle" label was used first only three years ago, while the "Tartan" brand label, the oldest in use, had only originated seven years ago. These two special labels bore the name of the packer in each case. Nothing would improve the quality of the canned goods of this country more than by maintaining the provision that the packer's name should be on the cans. There was no reason why Canada should not pack all the vegetables and catsups consumed in this country.

After a lengthy discussion an amendment to eliminate the amendment of Mr. Macpherson was rejected by 44 to 26. The bill was reported, read a third time and passed. Thus the clause stands permitting the wholesaler's name to appear instead of the packer's. If the bill runs the gauntlet of the Senate in its present form, special labels will once more be legal.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—

Teas—Advance anticipated.
Beans—Advanced.
Prunes—Advanced.
Coffee—Slight advance.
Maple Products—Declined.

Montreal, April 30, 1908.—As the proximity to the general opening of navigation becomes closer the lethargy which has been quite obvious in trade circles is gradually disappearing and the first boat which sails up the St. Lawrence will be welcomed as a revivifying element in the commercial life of the metropolis. The formation of a second jam of ice in Lake St. Peter had the effect of postponing the much-desired event from Monday to Wednesday. Shippers are displaying great activity around the harbor front making preparations to dispatch their first cargoes with as little delay as possible.

The maple sugar market is supplying some diversion for the dealers and they are cutting prices quite considerably in this product. The yield is very good this year and the quality is quite up to anything in the past. Tea jobbers are all anticipating a lively market as soon as the new crop arrives, owing to the strained condition of the market due to almost complete exhaustion of the old crop. Dealers in molasses and syrups are looking forward to a strengthening of the market soon. Prices in coffee have been somewhat distrubed by French cables, which indicate higher prices. There seems to be some scarcity in this line. Prunes have advanced considerably owing to a scarcity of stocks in California and elsewhere. The provision market remains about the same, moving along in a firm, steady manner.

SUGAR—The sugar market remains about the same. The London market is firm, although the holdings of speculators have been greatly reduced owing to sales of actual merchandise to American and German refiners. Advices from Cuba state that grinding is practically over.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES—The market continues steady. First lots of new crop molasses from West Indies are expected to arrive about May 20 to 25. These are likely to be small quantities, owing to the high prices which prevail in the primary markets. Dealers are anticipating an advance shortly.

TEA—The old crop Japan teas are pretty well cleaned out, very little being left in the market to-day. Dealers are looking forward to a good market for the new goods, and the price will probably be a little on the high side. Nothing very new has developed in Ceylon or Indians, except that Ceylon Pekoes are a bit firmer. The strength which has characterized the market for black teas for some time past continues.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—Considerable interest is displayed in canned goods at present, the trade anticipating new season prices in a couple of weeks at the latest. It is pretty certain that we shall go into the new season with stocks that are not too large by any means. Salmon is scarce and prices are likely to open high from all reports received from the coast.

TORONTO—Demand is fairly brisk following the better opening of business in this line last week. All lines are moving fairly well.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Firm.

Teas—Reported firmer.

Coffee—Firmer.

Toronto, April 30, 1908.

Business in the wholesale markets is about the same as at last report. The opening of navigation is having some little effect in opening a demand for the goods used in lumber camps and in the districts reached by water. Otherwise there is little new to report.

SUGAR—While there has been no material change in the situation since last week, all reports tend to confirm the tendency to firmer markets.

It is estimated that as a result of the drought, the Cuban production of sugar this season will not exceed 900,000 tons, which is a deficit of about 500,000 tons from the previous crop. Latest figures also estimate a shortage of 130,000 tons in the beet sugar crop of western Europe. The statistical position of sugar is, therefore, a particularly strong one, and refiners are making active purchases in all the large sugar producing countries of the world for their future supplies. They have already purchased, it is estimated, 150,000 tons of European beet sugars, and will probably take 200,000 tons in addition, besides making large purchases of British West India sugars, which usually go to England, and entering the Java and Philippine markets more actively as competitive buyers with China and India.

SYRUPS—Maple syrup is moving well but other lines are dull.

TEAS—Business seems a little brisker in local markets this week. Reports from abroad all emphasize stronger markets. A cable to a local broker from London on Wednesday said : "Markets are decidedly stronger with a tendency to advance."

Kearley & Tonge's April circular says in part regarding the situation :

"Partly as a result of the statistical position being thus more clearly defined, there has been some check to the weakness displayed in the market for common tea throughout the month of February, when common Souchong fell to 6¾, a gradual drop from the middle of January, when it stood at 7½. The market for this grade at the end of the month closed firm with an upward tendency. Medium teas have been particularly good value since Christmas, supplies from the Assam districts having been liberal ; during March, this grade has shown signs of an advance in prices, and this has now been definitely established to the extent of ¼d to ½d per lb. Fine grades have been in less supply, and where quality was undoubted, they were well competed for at advancing rates."

COFFEE—Business locally continues good with a firmer feeling evident. Retailers' stocks seem to have run low during the winter, as they have been buying somewhat freely for the last few weeks.

Regarding the coming crop Willett & Gray say in part :

"Recent information about the prospects of harvesting shows that the movement will probably commence at the usual time, but owing to the very irregular ripening of the bean, it is not supposed that the net yield per tree will be a favorable one.

"The reduced stocks in Santos show a much poorer quality than during the first six months of the season. In Rio also the market has advanced, the rise being equal to 40 points since the early part of the month. Offers that have been reported from thence at lower prices have not been taken seriously, as it has not been possible to buy there at anything like the low figure at which it was claimed shipments could be made."

DRIED FRUITS—Prunes continue to be the most interesting feature in this business, other lines being comparatively dull. Evaporated peaches at 20c to 22c and evaporated apricots at 33c to 35c, are also finding some demand. A cable from Patros to a Toronto broker regarding currants, this week, says :—"Market is firm for sound fruit. English demand has been good the last two weeks and stocks are considerably reduced. Prospects for new crop not too brilliant."

SPICES—Business continues fairly brisk at steady prices.

RICE AND TAPIOCA—A steady staple business is being done at regular prices.

BEANS—The market continues firm and dealers estimate supplies as short throughout the country. Wholesalers quote :

EVAPORATED APPLES—Some firms report good business but the demand generally is light. Prices quoted are from 7½c to 8½c.

AUSTRALIAN FRUIT CROP SHORT.

A recent letter from D. H. Ross, Canadian Trade Commissioner in Australia, contains the following letter regarding the outlook for dried fruits in that country which will be read with interest by the trade:

"Contrary to the anticipations of growers, the 1908 crop of Australian lexias, sultanas and currants will—it is now estimated—not be much more than half the quantity marketed last season. Intense heat at a critical period in the growth is stated to be the cause of the short crop. Of the surplus available for export, preference is being given to Canadian and New Zealand buyers before the fruit will be offered elsewhere. Last year large quantities were consigned to London, but, this season, the reduced stocks preclude such a course being adopted. As a result of special inquiries, it is considered that all Canadian orders will be readily filled provided they are placed early."

COSTS IN THE CANNING INDUSTRY

Estimates of Expense Often Mistakenly Based on Bare Cost.

The organization of a large number of new canning concerns in Canada during the last few months has led in some cases to circumstances and methods of disposing of stock which are viewed by members of the established trade with a good deal of apprehension, not particularly for the effect it will have on their own business but for the outlook for those who invest in stock in some of these new concerns.

An examination of the prospectuses of one or two of these new concerns shows statements which, whether made in good faith or not, are not at all practical and are bound to mislead the investor more or less seriously. One of these promises a profit of at least 40 per cent. on a very small investment, a statement which would make a practical canner smile.

Talking the matter over with a representative canner last week The Grocer asked his opinion regarding some of these statements. "Well," said he, "to me, that prospectus reads like a dream. If I could have made one-tenth of 40 per cent during my years in the business I should have retired long ago. At present it keeps me plugging to make ends meet.

"Some of the factories," he continued, "in making estimates, for securing investors base everything on the bare cost of actual canning and forget all overhead and general expenses, such as depreciation of plant, insurance premiums, losses through leaks and 'swells.' office expenses, brokerage charges and other similar items.

"When the increase in the cost during the last year or so of such items as cans, labels, solder, labor, etc., is considered," he continued, "it will be readily seen that the canners are not making such large profits as the majority of retailers imagine. I have made a careful study of the cost of packing in my factory and have found that the actual expense in packing, say tomatoes, is not 65 to 75 cents, as is commonly supposed but, taking all items into consideration, it really mounts up to 85 cents per dozen at the factory. This is no jumped-at conclusion either, but an estimate reached after careful study of the business.

"The company putting forward such rosy prospects as are to be seen in one or two of those prospectuses," our informant added, "either do not know what they are talking about or are intentionally trying to mislead the investor. It will pay the public to be wary of any such golden egg schemes."

In view of the above statements and with an idea of benefiting the trade generally we should be glad to hear from other canners in Canada as to their estimates of cost of packing.—Editor.

CHATHAM.

April 21.—At the annual meeting of the local branch of the Retail Merchants' Association, held on Monday April 13, Wm. Anderson, for the past year vice-president of the branch and secretary of the grocers' section, was unanimously chosen president for 1908. A pleasant feature of his election and one which goes to show that local grocers are on the best of terms, was the fact that his name was proposed by John McCorvie, a fellow grocer and president of that section. The other officers for 1908 are: 1st vice-president, A. D. Westman; 2nd vice-president, W. E. Parrott; secretary, J. W. Powers; treasurer, H. G. Hodges.

W. E. Parrott, the 2nd vice-president, is a young but enterprising member of the grocer fraternity, and one of the most faithful attendants at R.M.A. meetings. J. W. Powers, who succeeds W. A. Winterstein as secretary, is also the new secretary of the Chatham Board of Trade.

President Cowan, in the course of a discussion at the meeting, on program advertising, declared that that evil and the kindred one of ticket soliciting had been pretty well stamped out since the passing of the Association's prohibitory resolution last April, with much resulting benefit to retailers. Formerly, King St. was the regular stamping ground of all sorts of psuedo-charitable concert ticket sellers, while concert programs usually carried enough advertising to pay for the printing and leave a profit —though without much benefit to the advertiser. To-day, however, the majority of these organizations have given the retailers up in despair.

Cartage charges were the theme of a warm discussion, Mr. Westman denouncing the practice of charging retailers for cartage fees at the point of shipment as an imposition. He urged united action to stamp it out, and thought, as did Mr. Parrott, that retailers should refuse to purchase from wholesalers except upon condition that the goods be sent f.o.b. at the place of shipment.

Peter Cunningham stated that he had made agreements to this effect with travelers, and that even in such cases and in cases where the wholesalers or manufacturers had done their own carting, the railways had assessed him for cartage just the same. The freight agents had explained that unless the bills were specifically marked "No Cartage" cartage was in all cases charged. He added that the W. C. Crawford stores had met with much success in eliminating such cartage charges by instructing their buyers in all cases to present to travelers a card stating, among others things, that in no case would such charges be paid.

Mr. Westman's suggestion that a similar card be adopted by Chatham retailers met with favor, a committee being appointed to have the cards printed.

The movement to again prohibit grocers from purchasing on the market before 10 o'clock found concrete form recently, when a by-law was brought before the city council to restore the old clause. The by-law was voted down by a vote of 5 to 4, however, and the market remains open. The minority declare that the fight in the council is not over yet, but many citizens think the change should be given a fair chance before it is condemned utterly.

Chatham's present population is 10,228, according to the report of the assessors presented at the last council meeting. The suburbs would probably add between 2,000 and 3,000 to these figures. The assessment this year is $5,047,780, an increase of approximately $150,000 over last year. The gain in population is 285. Many declare that the population given by the assessors falls short of the exact number. This has been a vexed question here for some time past.

The battle royal over the market question still continues. Ald. Bensen, who seems the forefront of the opposition to the "open market" for grocers and other retailers, at last week's council meeting again moved to restore the old 10 o'clock prohibitory clause. The motion was defeated, however, by a vote of 5 to 4, Mayor Scullard, who last time supported the 10 o'clock clause, voting this time in favor of the open market. The opposition talk of again bringing the question up at the next meeting.

Crop reports from all parts of the county are most encouraging, showing that fall wheat has wintered well, and is in fine condition, while the fruit crop gives promise of being large. Barring late frosts, peaches will be plentiful.

McGeachy's city dairy building has received a new spring coat of white paint. The ice cream parlors have been completely remodeled, and were opened for business last week.

A. J. Barassin, of Harry Andrew's grocery staff, who has been ill for the past few weeks with typhoid fever, is reported much improved, and it is hoped that he will shortly be able to be out again.

J. Frank Malcolmson, of the Kent Canning Company, returned last week from an extended trip to Egypt, the Holy Land, and other points in the "Unchanging East."

Orendorf Bros., of Ridgetown, have added a Sterling meat slicer to their store equipment.

W. J. Moffatt has resigned from the directorate of the Tilbury Canning Co., being succeeded by H. H. Shaver, who has purchased a controlling interest in the undertaking.

GUELPH.

April 27.—The regular meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association was held on Friday. The executive of the Clerks' Association again met the merchants in regard to the half-holiday question. It was finally settled by the Merchants' Association refusing to again entertain the proposition after once deciding against it. The new system of collecting bad accounts was again a live subject with the merchants and they were all favorably disposed towards it.

Bobbie Robinson, head clerk for J. Hadden, grocer, has been appointed head usher at the Royal Opera House under the new management.

If the Co-operative Associations get stores started in all the large towns and cities will they not start a wholesale establishment of their own also, and what effect would that have on the general grocery trade is a question that might interest some grocers.

The market Saturday was not up to much on account of the farmers being busy seeding in this neighborhood.

The prospects do not look at all encouraging for a drop in the price of good butter. In fact, a great many of those who do contract for a uniform price the year round refuse to contract this year.

* * *

J. A. McCrae & Son had a big sale of layer figs on Saturday, selling 10-lb. boxes for 50c each.

* * *

O. D. Hastings, formerly with W. H. Fielding and later of Chittick & Hastings, left on Saturday to take a position in Brantford. "Doc" is a good worker and will do well in the Telephone City.

G. K. Readwin, the Paisley St. grocer, has a nice new wagon on the road.

There has not as yet been any epidemic of heart failure on account of the oversmall generosity of the Merchants' Association in deciding to grant one whole day for the clerks to have a picnic this summer. It has been suggested by some of the merchants that the clerks be taken turn about and given a whole day. That sounds very nice, but those same merchants know as well as the clerks that this scheme will not work.

LONDON.

April 27.—Wholesalers now report business fair, with payments pretty well met. Fine teas are still advancing. Sugars, both raw and refined, are firm as are all other staples. In local retail circles trade is rather quiet, the fact that many men have not yet returned to work, being given as the cause. As one grocer put it "They are living on bread and butter, and are not getting the butter from us."

At the next meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association four new members will be taken in and all are men who until now it has been found impossible to induce to join. Arrangements for the forthcoming excursion to Detroit will be considered at the same time.

Butter continues to command a high price on the local market, the wholesale figure for dairy being 27c to 28c and for creamery 30c to 32c. Eggs sold at 16c wholesale on Saturday, but an advance is considered certain, as buyers here have received offers from the east for any quantity at 17c per dozen f.o.b. London.

* * *

New cheese is late coming in this season. Last year it was in the market early in April but so far this year there has been no sign of any.

* * *

J. P. Durand, grocer, has assigned to Alfred Robinson, and a meeting of the creditors will be held May 1st. This is said to be an outcome of the Lind-Kerrigan failure.

Geo. W. Knight, grocer, Richmond St. north, has sold his business to Rossier & Campbell, both of this city.

Charles McCormick, who has been appointed to a position under the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, is an old-time London grocer, having made an assignment some months ago.

Reports of further price-cutting come from South London. A couple of grocers over the river have been selling sugar at twenty pounds for the dollar. When interviewed by a delegation of the Retail Grocers' Association two of the foolish dealers explained that they had been prompted in their course by the action of a third grocer in the neighborhood in offering sixty-cent oranges for forty cents and they were only "going him one better." A little heart to heart talk convinced all concerned that such competition was ruinous and the outcome was that each promised to quit it provided the others would. Some cheap canned tomatoes which one dealer declared should not be permitted to be offered for sale, figured in the price-cutting.

VANCOUVER.

April 24.—The market here has been affected by the general rise in hams, and there is a sharp advance. Jobbers expect a much greater increase, and look for a jump of about a cent a week. Pat. Burns, the meat king of the west, is advising people to raise hogs. Once before he came out with this advice, and when he was in this city during the first part of this week he reiterated the injunction to the farmers : "Raise hogs ; get busy, there's millions in them."

The little war in lard between the Frye-Bruhn Company, of Seattle, and Swifts, is over and the price is nominally back to where it was before, a little more than a cent above what it was two weeks ago. Locally, however, the increase has not yet been apparent since jobbers and retailers who were wise stocked up at the reduced figure, and it will be another week or two before lard climbs up.

California grass butter has arrived in excellent quality, with the result that local creamery has had to drop, and is now retailing for 40c. It is coming near the time anyway when local creamery will go down, and the reduction, although a trifle early, is not altogether unanticipated. The butter from California sells at 35c, and is very good, the freshness being particularly noticeable after the winter article.

Potatoes are about the only article on the market which has shown a decline, and have fallen about $2 a ton. Generally at this time of year there is a scarcity, and advances have been very material. This spring, stocks which have been cellared are now being brought out, with the result that there is plenty on the market. The earliest of new potatoes are showing up from California, though it will be some time before they are at a price below the figure of luxury.

A company which has a condensed milk factory at Mount Vernon, Washington State, is negotiating with the Board of Trade of Chilliwack, with the object of securing a loan of $15,000 working capital to carry on a business in that district of the province. They think they can come into Canada and do good business, as with a factory in the heart of a good section like Chilliwack. they will be able to avoid the payment of the duty of $1.50 per case.

Once before, five or six years ago, a company started operations at Mission Junction. This was formed by Canadians who saw possibilities in the condensed milk business in the west. Milk was gathered along the Fraser River, taking in that part of Chilliwack district which abuts on this waterway. The fate of this institution is well known. The proposition of the Mount Vernon people was not looked on with favor by the Board of Trade, as it was thought it might interfere with the creamery operations in the district, and, further, some other company might start up soon without asking for a bonus.

R. C. Brock, secretary and manager of the Kootenay Fruit Growers' Association, has reported as to his investigation of the possibilities of establishing a fruit canning industry near Nelson. The Fox Brothers, who live at Harrop, not far from Nelson, have associated with them R. N. Brassey, of Kimsdale, Ireland, and Edward Baring, of Cheltenham, England, in a company to operate the Kootenay jam factory. An order for glass has already been placed in Montreal, and if it is filled in time the company will be prepared to handle this year's crop of small fruits. This will have an immediate effect of affording a market to the growers for the kind of fruit which they have not hitherto been able to dispose of at all.

The making of jam and other fruit preparations on the coast is rapidly expanding. In Victoria and Vancouver there are jam factories, and the product from these is meeting with more favor all the time. Some place it on a par with the English jams, and as there are no freight charges to pay the local article comes cheaper. With the establishment of the glass works at New Westminster by Vancouver and New Westminster people, waiting for glass from eastern factories is obviated, and thus every facility is given to manufacture.

In the Supreme Court here the other day, an application was made for a stay of execution of judgments against the defunct Peachland Trading Company, obtained by the wholesale grocery house of W. H. Malkin & Co., and the wholesale dry goods firm of Greenshields & Co. Two days after these judgments had been obtained, the Peachland Company went into liquidation, appointing Messrs. Kelly, Douglas & Co., wholesale grocers of Vancouver, as liquidators. The claims of the Greenshields and Malkin Companies total about $35,000, and those of Kelly, Douglas & Co. and the Bank of Montreal another $25,000. As the assets of the company are placed at $60,000, there should be no difficulty in meeting the demands of creditors, if the assets can be realized. The failure is said to be due to the collapse of a large company in Alberta, which was heavily indebted to the Peachland Company.

The local market is marked by a steady upward swing in the prices of hams, and even at the higher figure they are very firm. Dealers say there is a tendency to advances in most of the meat lines. This is about the only increase to note this week. The competition between local and California butter is on, with the former selling at 40c. and the latter at two pounds for 75c. There was no reduction in the local creamery before the grass butter came in from the south, but this article was of such good quality that a decrease from 45c. was necessary if the local was to keep in the running.

Local green stuff is coming on, with the result that with the progress of spring the imported rhubarb, etc., from California will drop off correspondingly. The first strawberries have put in an appearance, but the prices are high and the quality not of the best.

In commenting on the sale of teas in Vancouver, W. T. Heddle, expert in this line for W. H. Malkin Company, pointed out that while prices had advanced in the native markets, here they had not yet increased to the same extent. The advance here is gradual, and the scale is sliding up to the higher quotations. A feature of the buying is that practically no China teas are on the market. Some years ago Indian and Ceylon teas were not known here, the China tea having the full sale, but now the position has been reversed and the fuller flavored varieties from Ceylon are in demand.

In connection with tea, James Beveridge, of the firm of Wm. Braid & Co., tea, coffee and spice dealers, raised the point before a special meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association last week as to why teas could not be blended in Vancouver. The members of the association assembled especially to hear Mr. Beveridge speak on the subject of the tea trade, and incidentally he brought up this question. Instead of the blending being done largely in London, as at present, he thought that the tea for the Canadian trade could be put up here, since Vancouver was so much nearer to the points of production. Further, in view of the fact that there is no duty on tea, he thought that importers here ought to be able to give retail dealers better value in bulk and package teas than can be obtained in any other country in the world. In his address, Mr. Beveridge dealt with the trade features of all countries and traced in detail and with ample facts and figures the cultivation of plants, their preparation and selection, and followed this with a still more interesting account of the testing, marketing and blending.

At this time of the year particularly, eggs are the great objects of interest in the Dawson market. Between the time when the last shipments go in over the ice, and the first arrivals when navigation has started, there is a long interval, and often prices fluctuate considerably. Advices from Dawson state that the storage eggs are reduced in quantity but not all gone. Over ice eggs are held at $26, and since it is believed there are enough to hold until the scows arrive, the price will probably not change before that time. Storage eggs are $20. The retail price of over ice eggs is $1 a dozen, while storage are quoted at 75c.

Paul Prozesky, a cigar manufacturer with a factory in Winnipeg and a branch in Montreal, was in Kelowna last week and made a careful inspection of the samples of local tobacco. He stated that he was fully convinced that by careful selection and blending of the Spanish seed leaf grown in the Kelowna district he could manufacture cigars that in every respect, including flavor, appearance and drawing qualities, could not be distinguished from imported Havanas. He will probably open a factory if some of the essential details can be arranged.

John A. Morrin, of Morrin, Thompson & Co., of Phoenix, B.C., is at Peachland, having purchased the stock of the Peachland Trading Company, which has been in the hands of the wholesalers for some weeks.

The Victoria Fruit Growers' Association, which has affiliated with the B. C. Central Exchange, to which the other district associations in the province belong, has a new manager in James Drummond, who arrived recently from Regina. He has been in the fruit business all his life, and understands the commercial end of it particularly. Before coming to Canada, he was in Jamaica, where he was in charge of the fruit shipments for the Elder Dempster line.

GEORGETOWN, P.E.I.

April 24.—Collections are slow. What is wanted here is some satisfactory system of getting after slow pays and dead beats. The tendency, however, is more towards the cash system. A few firms have adopted the better system and most of our business establishments are shortening up credit considerably. Our own opinion is that within ten years business will be conducted on Prince Edward Island on a strictly cash basis.

The representative of T. H. Estabrooks, was in town last week with a useful diary for his customers. Mr. Cox informs The Grocer that the demand for forty-cent tea is gaining in volume monthly. Personally, we believe the advance in the cheaper grades of tea is one of the best things that has happened in the history of groceries for years. People are becoming acquainted, more generally, with the better grades, and when once tried have no desire to go back to the cheap article.

Robert Greig Company's representative, Mr. Arnold, was in town last week with some snaps to offer. White Swan goods are sellers.

The demand for navel oranges is very active and good stocks are being held.

INGERSOLL.

April 27.—Springtime with its buds and blossoms always gives an impetus to trade and he is indeed a wise grocer who has his store looking at its best when the first zephyr comes along. In the first bright, warm days of spring there is an irresistible influence, Nature calls everyone out of doors and it is then that the aggressive grocer knows the value of having his store attractive and well stocked. After the dreary, monotonous days of winter people appreciate the open air, and when the traffic on the streets increases the cash registers do more work. The present season has opened to the entire satisfaction of local grocers. There has been a good demand for the staple articles, while a brisk trade is also being done with such luxuries as strawberries, tomatoes and other vegetables. The merchants have been brightening their stores and increasing their stocks. A very optimistic view is taken of the trade for the summer. Times are considered to be very good, a fact that is evidenced by the manner in which the grocers are catering to the wants of their customers.

THE LATE W. A. GIBB.

DEATH OF W. A. GIBB.

Prominent Hamilton Commission Merchant Passed Away on Easter Sunday.

The news of the death of W. A. Gibb, of Hamilton, on Easter Sunday was received with regret by the jobbing trade of Canada generally.

W. A. Gibb was born in Hamilton, Ont., March 20, 1868. At the age of 15 he entered the employ of Brown, Balfour & Co., afterwards Balfour & Co. He remained with the firm for nearly 19 years and made himself so valuable that he was latterly given the position of secretary-treasurer, which he occupied for some years.

About seven years ago Mr. Gibb started out for himself and established an export and jobbing business in dried and evaporated apples, in which, through close attention to business and the application of conscientious principles he has been markedly successful. His experience in the wholesale grocery business proved very useful and he became well acquainted with conditions prevailing in the European markets, ultimately working up considerable trade in Canadian dried apples in Holland, Belgium and Germany. Mr. Gibb had secured control of several evaporating plants in different parts of Canada and at the time of his death was arranging to establish a large plant in one of Ontario's enterprising towns on a bonus basis. He had control of several brands of goods whose reputation he had established among the trade.

The funeral was held in Hamilton on Wednesday, April 22, from the home on Catharine street south. The pall-bearers were E. Morwick, James Henderson, Robert, Otto and Fred Gibb, brothers of the Gibb Box Co., Hamilton, and W. H. Seyler, manager of The Canadian Grocer, who is a brother-in-law. Mrs. Gibb and four children are left to mourn the loss of a husband and father.

"GROCERIES, LIMITED."

New Toronto Jobbing House Getting Off to Good Start.

The premises at 31-33 Front St. east, Toronto, have been brightened up considerably during the past couple of weeks and are now taking on a busy aspect as the home of the new wholesale house under the management of Wilson, McMurtry & Beatty.

"Groceries, Limited," is the appelation under which the new firm will hustle for business. The notice of acceptance of that name for registration was received from Ottawa during the week.

The new firm starts off with pretty bright prospects, and if trade experience

H. T. WILSON,
Of the New Firm of Toronto Jobbers, "Groceries, Limited."

and an acquaintance with the retailers is any criterion, their success ought to be pretty well assured.

H. T. Wilson, or "Tom," as he is a good deal better known, has been connected with the grocery trade in Toronto since 1885, having occupied positions with several of the representative firms of the city. An extended trip abroad a few years ago gave him a knowledge of foreign trade conditions which should prove very useful. His genial disposition is familiar to the trade and as a salesman he has few superiors.

W. E. McMurtry has been with Eby-Blain for ten years, and has imbibed a good deal of information concerning the grocery trade during that time. Last year he traveled over a large part of the Canadian Northwest and got pretty familiar with conditions existent there.

H. E. Beatty, whose good-humored face appears herewith, isn't particularly well known to the grocery trade as yet, but his energy in other lines of activity has made his name familiar. He's a graduate of both 'Varsity and the School of Science, and during his college days took a pretty prominent part in whatever was doing in athletics up around Queen's Park. Since his graduation he has been running a sextant as a civil engineer in the wilds of western Canada, but he enters business life with a good deal of enthusiasm.

W. E. McMURTRY,
Of "Groceries, Limited," the New Toronto Jobbing House.

The other members of the firm are not lacking in sporting proclivities, either, by the way. They are both enthusiastic curlers, and two years ago, curling together, won the Governor-General's tankard for the Granite Club.

The firm has secured control of several lines of highly reputed goods and are already doing business. For the present they will confine their operations to Ontario, and Messrs. Wilson and McMurtry will spend considerable time on the road in the province, Mr. Beatty will confine his attention for the present to office work.

FINDS A BRIDE IN NOVA SCOTIA.

A Profitable Business Trip for Member of the Staff of the MacLean Co.

The following item from the Yarmouth, N.S., Herald of April 21, gives the key to an interesting little romance which developed from a seemingly wholly business trip:

"Mr. W. Arnot Craick, whose wedding takes place at Trinity Church at 1 p.m. to-morrow, arrived in Yarmouth in a private car attached to the D.A.R. train yesterday."

Mr. Craick, the happy man in the case, who married Miss Hilda M. Bingay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. V. Bingay, one of the prominent families of Yarmouth, is the manager of Bookseller and Stationer and Printer and Publisher, two of The MacLean trade newspapers.

H. E. BEATTY,
Member of New Firm, "Groceries, Limited."

A few years ago Mr. Craick went down to the Maritime Provinces, as a representative of the company does every year, to attend and report the proceedings of the annual convention of the Maritime Board of Trade, which, by good fortune, was held that year in Yarmouth. Mr. Craick wrote a good report of the convention, but further than that, met an attractive young lady and the acquaintance ripened into the incident recorded above, which necessitated another trip to Nova Scotia a few days ago.

The MacLean Company aim to represent through their papers the various lines of trade in every part of the Dominion and for that purpose representatives are kept working in various sections of the country gathering news and getting acquainted with the members of the trade and with a view to assisting them to better business. It would not be at all surprising to hear of another such romance one of these days from any one of the Western Provinces.

A. P. Tippett, of Arthur P. Tippett & Co., Montreal, was in Toronto for several days this week and called at The Grocer office.

NEW BRUNSWICK BUSINESS BRISK

Two St. John Grocers Win Honors in Civic Elections—Fish Business Brisker —Death of Mrs. D. J. Purdy—Large Arrivals of Produce.

Special Correspondence to The Canadian Grocer.

St. John, N.B., April 27.

The civic elections passed off very quietly on Tuesday last. The contest for mayor resulted in the election of Alderman Thos. H. Bullock, manager of the Imperial Oil Company, by a majority of 681 over Mayor Sears. Ald. W. D. Baskin, grocer, of the West end and Ald. John W. Vanwart, grocer and meat dealer, Charlotte St., were successful in defeating their opponents by good margins. R. R. Patchell, the Wall St. grocer, who contested Victoria ward against Ald. Pickett, was defeated by 59 votes.

Business continues quite brisk with both wholesalers and retailers. There has been a good demand for tubs, pails, scrubbing brushes, soaps, washing powders and other spring cleaning requisites.

Sugar is very firm and an advance is looked for any time now. Molasses is up one cent a gallon, for fancy Barbadoes. Lard is a little easier. Dealers are looking for the arrival of some new twin cheese in the next few days.

During the past week the wheat market has advanced from five to six cents and the merchants who were expecting a decline in Manitobas are now looking for Ontarios to advance as they were quoted 10 cents less on April 9.

The fish business has been very satisfactory lately. Some good catches of gaspereaux are being secured in the harbor and they are selling at $3 a hundred. Finnan haddies are plentiful and the price has been reduced to 5½ cents.

Harry W. de Forest, Charles H. Howell, Noel F. Sheraton, Clarence W. de Forest and Mrs. Annie E. W. de Forest, of St. John, are applying for incorporation as Harry W. de Forest, Limited, a joint stock company of $99,000 to carry on a general tea business, taking over the business of Harry W. de Forest.

Thieves entered J. H. Walker's grocery, 140 King St. east on the night of April 20 and stole about $4 from the cash drawer. The police have been working on the case but so far without success.

The sympathy of the entire community has been extended to Hon. D. J. Purdy, grocer, Main St., over the loss of his wife, whose death occurred on April 17, after an illness of some weeks. The funeral, which was held on Saturday, April 19, was very largely attended. Mrs. Purdy was a daughter of the late John Cowan, and was about 60 years of age. She leaves, beside her husband, two sons and two daughters.

The St. John River opened last week and the steamers have all been taking up heavy freights to various points along the great waterway. The farmers have also taken advantage of the resumption of navigation to send down their accumulation of eggs, butter and other produce, which has relieved the local market somewhat.

R. W. Oliver, of the Oliver Milling Co., Montreal, has been elected to the vacant vice-presidency of the Corn Exchange.

A. H. Brittain, of the wholesale fish firm of A. H. Brittain & Co., Montreal, left Monday for a trip to Ottawa, Toronto and Hamilton. Mr. Brittain expects to be away about one week.

General Feeling Firm—Cheese Market Quiet Though Holders Ask Stiff Prices—Butter Receipts Light Though Season's Total Aggregates Near Last Year—Hog Markets Slightly Easier.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, April 29.

There is not much activity in the cheese market just at the present time, as the old is nearly all gone and the new is not arriving in sufficiently large quantities to cause any stir. The holders of old cheese are asking a pretty stiff price for the commodity, and it is the general impression among the trade that they will experience considerable difficulty in getting what they are asking. Prices quoted in the different centres of Eastern Canada cover a range between 10¾c to 11¼c for the new, whilst the old stands at 12½c to 13c. White is quoted at 12½c to 12¾c and colored at 13c. As usual, receipts are not very large at this time of the year. The local market is very quiet at the present time. Dealers are looking forward to its brightening up soon. Transactions for the past few weeks have been limited to a few hundred boxes here and there, but this will soon be altered, it is hoped. The warm weather which we are having is a favorable augury for more activity soon, as it will clear away what snow there is left and the cows will once more be out and the new cheese will be coming in in larger quantities.

Exporters were anxiously awaiting the opening of navigation which was accomplished early in the week by the arrival of the first steamer of the season in this port. Canadian exporters no longer have to compete with the New Zealand product, as this season's supply is nearly exhausted. The debut of the Antipodeaus in the English market has certainly presented a perplexing problem to the Canadian export trade. From all reports stocks do not seem to be very large on the other side and dealers apparently are not much concerned over the situation.

The finish of the old season has not been as favorable as anticipated owing in a measure to the keen competition between the New Zealand product and our own. The Board of Trade returns display a wonderful difference in receipts for last week and corresponding week of last year. Last week the total receipts of butter were 476 packages as against 1,298 for the same week last year, showing a difference of 822 packages to the credit of 1907. The total, however, up to date, does not show such a wide difference, the total receipts for the season just closing being 418,325 as against 615,861 for a corresponding time last year.

The returns in cheese also are lower all round than last year. For the week ending April 25 the Montreal receipts were 1,497 boxes whilst the same week one year ago stood at 7,221 boxes, leaving 5,724 boxes to the credit of the previous year. However, as with butter, the difference for the year is not so bad. Up to the present moment the total has reached 2,056,351 boxes of cheese whilst last season shows a total of 2,360,758. It will be seen that in the total there is not an alarming difference. The local butter market does not present any very alarming features at the present time.

The quotations have a wide range between 28½ to 30c for new-made creamery, and dairy between 25c and 25½c. Dealers regard this as high, and expect it to soon come down. The market at present is firm and receipts are light. Prices in the Townships are somewhat lower owing, no doubt, to the fact that the season is farther advanced there than in other parts of the Province of Quebec, and, of course, the prices are f.o.b. It looks as though all danger of our local market suffering from an invasion by the New Zealand product is past, as it is getting scarce and our own butter will soon be plentiful enough to chase the foreign product out of the market.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

Toronto, April 29.

Canadian hog markets are somewhat weaker this week and with a slight drop in prices deliveries are rather lighter and packers are less busy than they were a week ago.

The British market has fallen off again this week and seemingly has a "tired" feeling which is rather a change after the briskness displayed for the last three or four weeks. Even on the lower basis Canadian products are going forward somewhat freely, and the opening of this market has been rather a relief to Canadian packers.

The British market, too, continues to be well supplied from other countries. The Danes kept up pretty well to their record by shipping over 47,000 hogs last week and the Americans fell a little below average with 16,000.

Prices offered locally are 10 cents less than last week at time of writing, viz., $6.15 f.o.b. country points and $6.40 fed and watered for selects. Deliveries have been only fair, but, offerings are expected to be larger later in the week. Drovers seem to think that top notch prices have not been reached as yet.

Conditions prevalent in the American markets during the week are summarized in the following paragraph from the New York Journal of Commerce:

"The past week has witnessed very dull provision markets, especially for hog products, with declining prices on both spot and future stuff in face of continued light receipts. Packers have been bearing hogs in anticipation of increased receipts after farmers' planting is over, and they have allowed products to decline in order to help this reduced cost of production, although they are supposed to hold the bulk of the stock which has been accumulating. Some, however, are believed to have been sellers, but the demand has been limited to shorts who were run in, midweek, by the strength in wheat, and on a falling off again in receipts. But the packers appeared to be ready to supply them without advancing prices to any extent. In the meantime cash demand has fallen off materially, both here and West for all product and prices have declined without stimulating demand. Exporters have done practically nothing and the home trade have bought less freely than at almost any time since the panic was over, except of rib bellies or the local breakfast bacon demand. This has also fallen off since early week, and they are getting easy now with hams, which have been extremely dull so far this season."

DEATH OF SOAP MANUFACTURER.

John Taylor, of Taylor & Co., Toronto, Passed Away on Tuesday.

John Taylor, of John Taylor & Co., soap manufacturers, Toronto, died on Tuesday, April 28th, at his residence, 460 Jarvis St.

The late Mr. Taylor was in his 68th year and was born in Leek, Staffordshire, England. When 14 years of ago he came with his parents to Canada and began his business career with Taylor Bros., paper makers Toronto. Afterwards he joined J. L. Morrison in the commission business and later bought the Morse Soap Works, which he conducted, associated with his sons, Maurice J. and A. Percy, until his death.

Mr. Taylor had taken considerable interest in public affairs, and had served for a time on the city council, high school board and public library board. He was past president of the St. George's Society and of St. George's North American Union.

He was a member of St. Paul's Anglican Church. A widow, three sons and three daughters survive. The funeral took place on Thursday afternoon to St. James's Cemetery.

HONESTY IN LITTLE THINGS.

The maximum of honesty is conscientiousness in little things. The clerk or bookkeeper who uses his employer's postage stamps for his private correspondence may not be intentionally dishonest, and would indignantly resent such an implication as an insult; but is he not appropriating another man's property to his own use? The same principle applies to writing one's letters in the time for which the employer pays. The employer might not object in either case if he knew it, but is it right? Indeed, is not the failure of many a young man in commercial life owing to dishonesty in minor details of business?

I have known of clerks being given car fare to go to a distant part of the city on an errand, who walked instead of riding, pocketing the money given them for car fare. Was it dealing honestly with the employer? Besides taking the money, they took more time for the trip. Some may think this is splitting Puritanical hairs; but is it not a practical application of the Golden Rule to avoid these seemingly trifling acts?—Contributed by R.C.C.

If you are interested in the welfare of the salesman, don't burden him with collections and claims, as his success depends on the amount of goods he sells.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Flour is Firmer and Advancing—Millers Placing Prices on a Bet'er Basis—Cereal Markets Steady.

The only notable feature during the week is the firmer feeling in flour, particularly in Ontario markets. Millers have been working on an unsatisfactory basis for some time under stiff competition and seem to have just awakened to the condition of affairs. Prices in Manitoba grades were advanced 20 cents during the week and eastern prices were also raised 40 cents. The Quebec market is very firm but no new features are noted.

The cereal markets also continue firm with local demand fairly good and supplies quite equal to demand. There is nothing particularly new to report.

TORONTO.

FLOUR—The market is on a considerably firmer basis this week and prices have been advanced 20c on the Manitoba grades. Millers seem to have been cutting one another's throats for some months past and are only now coming to understand that they were making very little at prices prevailing recently. As a result, the feeling is a good deal firmer and while business is not particularly brisk it seems likely that the firm feeling will continue. Eastern prices were advanced 40c during the week. The prices now quoted are :

FIFTY YEARS CONTINUED BUSINESS.

The Cummings Milling Co., of Cumming's Bridge, Ottawa, are this year celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of their business. Robert Cummings began to lay the foundations for the present business in 1858. For some years he carried the responsibility alone, but in 1893 Chas. C. Cummings became a member of the firm and continued till 1901. In that year Wm. R. Cummings was taken in and still continues a member. In 1905 a modern milling plant was established with a capacity of 500 bags. The fifty years of continued business under the one family management speaks volumes for the principles followed.

MANUFACTURERS' AGENT IN REGINA.

J. L. Peppard, who has been on the road and among the trade in Canada for the last eight years, has just opened an office as a manufacturers' agent in Regina and will in addition to Regina cover Moose Jaw and Saskatoon.

Mr. Peppard is a Nova Scotian by birth and has also spent some time among the trade in the United States. He is one of the pioneers of the manufacturers' agency business in Regina but prospects seem bright, with good local support, for his success.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Laporte, Martin & Co., Montreal, have now a most complete line of domestic and imported canned goods. The sale of "Soleil" brand of goods is increasing every year, which may be taken as a proof of their excellence. They have a complete stock of the pack of 1907 and are booking orders for the pack of 1908. This firm also offer the trade a fine line of Japan black and green teas and Minerva olive oil from Marseilles, which has an official laboratory guarantee of purity, rendering it a necessity in all up-to-date grocery stores.

TRADE NOTES.

H. Star & Co., Montreal, have been registered as general merchants.

Bigaonette & Frere, grocers, Montreal, are selling their business.

C. B. Snow, grocer, Woodstock, N.B., sustained a loss by fire last week.

The general store of La M. McLaughlin Cie., Buctouche, N.B., was burned last week.

SALESMANSHIP.

From The Philistine.

If Sheldon had a salve that would give every business candidate the Salesman's Itch, I'd take his whole output on suspicion. The salesman who makes the record is not the one who knows the most or the one who is the best looking; he's the smiling cuss who never hears the word "No."

The Salesman's Itch!

Buyers in loose wrappers do not wait for you around the corner. You have to go after the buyers very much as the Roman's went after the Sabines. It is persistency that wins.

The buyer is a shy and sly proposition. He likes to be chased.

The man who gets the order is the one with the Salesman's Itch.

There are two departments to every business. One is Out-go and the other is In-come.

When times are "scarce" the Out-go men are cut down or laid off; and the lads who lay them off are the In-come boys.

Get the Salesman's Itch—a nose for orders, a scent for fromage.

Nail the business. Promises do not meet the pay-roll.

Cultivate the Salesman's Itch.

Salesmen who expect buyers to chloroform them and stuff the orders in their pockets, are doomed to disappointment.

It is certainly true that you can not afford to sell a man goods that are going to burden him, but it is also true that it is for you to decide as to what a customer needs, and then see that he gets it.

Buyers, through habit, fight on the defensive. There are various ways of overcoming their scruples, but unless you have the Salesman's Itch, you'll wander forever a lone, lorn holluschickie, and Clio will carve on your tomb a single word. Skunked.

OPENING BRANCH IN CALGARY.

Carman-Escott Co., of Winnipeg, Extending Operations Further West.

The Carman Escott Co., wholesale grocery brokers, Winnipeg, have opened a branch in Calgary which will be in charge of J. A. Valiquette. Calgary is becoming a very important wholesale centre and the Carman Escott Co. found it necessary to be represented on the spot in order that their growing interests in Alberta might receive proper attention.

Not long ago the Carman Escott Co. removed their Winnipeg office from the Union Bank Building to the new Bright & Johnston Building on Bannatyne Ave. East. There they have in addition to larger office accommodation, considerable storage room for the various lines of goods that they carry. During the last year they have added several first-class agencies to their list and have very considerably increased their business. Manufacturers who do not establish branches of their own in the west are finding it absolutely necessary to have intelligent representation by agents on the ground who have storage accommodation to enable them to carry a stock.

GEO. F. BENSON BEREAVED.

Widow of Founder of Edwardsburg Starch Co. and Mother of Present President Passed Away.

Mrs. W. T. Benson, widow of the founder of the Edwardsburg Starch Co., and mother of Geo. F. Benson, now president of the company, passed away at the family home at Cardinal, Ont., on Tuesday, April 21.

Mrs. Benson was one of Cardinal's oldest and most highly respected residents. She was born in Cheshire, Eng., in 1827. Coming to Canada with her husband in 1858, the couple settled in Cardinal. Mr. W. T. Benson died in 1885, at the age of sixty.

Mrs. Benson was a woman of wonderful energy and much ability and was a fitting helpmeet for her able husband. From her interest in local and church affairs of various kinds she had come to be regarded as the foremost lady of the county.

Two children survive her, Geo. F. Benson, president and managing director of the Edwardsburg Starch Works, and Mrs. Jowitt, of Leeds, Eng.

WINNIPEG PURE FOOD SHOW.

Great Preparations Being Made for Exhibition June 8 to 22.

Without doubt the Pure Food Show to be held in Winnipeg this year will repeat the success of the big show held in the Manitoba capital last July. The committees of the Retail Merchants' Association are hard at work, over 200 retailers throughout the West being actively interested in the work of preparation. Having the experience of last year to guide them, the management are confident that they can remedy any defects in last year's exhibition and conduct a show much superior to any yet held in Canada.

An important change in the arrangements has been made this year. At the last show each exhibitor decorated his own booth. Apart from the inconvenience, annoyance and delay which this caused many exhibitors the result was unsatisfactory for the reason that there was a lack of harmony in the color schemes. This year the management of the show are building and decorating all the booths. These are being built under the supervision of Wardell & Nichols, architects, and in the decorations no bunting will be used. The booths will be solidly built and painted in blended colors.

A large room in the front wil be fitted up as a Ceylon tea garden for Thomas J. Lipton and it will be occupied by Cingalese attendants. Throughout the building palms and fountains will be liberally used; a band of international fame is being secured and all preparations are being made to ensure a very successful show.

Secretary W. A. Coulson informs The Grocer that there will be some 45 booths in all. Of these 35 are now sold and there are still 10 more to be sold. Among the exhibitors this year are the following:

The Codville Co. (Gold standard products); E. D. Smith, White House coffee; J. T. Griffin & Co., Nicholson & Bain, H. J. Heinz Co., Mason & Hickey, W. R. Milton Co., McCormick Mfg. Co., Carman, Escott Co., Ocean Mills, Christie, Brown & Co., Dingle & Stewart, Foley, Loch & Larson, Genesee Pure Food Co., The Canadian Canners, Scott, Bathgate & Co., B.C. Sugar Refining Co., Western Canada Milling Co., Stimpson Computing Scale Co., Thomas J. Lipton, E. R. Drewry, Dr. Price's Baking Powder and Kellogg's Toasted Corn Flakes.

The association is demonstrating in a practical way their own belief in advertising. Newspaper space, posters, picture post cards and a host of other advertising devices are being employed to excite interest in the show and the big success of last year's show is making the work comparatively easy. It is expected that the Lieutenant-Governor will open the show. The dates are June 8 to June 22. Special railway rates to the show have been secured.

Business Again Active—A Tumble in Strawberry Prices—Canadian Greens Beginning to Arrive.

Business has improved again this week and the dealers are feeling in better spirits. Strawberries are coming in plentifully just now, and both Montreal and Toronto report a lowering in price, though at present they seem to be firm at 18c per box. Carload lots arriving brought the price down to 17c and they were picked up quickly. The merchants, however, now seem to have sufficient on hand and they are not moving so quickly as at the end of last week.

Canadian greens will now be arriving, and already lettuce is on the market. A number of other lines of native hothouse garden truck is being sold, but in small lots only. Apples and cabbage are plentiful. Pineapples are still slowly coming down.

Fresh-water fish is beginning to come in and is supplanting the lines which were staple during the earlier months of the year. Fine weather continues and prospects for the future are bright.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—Strawberries are the only line on the fruit market which have shown any change to remark. Owing to the arrival of carload lots from the Carolinas the price has dropped from 35c and 40c to from 17c to 20c per basket. The previously high price was due to the fact that they were being brought into Canada in small lots by express from New York. Almeria grapes are somewhat easier this week.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—The fine weather of the past few days is causing quite a stir in business, and an improvement is noted over last week. Pineapples are cheaper and bananas have come down a little. Apples are easier and have shown somewhat of a slump, though good prices are asked for the higher grades. Roughly, the price of apples ranges from $1 to $5 a barrel, according to quality. The November cut of lemons is the new feature of the week. Strawberries last week dropped to 17 cents, but are up again one cent and are rather firm. Oranges are still rising and cranberries are practically off the market. Prospects appear good for the trade during the spring and summer.

VEGETABLES—With the advent of new vegetables, quite a number of price changes occur. Canadian Boston-head lettuce, from the vicinity of Hamilton, may be said to open the market to native garden truck, and from now on dealers expect Canadian lines to supplant imported truck. Great quantities of cabbage, new and old, are offering this week and beets, carrots and parsley are among the new stuff offering. Potatoes are about five cents higher, tomatoes are more plentiful and asparagus is coming in more freely. New spinach is expected this week.

B.C. CANNERIES PROGRESSING

Organization Completed of Two New Companies With Bright Prospects.

A note from a correspondent in British Columbia this week tells of progress in connection with newly organized canning companies in that province. These and other facts show that the canning industry in the West is developing rapidly. He says:

"Good progress is being made in the organization of the Chilliwack Canning and Preserving Company, which recently took over the plant of the New Westminster Canning Company, and which will have its plant in the Chilliwack Valley. H. T. Goodland, of Vancouver, has been appointed the secretary, he having had experience in organization work of this kind, and a knowledge of fruit canneries. The directors elected for the year are: M. H. Nelems, P. W. Crankshaw, A. Unsworth, H. Hodgins, P. H. Wilson and J. H. Ashwell.

"The Southern Okanagan Canning Company, which has its headquarters at Penticton, has received its charter and is ready to go ahead. It will have a capacity this year of 75 tons of tomatoes, and the committee has ascertained that this amount is available. The outlook is considered extremely promising."

OUR NOVA SCOTIA LETTER

Easter Grocery Trade Brisk—Shipments of Produce to West Indies—Serious Shortage of Butter—Death of Prominent Grocer.

(Special Correspondence to The Canadian Grocer)

Halifax, N.S., April 25.—The Easter grocery trade in Halifax was good in all lines, the volume of business being fully up to that of the same season last year. The market at the present time is well supplied with fruit, and green goods from the United States are arriving in fairly large quantities. Strawberries of fair quality are retailing at 35 cents per box. Lettuce, rhubarb, spinach, cabbage, tomatoes and Bermuda onions are now offered for sale. Vegetables are keeping well this season and good stocks of potatoes are available. They are retailing at 75 cents per bushel. Large quantities of produce are now being shipped from here to the West Indies.

Apple shipments from this port are falling off, as the season is about closed. The last shipment was made this week by the Furness liner, Shenandoah, which took eight thousand barrels. Carloads of the poorest quality of apples have been sent to the cider and vinegar works in the Valley during the past few weeks. No market could be found for this fruit, many of the dealers here refusing to handle it. There is still some good fruit held in the Valley and it commands high prices.

The heavy demand for eggs during Easter cleaned up the stocks on hand and since then the receipts have been very limited. The continued cold weather has caused the hens to stop laying. Prices range about 17 cents per dozen.

The butter situation here is quite serious, and such a shortage has not been known for many years. The receipts of dairy butter are very limited, only a few small tubs are reaching the market, and these are readily bought up. According to information received here butter in Boston appears plentiful, and good creamery prints can be purchased there for 30 cents. During the past week it dropped one cent per pound in Boston. The scarcity of butter has caused a demand for preserves, molasses and dried fruits. Grocers report increased sales of these lines and also of syrups.

The receipts of maple products this season have been rather small, and the demand good. The sugar is quoted at 13 cents wholesale and the wax at 18 cents.

Poultry is very high and scarce. Fowls are quoted this week at 20 cents per pound. There is a demand for turkeys but none are offered.

Alexander Urquhart, junior member of R. Urquhart & Son, died very suddenly at his home on Spring Garden Road last Saturday. Mr. Urquhart's health had been failing for some time, but he was able to be at business on the day before his death. He was fifty-three years of age and had been engaged in the grocery business from his boyhood, the firm being one of the first to establish business in Spring Gardens. His father, who is a veteran in the grocery trade, is still able to attend to business and is to be seen daily behind the counter.

SOME CHANGES IN TORONTO.

The business at the corner of Brunswick and Sussex, which has been run for some time by A. Irving, has been taken over by Pattison Bros. The brothers, Ed. and Wesley, are two bright young men who learned their trade in the store they now manage under the guidance of their uncle, Alex. Wray. The business was sold by Mr. Irving to R. W. Hollinger, who formerly ran a store on Clinton St., but about three weeks ago, Mr. Hollinger sold to Pattison Bros., the present proprietors. The young men deserve to do well and prospects are bright.

Geo. H. Hatt, who has been conducting a bright grocery business at 980 Bathurst St., has sold to Mrs. Forest.

Wm. Moore & Son, grocers, 402 Spadina Ave., have sold their business to Mr. Connor, who has recently come from Saskatchewan.

A WORD FOR CANADIAN PICKLES.

Own Product Compares Favorably With Imported Article.

The following letter, which came to us during the week, is self-explanatory:

Editor Canadian Grocer,—In your issue of 10th inst, your Vancouver correspondent makes the statement that one of the retail grocers of that city had drawn his attention to the fact that there was not being offered by the pickle manufacturers a green tomato pickle, such as his mother made, now we beg to take exception to this as we have been offering to the trade for the past seven years and are still offering these goods which are the perfected recipe of Mrs. Lea and we think that he will find that they have that same flavor and relish as the kind that his mother made, as in manufacturing these goods that is one point that we keep constantly before us. We realize that the consuming public today is looking for goods with the home-made flavor. Probably the reason your Vancouver correspondent could not refer this grocer to our goods is the fact that we have not been able as yet to supply the demand in Ontario even after increasing our capacity yearly for the last seven years. We would refer him to our advertisement in this issue where we are giving a short history of these goods.

Our reason for taking this matter up is that invariably in referring to the manufacturers of pickles the Canadian factories do not receive the recognition they deserve as they are at the present time offering the trade as fine a quality of goods as any that are being sold here by foreign manufacturers and at a price that is within reach of everybody.

A CHURCH FOOD FAIR

Pleasing Exhibits Made by Manufacturers of Grocery Products in St. Matthew's Church, Point St. Charles, Montreal.

The assembly room of St. Matthew's Church was the scene of a very fine food fair held last Thursday and Friday afternoons and evenings. The hall was decorated in a very artistic and charming manner, the prevailing decorative medium being long streamers of paper of red, white and blue entwined and fashioned into festoons and other artistic arrangements which went to produce a highly pleasing effect. The central part of the floor space was occupied by the Stewart Co., manufacturers of high-class confectionery, The Castle Blend Tea Co. and the Edwardsburg Starch Co. The Stewart Co. displayed a very fine line of confectionery which was arranged in the third booth in the centre. Mr. McManus, the Montreal representative, was in charge. Occupying the first position in the centre was the Edwardsburg Starch Co. with their line of corn syrups and starch. This was a very fine exhibit. Immediatly behind them might be found the display by the Castle Blend Tea Co. A particularly interesting method of packing was on view in their exhibit, consisting of what was apparently a book, but which on opening the cover was found to contain three pounds of tea instead of literature. Commencing at the left entrance and running around the room were seen the exhibits of such firms as Bovril, Ltd., the famous fluid beef people; E. W. Gillett, Co., Ltd.; Magic Baking Powder, and other products. Comfort Soap also grasped this opportunity for business publicity. In a corner next to the Comfort Soap was the exhibit of the Cowan Co., Toronto, which was in charge of two young ladies and their Montreal representative, E. J. Cowan. Mr. Cowan showed a desire to advertise specially their Maple Buds, which he was doing by distributing this wholesome product to those present. Near the last named exhibit was the booth of Dr. Price's Breakfast Foods, which, though not very large, was very nicely arranged. At the rear of the hall was situated a broad staircase, which made an admirable stand for a display of the famous Royal Household Flour. Next to this there was a donation booth where the ladies of the church had on sale various products given by the exhibitors and others. In this corner might be found also the display of the Bee Starch Co. On the right-hand side of the hall the products of the Ozo Co. were on exhibition, consisting of jams, pickles, vinegars and sauces. These are strictly Canadian products which meet with the approval of those who are connoisseurs. The Imperial Ice Cream Co. placed themselves in the hands of the young ladies of the church who by those methods, peculiar to themselves, not only efficiently advertised the ice cream but augmented very materially the funds of their church.

PERSONAL NOTES.

C. N. Smith, accountant of the Red Rose Tea Co.'s Toronto office, is spending a couple of weeks' holidays in Boston.

R. Carignan, representing Laporte, Martin & Co., Montreal, left last week for a trip to Detroit and intervening western points.

Geo. V. Kneen, formerly traveler for seven years in Eastern Canada for Fels-Naptha Co., has bought out the grocery of E. Brisson, 384 Bourbonniere St., Maisonneuve, Montreal.

F. R. Lawlor, M.P.; W. R. Drynan and R. L. Innis, of the Canadian Canners, Hamilton, were in Montreal Friday last. Messrs. Lawlor and Drynan left for the Maritime Provinces Saturday, while Mr. Innis returned to Hamilton. All the gentlemen were very much pleased with the display of their goods made by their agents, J. Alex. Gordon & Co., at the Exhibition of Groceries in the Arena.

MEN WHO SELL THINGS

We have just closed an arrangement whereby we will have the exclusive right to publish in Canada a book for salesmen, by Walter D. Moody, formerly traveling salesman, buyer and general sales manager for a large wholesale house, and now business manager of the Chicago Association of Commerce—the largest body of business men in the world, numbering about two thousand seven hundred members.

Mr. Moody's book is dedicated to the "Commercial Ambassador," and he has written it primarily for the traveling man. It also contains much educational matter for the business man, young and old, and there is a vein of business philosophy running through it that will appeal to any man or boy interested in self-development and a successful future. It is a book every salesman worthy the name will find indispensable.

Mr. Moody has been engaged for a year and a half in compiling these experiences and observations of his life's work in connection with the field of salesmanship as viewed from the standpoint of the traveling salesman, buyer, sales manager and employer, and as this book appeals to all who are concerned in any line of trade or business, it is just the book those in your own line who are engaged in the creative, money-getting side will find most useful and valuable.

The publication will be begun shortly in The Canadian Grocer and will run for several months. Special subscriptions will be taken during the time it is running, at $1.00. Of course, regular subscribers get it without extra charge. We would appreciate very much our readers drawing the attention of commercial travelers, and their clerks, to this announcement. Here are some selections which show the author's vigorous and entertaining style.

The salesman who hopes to win real success must change his negative qualities into positive ones, and then stick to some good reliable house where his chances for growth are assured.

A salesman of experience realizes that ideas —practical methods of selling goods—are of the greatest value, and he also knows that it pays him to search for them.

Time and thought taken in complaining of competition is useless expenditure of energy. It lessens your capacity for the accomplishment of things for which you were employed.

The Salesman goes out and digs up business, while the Order-taker just shambles around, waiting to be fed, like the hippopotamus in the menagerie.

A good salesman must know more about his goods than the man he is selling to knows about them. Knowledge and enthusiasm beat oratory every time. Enthusiasm in a salesman begets enthusiasm in a customer.

The best salesmen any house can have are the salesmen it builds for itself. The old saying, "Salesmen are born, and not made," is the veriest kind of tommyrot in this day of science and progress.

What the world of salesmanship wants is educated enthusiasm. The purest of king's English will secure an audience and hold attention for the salesman anywhere, while slang and short cuts of speech often excite distrust and offend the ear of the truly refined.

BOARD OF CUSTOMS AT OTTAWA.

Consider Several Questions of Interest to Grocery Trade.

A letter from our special correspondent in Ottawa last week notes a couple of items of interest to the trade. He says:

"The Board of Customs held an important sitting here on April 14th and 15th, when some dozen questions were under consideration. Among the tariff points debated was the question as to a special or dumping duty on syrup made in bond in England. It was held by the importer that this syrup should be classed as sugar and declared exempt from the special duty clause under the provisions of section 6 (c) of the Tariff Act, which provides for a special duty not exceeding 15 per cent., in addition to the regular duty. The departmental view is that a commodity of this kind is dutiable under item 140 of the several rates of duty, 35c per 100 lbs. (British), 45c (intermediate), and 50c per 100 lbs. (general tariff).

"A product invoiced as 'Fruit Puddine,' which is a compound of starch and cocoanut, with flavoring, was also before the Board. It was held that this article should be rated as a preparation having the qualities of starch under the provisions of item 39 of the Tariff Act, which reads as follows:

"'Starch, including corn starch, potato starch, potato flour, and all preparations having the qualities of starch, the weight of the package to be included in the weight for duty, 1c per lb. (British), 1½c per lb. (intermediate and general).'

"The decisions of the Board will be promulgated in a few days."

GROCERY FACTS.

Interesting Information Regarding the Regular Lines Handled by Grocers.

THE PEPPER TREE.

Though cultivated to some extent in southern Europe, Bulgaria, Servia and other places, the original home of the pepper is in the tropical zone, a great deal coming from the East Indies where large plantations flourish in the ideally adapted soil.

It grows very rapidly and unless checked, will reach a height of from 20 to 25 feet. However, to obtain the best results and the greatest fruit production, it is necessary to trim about 10 feet.

The pepper tree is of a climbing variety, and in the plantation greatly resembles our western hop fields with their network of supporting wires and poles.

The trees bear heavily, yielding two crops per annum, and the fruit grows in clusters of from 30 to 50 berries each. While ripe the berries are a bright red.

If picked while ripe, the berries will, upon being washed clean of the outer shell, or parchment, and sun-bleached, produce what is known as white pepper, while, if picked before they are allowed to ripen and sun-dried for two or three days, and then separated from the stock by hand-rubbing, they give us our black pepper.

Decorticated white pepper is obtained by grading the black pepper, according to the size of the berries, and subjecting it to a dampening process, after which it is run alternately through a decorticator and a tailing machine completely removing the black shell.—Toledo Grocer and Butcher.

PRESERVED GINGER.

Preserved ginger, both Chinese and that from the West Indies, are supposed to be prepared from the same kind of plant, Zingiber officinale, but Chinese is much more tender and succulent than the West Indian product—so much so that it is impossible to dry the rhizomes sufficiently to render them fit for export in the usual commercial form; if it had, dried ginger would have been exported from China long ago.

In China the young green tubers, or roots of the plant, are first scalded, then washed in cold water and peeled. They are next covered with a weak syrup (say, one pound lump sugar in six pints of water for twelve pounds of ginger), and left for two days. The syrup is then poured off and replaced by stronger syrup, and this is repeated two or three times until the syrup is made very thick (say, twelve pounds of sugar in twelve pints water, boiled and stirred till of the consistency of virgin honey), and the ginger swollen, bright and nearly transparent. The pieces of ginger thus charged with syrup are then packed in jars or glass bottles as close as possible and these are next filled up to the very top with more thick syrup, so as to leave no room for air. The bottles are finally corked and the jars are made air-tight by pasting lids and parchment over them. The Chinese preserved ginger is nearly all prepared at Canton and Hong Kong.

Keeping Books By Machinery

There was a time when the only way to harvest grain was by means of a hand sickle. Then came the cradle, and finally the self-binder.

Some firms still stick to the old-fashioned way of keeping their books; and this in spite of the fact that the works automatically and like a piece of machinery and is as much cheaper and better as is the self-binder and thresher better than the sickle and flail. Here is how it works:

If a man wants credit for $10.00 and you think he is good for it, give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book, and have him sign the receipt or note form in front of book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00. No trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on, until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass-books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best. For sale by the jobbing trade everywhere.

Another Store-keeper Sued for Damages

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH IN CAKES

& SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH IN TINS

Dangerous stove polishes continue to get store-keepers into trouble. The daily papers of Detroit, early this month, report Mrs. A. D. ——— is seeking to recover in the courts $15,000 from Mr. C. G. ——— who sold her some inflammable, liquid stove polish that exploded and severely burned her face and arms.

Wise store-keepers will keep out of trouble by handling only the stove polishes which are safe in the hands of the user. RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish are made by reliable processes and are absolutely free from dangers of fire or explosion. PUSH THEM.

The Slogan of the Future

ESTABLISHED 1879

An expert in trade progress makes this bold statement:

"Each year it becomes more and more necessary for the retailer to confine his attention to goods of known value."

And on the firm and lasting foundation of merit and worth

WOOD'S COFFEES

stand forth. Their "known value" has been demonstrated for more than a quarter of a century.

The Grocer who "confines his attention" to them reaps his reward in profitable trade.

From Father To Son

A business that descends from father to son is usually a long time in the making. If it is worth having at all it is certainly worth keeping. And the proud old father of Felix Codou admonished his son to preserve that reputation for quality he had gained only by a life-time of hard earnest endeavor to produce a Macaroni that would be the peer of all.

Codou's Macaroni

And Vermicelli, Spaghetti, fancy letters and figures — pastes of all kinds (but only the best of each) take equal rank with the Macaroni made by Codou. The factory has been enlarged several times — isn't that fact an eloquent tribute to the steadfastly maintained high quality ?

You cannot mistake Aylmer Faultless Peas as they have a wrapper label. These are the finest Peas on the Market at the price.

CANADIAN CANNERS, Limited

Old Homestead Brand

is a Cure for Failing Business

Many a grocer loses trade because his package goods are not up to the mark. A grocer should remember that, although from an exterior point of view, most canned goods look pretty much alike, when the can is opened—well, there's difference enough. You certainly ought to know—to find out—what is the quality of the canned goods you are handling.

Your Customers Rely On You to recommend something they will like, something that is healthy, at a moderate price.

Recommend Old Homestead Brand

and you will never regret it. The purity, the natural, well-preserved deliciousness of Old Homestead Brand will hold your customers unfailingly.

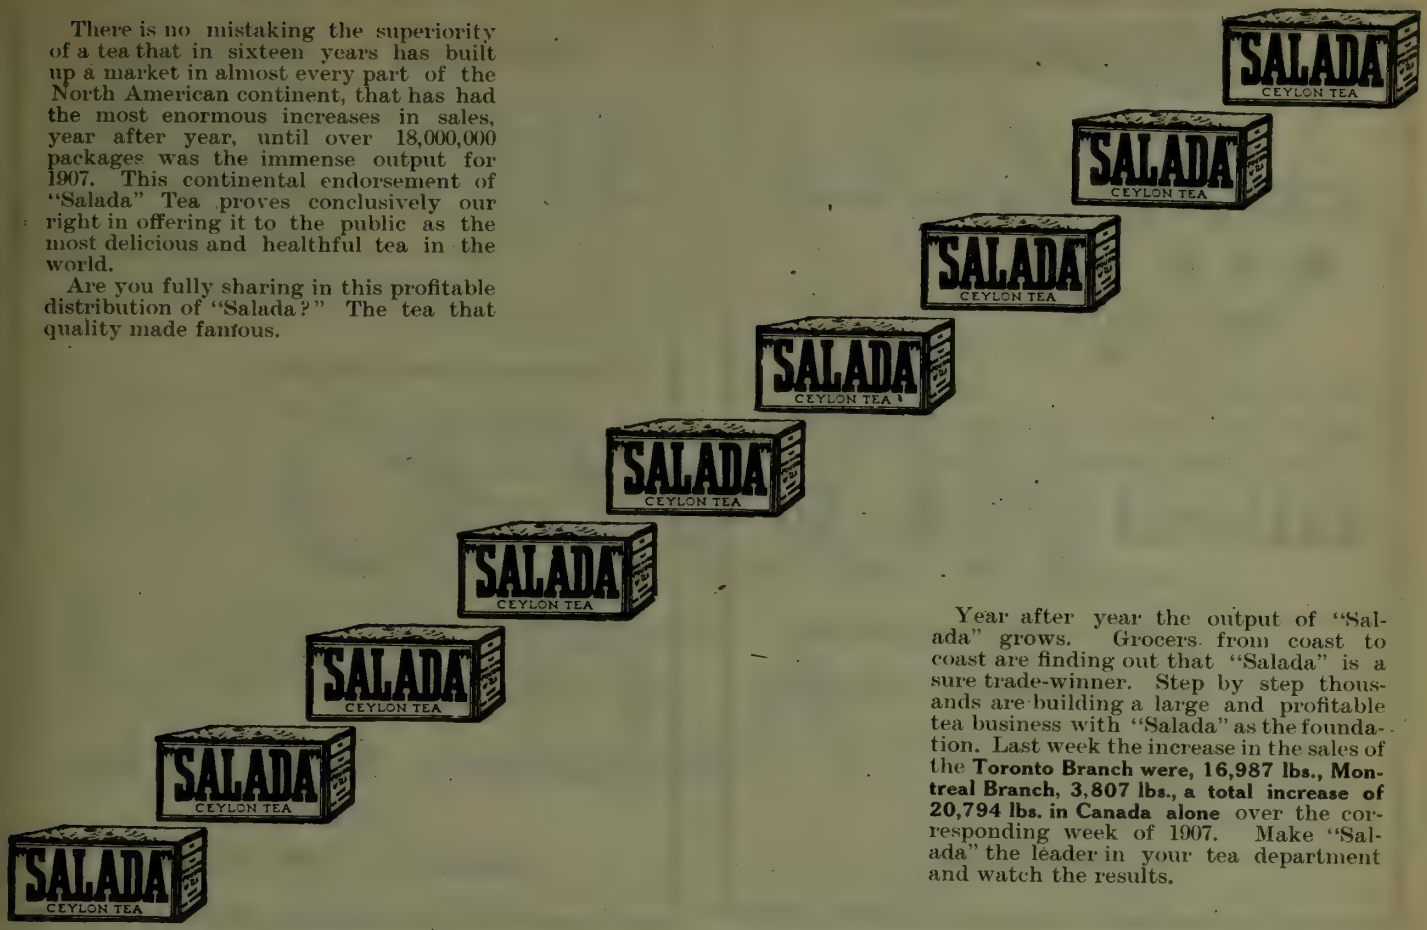
Ask Your Jobber for Old Homestead Brand—if he's a good jobber he has it.

The Old Homestead Canning Co.

Picton, Ontario

There is no mistaking the superiority of a tea that in sixteen years has built up a market in almost every part of the North American continent, that has had the most enormous increases in sales, year after year, until over 18,000,000 packages was the immense output for 1907. This continental endorsement of "Salada" Tea proves conclusively our right in offering it to the public as the most delicious and healthful tea in the world.

Are you fully sharing in this profitable distribution of "Salada?" The tea that quality made famous.



Year after year the output of "Salada" grows. Grocers from coast to coast are finding out that "Salada" is a sure trade-winner. Step by step thousands are building a large and profitable tea business with "Salada" as the foundation. Last week the increase in the sales of the Toronto Branch were, 16,987 lbs., Montreal Branch, 3,807 lbs., a total increase of 20,794 lbs. in Canada alone over the corresponding week of 1907. Make "Salada" the leader in your tea department and watch the results.

LEA'S

The Pickle with the Home-made Flavor

History of the Lea Pickle.

1901 For the last twenty years made by Mrs. Lea for her own table.

1902 Made by Mrs. Lea for sale in their store.

1903 Demanded by the outside consumer. A small factory started.

1904 Premises too small, moved into a larger place and unable to supply the demand.

1905 Factory used last year too small; unable, on account of accommodation, to supply the demand; another addition.

1906 Demand so large that stock was all sold in March, and large orders received through the balance of the pickle season were not filled.

1907 Formation of the Lea Pickling Co., to enlarge premises and carry on the business on a larger scale, with more up-to-date packages, using the same care in packing the goods, and processing done as before under the supervision of Mrs. Lea.

1908 April 15th, and we are again sold out of all bottle goods, after doubling last year's output, and preparation being made that we hope to be able to fill all orders received during the coming season, we are adding to our already large line a TID-BIT pickle that we think will be the finest goods ever offered to the Canadian trade, and at prices in reach of everybody. The fame of these goods is reaching from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and we are daily receiving inquiries from all parts of the Dominion, when you consider that these goods have not been formerly advertised and only now in a small way, that the HOME-MADE flavor must be popular with the consumer. If you will try a small quantity of these goods when they are again offered in August, you will be surprised that so home-like a pickle can be turned in a factory.

Profitable Goods

Are the goods that are a little better than the others: goods that will make sales where the others won't. Oso Brand Pickles are good pickles, and show their quality. We have special facilities for turning out the best pickles, and we have made the most of them. For instance, we provide the seed from which the vegetables are grown and so get the best from the start; the cucumbers go straight from the vine to the factory, so that none of the fresh crispness is lost. We make our own vinegar and it cannot be beaten for pickling purposes. It will certainly pay you to specify that you want our goods when ordering pickles.

JAPAN TEAS

In the trade, it is well known that practically all the first and second crop Japan teas go to the United States and the third crop stuff (the poorest of the season) is shipped to Canada. The Japs value the Canadian market highly, as it affords a dumping ground for their refuse which they cannot sell elsewhere.

Isn't it time for a change ? I think so. Let the Japs drink their own third crop trash if they can't find anyone but Canadians to buy it. Very easy to do. If the lowest retail price was 30c. you could afford to buy second crop teas, and still make a fair profit, but at 25c. you must continue to buy the third crop rubbish. Which will it be ? I am so much in favor of selling only good teas I may be prejudiced but, really I think we can afford to use as good tea as our Yankee cousins. Your customers would say so—if they knew. About a dozen words of explanation will be enough to change them from 25c. to 30c. tea. You know you could do it. Isn't it worth trying good and hard ? Others will soon follow.

What the Canadian Trade is Doing

Letters From Our Corps of Grocer Correspondents From Coast to Coast—Interesting Happenings of the Week in the Various Towns and Cities—Discussion of Trade Problems.

BRACEBRIDGE.

May 5.—J. W. Reid, one of Hutchison Bros. successors, has been quite ill. We are pleased to note that he is feeling better again.

One of the hardest propositions the feed merchants have to contend with, is the bag question. D. T. Hodgson, of Hutchison Bros., has put forward a suggestion, which seems to provide a solution. The proposition is that merchants should have aluminum checks made and numbered from one to fifty, and that the purchaser should pay ten cents for each bag. If only one bag he pays ten cents and gets coupon marked one. For five bags he pays fifty cents and gets coupon marked five. The bags are to be returned within thirty days in good condition with the coupons, and he will receive his cash value. By doing this the purchaser cannot unload flour bags and old bags that he never paid for.

Our Easter window displays deserve special mention. Each merchant and staff vied with one another toward this end, and residents took pleasure in showing the holiday visitors the handsome displays.

BARRIE.

May 5.—H. Knight, who recently sold out the Iroquois Dining Hall, has purchased the stock and fixtures of D. H. Murchison's grocery.

* * *

Jas. Vair's stores were closed last Thursday and Friday owing to the death of Mrs. Vair's mother.

The market was fairly well attended last week for this time of the year, when the majority of the farmers are seeding or very busy with other work.

Butter was a little firmer, and sold at 26c to 27c. Eggs sold readily at 15c and 16c. Chickens were $1 a pair for medium sized, while old fowl sold at 8c. Maple syrup was very plentiful and sold at $1 to $1.15 a gallon, and a quantity of maple sugar sold at 12½c a pound.

Potatoes are scarce here just now and any that come in at all are grabbed up at a dollar a bag.

Trade here is brightening up quite a lot lately, especially in the stores who carry and push the sale of fresh fruits, although some of the merchants are making complaints of the Italian people cutting prices on these lines. A slump in pineapples last week and this week is causing quite a lot of cutting on these goods, some of which are being sold at from 50c a dozen to $2, a very unusual price at this time of year. Ripe tomatoes are now being sold at 10c a pound in some stores. Strawberries at 10c for a pint box, or 18c and 20c for the large boxes, while there are a lot of Florida vegetables, such as spinach, wax beans and cucumbers being disposed of.

The merchants who advertise and push the sale of farm and garden seeds are the men who at this time of year are making money, as there is no better paying proposition than this line.

* * *

J. M. Bothwell has installed a meat slicer for all kinds of boneless meats.

CHATHAM.

May 6.—A subject which the local retail merchant would do well to agitate is that of systematic house numbering. With more paved streets than any other city of its size in Canada, with plenty of handsome store fronts, with fine public buildings, good railway and water facilities and natural gas, it is still far and away behind the times in this one respect.

Speaking to The Grocer representative the other day, President Wm. Anderson, of the Retail Merchants' Association, expressed the opinion that house numbering was a subject which the R. M. A. could with propriety discuss. It will likely come up at the next regular meeting.

For several years past the question has come every January before the City Council, and has just as regularly been shelved on the ground of economy. Last year the Council went so far as to instruct the City Engineer to draw up a plan book of the city, on the understanding that the numbering would be proceeded with by this January. January it was ignominiously shelved.

Such a system would be particularly valuable to the retail merchants in facilitating deliveries. There can be little doubt that a systematic and persistent agitation would speedily accomplish definite results.

At the meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association held on Monday April 27, specific and clear-cut action was taken with reference to the vexed question of double cartage. Mr. Cunningham, for the committee who were appointed at the last meeting to consider the question, reported recommending the printing of 3,000 cards to be handed travelers and sent with mail orders. These cards contain the ultimatum of local retailers as follows:

"Notice.—We will in future require all goods purchased delivered free on board cars at point of shipment. We will pay no cartage charges. All shipping bills must be marked 'Not Carted.' Adopted by all sections of the Retail Merchants' Association, April 27, 1908."

The ultimatum was adopted, and 3,000 cards were ordered printed.

This meeting was the first held under the chairmanship of President W. Anderson. It was a very busy and businesslike session, quite a few matters of local interest being handled. The central delivery system was informally discussed; though, pending a visit of Chairman John McCorvie, of the grocers' section to Ann Arbor, for the purpose of investigating the system there, no action was taken. The outlook is good, however, for the inauguration of a local system.

The re-organization of the grocers' section for the present year will likely take place in the immediate future, when the delivery system will be, in all probability, taken up.

The Board of Trade Council held a well attended meeting last night. A couple of new industries are in sight for Chatham. The Board of Trade rooms, which are also the meeting rooms of the local R.M.A., are to be remodeled, to provide more accommodation. Prof. Shortt, of Kingston, is to be secured to deliver an address here on May 12.

WERE ANXIOUSLY AWAITED.

The following note from our Guelph correspondent this week is along the lines we like to read of. The Grocer is evidently popular in Guelph:

"There were quite a number of anxious enquiries for The Grocer this week, on account of it being one day late. It might be a good idea to miss us for a week sometime, just to see how big a fuss there would be. One of the mail carriers said he was being blamed for not looking after it at the post office, and said he was glad when he saw them arrive on Saturday."

Last week's issue was unavoidably held a day late on account of the large number of illustrations in the article descriptive of the Montreal Exhibition of Groceries.

*Contributions are invited from merchants, grocery travelers or clerks in places where there is not a regular correspondent of this paper.

The tobacco store formerly conducted by the late W. J. Bennett, has changed hands, being purchased by Andrew Crow.

Fish of the commoner kinds are reported plentiful in the Thames. One local fisherman caught 130 mullet in one day with hook and line.

Chairman John McCorvie, of the Grocers' Section R.M.A., was in Detroit last week attending the funeral of the late T. B. Rayl, a well-known merchant. Mr. McCorvie had intended visiting Ann Arbor to look into the workings of the central delivery system there, but could not find time. He intends to do so, however, at a later date.

The series of burglaries in rural and village stores still continues. Last week the general store of E. Desmarais, Stoney Point, was broken into, and Mr. Desmarais held up by two men at the point of the revolver. Last Wednesday Stuart & Howat's general store at Thamesville was entered, though the safe being empty, no money was secured. As yet, none of the culprits have been nabbed, and the general expectation is that none of them will be.

The prospects are that Petrolea will shortly secure a canning factory. Negotiations are now in progress with that end in view.

C. A. Jeffrey, formerly in the grocery business in Blenheim, will shortly open a general store at Kingsville in the Conklin Block.

* * *

Jos. Zakoor, of Amherstburg, has leased the store of D. Conklin, Kingsville, for a year and will open a general fruit business.

GUELPH.

May 5.—The brightest feature in the grocery trade this week was Geo. Williams' window, dressed by Robert Millar, which was quite an attraction. It consisted of French dainties, such as cherries, peas, sardines, etc., all neatly arranged and set off with neat little signs of Mr. Millar's own manufacture.

The Guelph Co-Operative Association held its regular quarterly meeting last Monday, and the reports presented showed the most successful quarter in the history of this association, the last week being particularly good. The meeting had before it a communication from Hamilton stating that the Co-operative Association there had opened a wholesale establishment. The Guelph Association decided, after considering the matter, to give the new wholesale establishment their business and support. Now what do you think of that?

Hugh Walker, of H. Walker & Son, accompanied by Mrs. Walker and their daughters, Mrs. Douglas and Miss Bella, leave this week for an extended trip to the Old Country. We wish them a very pleasant voyage.

* * *

W. H. Fielding has purchased a fancy driving mare at a high price, and may be seen in the matinees here this summer.

* * *

A. W. Tyson and J. and A. Tyson, who have been connected with the meat trade here for the past half-century, have disposed of their two stores and businesses to B. Hewes, late of Calgary, and J. Bell, of Arkell.

The pineapple season has started again and some of the largest we have ever seen are being displayed in the stores.

The many friends of Little & Costigan, grocers, will regret to hear of the death of Mrs. Costigan, mother of both partners, which occurred here on Friday morning.

The next move is cheap fruit. A firm of Italians have started a fruit store in Guelph for wholesale and retail business. They come to the stores and put up this proposition: You buy from us and we will not sell retail in your neighborhood, but if you don't we will sell all the houses right around you. Let them sell retail, but from the price the stores have been selling bananas, from 5c to 10c a dozen lately for choice fruit, the public are getting the advantage of some cheap fruit. It's up to the Italians to move on. We have had them in Guelph before and find we have not any room for this class of merchants, although the city council did put a license on the peanut vendors. This is a job for the Merchants' Association.

LONDON.

May 5.—A little improvement is noticeable in wholesale trade and payments continue fair. Prices of all staples are firm. Coffees show a trifling advance. Raisins and currants are quiet, wholesalers holding off, evidently in expectation of lower prices, of which brokers say there is at present no indication.

Retail trade is rather quiet just now. Dealers however appear quite satisfied with the outlook.

At a meeting of the Middlesex Bee-Keepers' Association, held in the city hall, on Saturday, reports presented showed that bees had wintered well and that the prospects for a good honey crop this year were excellent. The announcement was made that of 141 samples of Canadian honey tested last year only two were found to be adulterated.

The first meeting for 1908 of the London Dairymen's Exchange was held in the city hall on Saturday, when about fifty salesmen and buyers were present. Three small lots of new cheese sold at 11½c. to 11⅝c. The prospects for a big season's make were never better than at present. Speaking of the importance of the dairying industry in this district, Secretary Nelles told The Grocer that last season considerably more than a million dollars' worth of cheese was sold on this exchange for export. At 8 cents per pound there would be a snug profit for the producer, but when it is remembered that last year's price averaged at least 11 cents per pound, it will be seen what there is in the business. One of the exchange's rules provides that cheese must be paid for on delivery, except where other arrangements are made. This exception appears to have caused no end of trouble and to have made the rule practically a dead letter. The matter was pretty well threshed out and finally a committee of three salesmen and two buyers was appointed to consider the question and report. Secretary Hern, of the Western Ontario Dairymen's Association, was present and referred, in the course of an address, to friction caused by the conflicting opinions given of cheese in factories by instructors and inspectors. He also spoke favorably of the change in the law which increases the power of instructors. The following officers were elected: President, D. Smith, Thedford; vice-president, J. W. Scott, Sparta; secretary-treasurer, J. A. Nelles, London; directors, Wm. Elgie, Belton; W. Fitzpatrick, Belmont; W. S. Sifton, Cairngorm; Thos. Ballantyne, jr., Stratford, and J. R. Isaacs, London. Representatives to the Western Fair Board, J. A. Nelles and J. R. Isaacs.

MONTREAL.

A meeting of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association was held on Tuesday evening, April 28, at 270 St. Catherine St. East. Among those present were A. Laniel, president; J. D. Boileau, J. A. Dore, vice-presidents; A. Sarrasin, secretary. The report of the delegation which went to Quebec to interview the Government regarding the license now placed on pedlers, was read. The Government has promised to consider their recommendation that the license of $50 be raised to $200, except that on fruit and vegetable vendors. Among other questions discussed was the disregard of the law shown by some grocers regarding Sunday closing. It is a deplorable fact that in some quarters of the city this regulation is flagrantly disregarded and the association passed a strong resolution requesting Chief of Police Campeau to rigidly enforce the law in this matter.

The question of the annual picnic came up for discussion, and after considerable talk the meeting finally considered two places as suitable for the event—Lanoraie and Lachute. On this matter the meeting was about evenly divided, consequently it was suggested that a committee be appointed which could report at the next meeting on the relative merits of these places, and it was agreed that their decision in the matter should be final. The committee was composed as follows: The president, A. Laniel; vice-president, J. A. Dore; V. Boileau and A. Malo.

The Westmount Grocery Company has opened for business at the corner of Grosvenor Avenue and Sherbrooke St. The proprietors are Messrs. Nordheimer and Durocher, formerly of Dionne & Dionne, St. Catherine St., Westmount. Both members of the firm are practical, and they are hustlers. They should make good.

As a token of their keen appreciation of the efforts of J. A. Beaudry, secretary-manager of the Exhibition of Groceries, at the Arena, the exhibitors presented him with a handsome mission work chair, Wednesday evening, April 29. Mr. Beaudry, in a few well-chosen words, acknowledged the honor which had been done him.

VANCOUVER.

May 1.—Sugar from Scotland is being placed with the retailers this week. This will be in direct competition with the product of the B. C. Sugar Refining Company, which heretofore has had the market to itself. The price is ¼c per pound less, which is an inducement to the retailer to purchase. Generally, he does not secure much profit from fluctuation in prices, the refineries taking this to themselves, and the wholesaler getting his percentage also, secures a modicum. With the rise in the East in the price of sugar, it is not known just how the market will be affected here. With the imported article selling at lower than the present price, there is no room for an increase here. The new sugar is manufactured from West Indian cane, is finer, if anything, in the grain than the local, and comes from the Glebe Sugar Refining Company, Greenock. The wholesalers will be the most affected among the traders, if this business grows. When they receive an order it is sent to the refinery in the city here, which ships direct to the store. The jobber does not have to stock or bother much, yet receives his 8 per cent. on the business.

While living in this position on the Coast has the effect of bringing prices up to a high level, there is also the advantage of living within shipping distance of California. The point is that the fresh butter from California has brought local down five cents a month sooner than under ordinary conditions, and it is likely that another drop of five cents will be made, making it retail at 35c. If local creamery is jobbed at 30c, and fresh grass at that, it will not be profitable to bring in the butter from the South.

While butter is weakening, eggs are stiffening, so that cheaper living, measured in the aggregate, is not a big thing. However, with prime necessities, such as butter and sugar at least stationary, and eggs as low as 30c for the best, it is not too bad.

The advantage of living close to subtropical regions is shown further by the amount of early luxuries that are on the market. This week excellent shipments of tomatoes and asparagus are to hand, bringing down the price materially. Tomatoes are 20c and 25c per lb., good quality asparagus 15c. Strawberries are very high yet, but the later shipments will be to hand any time. New potatoes, 3 lbs. for 25c, are along. These will not sell particularly well, as old potatoes, in fine condition, are on the market in large quantities and at low prices. Last year, prices were high, and Ashcrofts could not be had. This year, farmers and others stocked in, and now that they have to come out, the market is almost flooded.

With the arrival of early apples from Australia in prospect, last fall's stocks are coming out. This is not so much the case with locals as those in Eastern Washington, which find a considerable market in Coast cities. In Seattle, the prices have been brought down by the quantities that have been unloaded, but here the effect has not been appreciable.

After the arrival of the steamer Corwin at Nome a month hence, the citizens there who is handed a lemon will be as proud as if he received a gold nugget. The Corwin will be about the first boat to reach this gold camp, which has been shut off from civilization since last October, and lemons and potatoes done up in tin foil, with oranges, apples, onions, asparagus, eggs, etc., were on board. These will bring very high prices, but despite this they will be snapped up, as they always are.

The members of the Retail Grocers' Association were the guests of the Vancouver Milling & Grain Company, the other night, and were shown over the company's flour mill, the only one in this city. About 150 members and their wives visited the plant, and were shown the different processes of manufacture. Refreshments were also served. The mill company intends to have Wednesday as visitors' day during the summer, beginning next Wednesday, when expert millers will be on hand to explain the system of turning wheat into high-grade flour.

Another effort is being made to revive the creamery at Armstrong, in the Okanagan, or rather to keep it going. This district is not a dairy section like the coast, where the winters are nil, and with much moisture. In the Okanagan, where the dry, warm weather brings along the fruit in fine style, the grass suffers, with the result that creameries are not the success that the promoters would wish.

It is different in the Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island districts. Here the creameries are thriving and are generally considering expansion. R. M. Palmer, Provincial Horticulture Commissioner, is of the opinion that the Provincial creameries as a whole are doing a splendid trade. He is convinced that imported butters are not finding as ready a market as in the past. He was at Cowichan the other day, a short distance out of Victoria, and reports that the creamery there has more orders than can be filled. The management of that institution is very careful in the selection of the cream, with the result that the article produced is unexcelled.

There is money for the man who will invent something to take the place of wood boxes as packages for fruit. With the growth of the fruit growing industry, the amount spent on boxes is very considerable, and this article is getting dearer all the time. One thing, the smaller timbers may be used in the construction of boxes, and with the greater demand for these small wares, lumber, which has formerly gone to the mill bonfire, will doubtless be turned into use for the manufacture of boxes.

* * *

A. McKillop, of McKillop & Company, Vancouver, was in Vernon last week, consulting with the Board of trade, and the Mayor. He will submit a proposition to the Vernon City Council regarding the establishment of a fruit cannery there. He will ask a free site, free water and exemption from taxation for a certain period. A box factory would also be connected with the plant.

* * *

General trade conditions are good, and merchants report a bigger volume of business than a year ago, though there is not such an inclination to large expenditures. Collections are fair. Flour and feed has had a normal amount of business with remarkable steadiness.

GALT.

May 4.—Travelers have been unusually numerous lately, and to have three or four call in one day was not unusual. In this connection, a prominent grocer remarked to your correspondent that the transaction of business between travelers and grocers had altered greatly during the past few years. "Time was," he said, "when a traveler would stand and argue the merits of his goods for half an hour, after he had been courteously informed that you were not in a position to give him an order. To-day the traveler comes in, tells you what he has and why he has it; if you want it he is only too pleased to take your order; if you don't, he takes his departure. And I think the grocery trade in general thinks considerably more of a traveler who recognizes the fact that a man in business is perfectly able to form an opinion of his own as to what he does and does not want." The day of the over-talkative traveler seems to have passed.

The regular spring movement for a half-holiday for the clerks during the summer months is again in progress. Would it not be well for both sides to come to a final decision regarding the matter. It is understood that the majority of the merchants are in favor of a half-holiday during the summer months, but that two or three merchants are blocking the movement. One has been heard to remark that the Golden Rule might be profitably employed in the agitation for a half-holiday during summer. It is understood that if necessary the clerks, or at least a large portion of them would be willing to forego the half-day's pay if they were assured of the holiday. To one who has to remain cooped up in a store six days and a greater part of one night every week, the benefit of the half-holiday would be almost incalculable. Unfortunately, however, opinions differ widely.

One of our prominent grocers is shortly to foresake the rank of bachelorhood. He will have the congratulations of his bachelor friends, and the sympathy of his fellow-benedicts. At least, we presume so.

WINNIPEG.

May 2.—With favorable spring weather and an improved business outlook Winnipeg city grocers are finding conditions much better than they were. The best stores are all busy and report an increased business, as compared with last year. Collections are showing considerable improvement. Had it not been for the efficient service of the credit information department of their Retail Association the Winnipeg grocers would undoubtedly have fared much worse during recent months. This department furnished reliable information as to the standing of customers throughout the city and the retailers thus saved large amounts which would otherwise have been lost through the giving of credit.

John Bearns, Ltd., the Lucerna chocolate people, have removed their offices in Winnipeg from the Bank of Hamilton building to a warehouse on Princess Street, where they have ample storage accommodation.

H. Musham, of Holbrooks, Ltd., has been in Winnipeg for a fortnight conferring with the local agents of his company. He has been conducting an energetic demonstrating campaign throughout the west, and will shortly make Vancouver his permanent headquarters.

* * *

Geo. W. Prout, produce and commission merchant, Winnipeg, has opened a branch in Brandon, where he will have ample storage room and track accommodation for the handling of large quantities of butter and eggs. He has also removed from 182 Princess Street, Winnipeg, to a larger warehouse at 132 Princess Street, where he will have track facilities.

PERTH.

May 5.—The question of cartage charges at both ends being paid by the retailer, is, judging from your correspondence pages, a live question just now. It would, I think, pay wholesale houses in the larger centres to consider this matter. At present by buying from a wholesaler in one of our smaller cities, where there are no cartage charges, we save 12c on the shipment. It is true 12c is a small item on a lot of goods, but it will send half a dozen letters and will, I think, sometimes turn an order from the wholesale house in the large centre.

Perth has a branch of the R.M.A., but it cannot be said to be alive, as a meeting of the association is almost unknown.

A traveler for one of the large cereal mills stated that during the past week he had sold more rolled oats than during the previous six weeks. Why? Because the price is down. Five-pound packages, $4 a case; barrels, $5.60, delivered. Oats have not dropped. This looks like good buying.

The first 1908 cheese was offered this week. It is western Ontario make and the price is 11¾c.

Travelers are already booking orders for next fall's canned goods. Canned goods, we are told, will be lower this year. Tomatoes not over 95c. It seems strange that almost before the seed is planted we have the price of the canned article; but nowadays it is not always the size of the crop that puts the price on the product.

Application has been made to the town council for the exclusive franchise of supplying natural gas to the town for a term of years. Mr. Jamieson, the applicant, is drilling a well, and claims there is every indication that gas or oil will be struck.

* * *

Potatoes and butter are still on the scarce list. Eggs are plentiful, but the price is still high.

HAMILTON.

May 5.—Trade in grocery lines is picking up here. With prospects of a good wheat crop in the west, the merchants and manufacturers are looking for a revival of good business; not as good as last year, but an improvement on the first three months of this. Some of the factories and foundries have started again and the grocers are now expecting some payments on the accounts they have been carrying through the winter. Many a family has kept the wolf from the door through the kindness of the groceryman, and it is hoped that he will be repaid in full for his good acts, but very often the man who is ready to strike at a moment's notice when he thinks it serves his interest, will repudiate his grocer's account and transfer his custom elsewhere.

I see the grocers are up to the house-cleaning season. A number of window displays are in evidence drawing the attention of the ladies to the different lines that make the work lighter for this festive season.

Quite a discussion has been going on among some of the grocers here in regard to what they call our dog nuisance. It even went so far that some bad feeling arose between those who owned thoroughbreds and those who were prepared to ask the city council to remove all dogs, particularly from the public market. Now, have you or any of your correspondents any suggestions to offer on the dog question; that is, when a customer brings one into a store where food products are on sale?

I notice the bill allowing anyone to control the label on canned fish and fruits, without the name of the packer appearing on the label, has passed the third reading in the House of Commons and will now become law. Now, if I may be allowed a word, I think this question could have been discussed by a Provincial Association of Retail Grocers with profit. While some may think it is a piece of bad legislation, there are others who may view it in the opposite light, It seems to me that we are approaching the time when legislation will be sought, for the passing of a Pure Food Act, along the lines of the one now in force in the United States, and it strikes me that this label question will be a factor that will stand in the way when that question comes up.

Your Kingston correspondent does not want to know about John Jones' left arm being sprained, or where James Smith spent Sunday; he wants to know something new about groceries. More power to him. Maybe he will give us something refreshing himself.

The annual convention of the Wholesale Grocers' Guild opened in this city on Tuesday. As I am not invited, I am not in a position to give you any details, but from reports in circulation there is no doubt that the members enjoyed themselves thoroughly while the guests of the Hamilton wholesalers. If the others are as nice a lot of fellows as ours, they are all right.

Cutting prices goes merrily on here, some stores selling granulated sugar at 5c a pound, and all cereals that cost them $1 a dozen at three packages for 25c. The only cereal not cut in price is Shreaded Wheat, and this one the grocers are quietly recommending to their friends. It is not always the cut price that sells the most goods, and just here is a hint to the manufacturer.

It looks from here as if there would be something doing in the canned goods situation before many moons. The wise retailer should positively refuse to buy futures at either fixed or open prices.

A. F. Graham Montreal, has returned from a trip to Toronto and the West.

Robert Miller, head clerk for George Williams' grocery, Guelph, was in Toronto this week to hear Caruso and called on The Grocer.

Archie Langevin, for many years with the firm of Rowe & Rowe, Waterville, Que., has severed his connection with them to take a position with F. X. St. Charles & Co., of Montreal.

TARIFFS OF THE WORLD.

The Department of Trade and Commerce has made a very useful addition to the work hitherto done in that Department by securing and keeping on file, with amendments to date, the tariffs of every country in the world. This step has been taken for the convenience of Canadian exporters, and should prove of great value to them. Information regarding tariff matters will be furnished on request to the Department.

A QUESTION FOR THE MOMENT.

Now that the political campaign in Ontario is with us and will shortly be in full swing, we may expect to have as our principal daily news the reports of political meetings held in various parts of the province. That the people, especially in rural communities, may be well informed on current matters of public interest it has become the custom of late years for the leaders of both Liberal and Conservative parties to make a tour of the political battleground, explaining their position regarding certain questions, and giving evidence of the political faith that is in them. Mr. MacKay has spoken, and is speaking at a number of places in the province, and Mr. Whitney has just begun. Very soon the Quebec leaders will be racing up and down that province.

While it is to the newspapers, and most particularly to the smaller dailies and country weeklies, the great majority of the voters look for information, all must approve of this plan of the political leaders touring the country and explaining the political situation as they see it. But cannot something be done for the comfort of the men who must sacrifice their time, their business and the pleasures of their home life for the extremely strenuous work of an election campaign?

Many of the meetings are held in the smaller centres and these always attract a crowd. It is a familiar fact that the hostelries in a great many of these smaller towns are unable to adequately provide the accommodation necessary for the convenience of a party of travelers such as would accompany these public speakers. For this the proprietors are not to blame. They do the best they can, but they are suddenly face to face with an unusual situation. What we wish to emphasize is the fact that our public men are forced to put up with food and lodging to which they have not been accustomed. It is hard enough to be compelled to make wearisome journeys in crowded cars, without the additional inconvenience of sleeping in an uncomfortable hotel at some crossroads station and eating hastily prepared food whenever an opportunity presents itself.

A plan that will no doubt commend itself to all reasonable men is suggested herewith: Let the railway companies provide private cars for the convenience of the leaders of both parties, while they are on tour, and allow these men to make them their home and their office such as is now the case, and rightly so, with railway officials. Our public men are surely of as much importance to the country as these railway men. In this way they would be reasonably sure of good food at regular hours, and suitable, if not comfortable, sleeping places. Let the tours be planned beforehand, so that the trips may conform to some sort of time schedule. If the railways are themselves unwilling to set aside a couple of cars for this purpose, surely some arrangement might be made whereby the political parties would see that this accommodation is provided for the men they have chosen to be their leaders.

Very probably there are people with comfortable homes in the centres where these public men speak, who would be only too glad to have them as their guests if the suggestion were made to them.

We know the inconveniences and worse than inconveniences that Mr. Borden had to contend with while on his tour of the west last summer, traveling in some cases by freight trains, to catch which he had to rise at unearthly hours; sleeping in beds in apologies for hotels, and eating his meals, if at all, at some wayside station restaurant, and we know how he came back completely worn out, with impaired health and a weakened constitution.

Sometimes in our conversation we speak lightly of politics and politicians, but we must recognize the fact that we placed these men in their positions, and that with very few exceptions they fill their places with credit, most faithfully and conscientiously, and among the leaders, with much self-sacrifice and often little reward. They are our representatives and we must look after their welfare while they are attending our business.

To do their best work and maintain health these men should have good food and comfortable resting places and to be able to have these the railways should provide private cars or the political parties should have these provided for them.

THE FLOUR SITUATION.

The small amount of wheat in sight at the present time has had its inevitable result on the market and millers announce an advance on their better lines of ten cents per barrel. This condition of affairs is due to the sharp decline in supplies, and the healthy demand displayed in both the American and Canadian markets. In addition to these influences the foreign demand is exceptionally good at advanced prices, and all these tendencies, taken into conjunction with the fact that there is a shortage in the wheat market of over 21,000,000 bushels, provides for some activity in flour.

COURTESY PAYS.

If there is one man on earth more than all others that the retailer cannot afford to offend it is the drummer, providing, of course, the latter is a man who knows his place and keeps it; if not his influence is nil and he will soon cease to be a drummer.

Aside from the value of the commercial man as a trade barometer and a source of information on new goods, he is meeting grocerymen, both wholesale and retail, constantly and has more influence with every branch of the trade in a day than the local dealer has in a life time. How easy then it is for him, consciously or otherwise, to communicate elsewhere certain personal impressions, and of course these would be most likely to come to mind at the places where they would be of the most interest, and where they would consequently do the most good or harm.

WHAT ABOUT TRAVELERS' HOLIDAYS?

It has been customary for a number of years for the grocery jobbing trade of central and western Ontario to arrange their travelers' holidays at a specified time. The reasons for this need not be mentioned here, but it is apparent that the arrangement has not been satisfactory to the majority of the traveling salesmen, nor can it be said to have benefitted the jobbing houses to any appreciable extent. Several of the wholesale grocers have taken the ground that it is not within their province to dictate when their salesmen should be compelled to take holidays. Circumstances in connection with the traveler's own personal affairs often make the taking of his holidays at the specified time, generally the end of July and first week in August, without benefit to the salesmen and only tend to dissatisfy him.

As one of the largest jobbers in Canada remarked to The Grocer in discussing this question the other day: "Why should I dictate to my travelers when they should take their holidays? They have rights and privileges as well as I have and they are loyal to me and my interests year in and year out, or they would not be on my staff very long. Their tastes, like the tastes of my fellow wholesale grocers, are varied. One delights in fishing, another prefers to take a trip to the south during the winter months, still another desires to take unto himself a wife, and an odd man may prefer to go hunting during the hunting season. Why should I compel all my men to take their holidays during the hot month of July or Augurt when their is no fishing, Florida is too hot, and July and August closed to wedding ceremonies and the law prohibits the shooting of deer and other game. No sir, I let my men choose their own time, leaving it to them to arrange their trips so as not to be detrimental to their connection or my trade, and the experience of my house has been that it pays us to follow this plan. It also seems to me that the plan regarding travelers' holidays is rather a sign of weakness on the part of the jobbing trade entering into this arrangement. It appears very much a matter of small jealousy on the part of individual houses in assuming that the withdrawal of their travelers from their ground for a few weeks will throw the business into the hands of their competitors. Surely this must certainly be very poor business that will turn so readily or the houses' hold on the customers' confidence must be very weak. I realize that I cannot, nor does my house wish, nor is it able to handle all the business obtainable and during the absence of any one of my travelers off his ground if my house loses a certain amount of business, I have always found that some time or other I will get it back again, so what's the difference, it all comes out the same in the long run and I have a satisfied staff of salesmen."

The jobber in question is recognized as one of the brightest minds and business men in the grocery trade in Canada, and the conduct of the business of his house on up-to-date liberal lines has placed it in the very forefront of the grocery trade.

Our object in referring editorially to the question of the travelers' holidays at this time is due to the fact that a number of travelers have mentioned the matter to The Grocer, asking for ventilation on the subject. Owing to the fact that the tercentenary of the founding of the City of Quebec will be celebrated in a most royal manner during the latter part of July, and also that the prevalence of low railway and steamboat rates is a foregone conclusion and the great fact that our central and western Ontario travelers, at least the majority of them, have never seen the ancient capital, and the still greater fact that a trip and visit to the French-Canadian cities of Quebec and Montreal and contact with their fellow travelers and their houses will tend to broaden their minds and views and cannot help but make better feeling not only in business but also generally. It would seem wise, in the opinion of The Grocer that the members to the agreement arranging for holidays be held during the usual term, namely the last few days in July and the two weeks in August, should consider this feature so as to permit travelers desiring to take advantage of the Quebec Jubilee to do so.

There is also another and a more direct effect on the trade of the houses by reason of this agreement and that is this: the holidays, as stated above, are usually arranged for the last few days in July and the early part of August, or the first two weeks in August. This arrangement keeps the traveler two weeks off his ground. He returns about the 15th or 16th of August, makes one call on his trade and then during the Canadian National Exhibition, the Western Exhibition at London, the Central Canada Exhibition at Ottawa, and other fairs, he is off again probably for another two weeks. This means that the customers upon whom he has called regularly every two or three weeks will not receive more than one call in seven weeks or two months. There may be a few exceptions to this, but from The Grocer's knowledge of the condition of the trade, we are convinced that we are not far wrong in suggesting that a change be made in this respect. The driving of intelligent men to conform to certain unwise rules and methods has never paid and is against all the principles of modern business ethics.

If houses who have arranged for this specific period for their travelers do not wish to leave the territory open they could very readily send out one of their sample room young men. Besides keeping the connection in this way it would be the best training for the substitute to know conditions as they actually are outside.

TO IMPROVE MONTREAL HARBOR.

Major Stephens, president of the Montreal Harbor Commissioners, has arrived in Montreal fresh from his trip abroad, where he went to inspect various harbors of Europe, with a view to obtaining information which might be employed in the proposed improvements in the port of Montreal. Major Stephens, after a close scrutiny of all the great shipping centres abroad, has come home full of enthusiasm for the future prospects of Montreal harbor, and will immediately lay a report of his investigations before the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, also a plan for the future development of the harbor, prepared by the eminent English engineer, R. C. Davison, M.I.C.I. This plan, when carried into effect, will make Montreal's port one of the most complete harbors in the world. At the present time the expenditure on this port has reached the sum of $10,000,000, as against $186,700,000 for London; $125,000,000 for Liverpool, and $90,000,000 for Manchester, whilst Glasgow, Bristol, Cardiff, Antwerp, Hamburg and Havre have each expended $30,000,000 or more on the development of their harbors. At present the channel from Montreal to the sea is 31 feet deep. It is proposed to increase this depth to 40 feet, and it is also deemed necessary to increase its width, which, at present, is 450 feet. At the present time there are boats lying in the harbor which draw 29 feet. Major Stephens compared Liverpool with Montreal, saying that her docks would reach from Victoria Bridge to Longue Pointe, so it will be seen the possibilities for development are equal to the large ports of Europe.

It is quite plain that if the proposed improvements are carried into effect, Montreal will have a chance of getting the Empresses, which at present, on account of their great draught, are not brought up to the city.

It will require many years to carry into effect the proposed plans, but it is thought they will make Montreal the great national port she should be.

NEWS OF THE ORGANIZED TRADE

Interesting Notes From Boards of Trade and Associations in Canada and Abroad.

At a recent general meeting of the Brighton and Hove (England) Grocers' Association, a discussion was opened on the decline and fall of the grocer. One speaker said there were two common foes—the multiple shop and the co-operative society—neither of which paid their share to the national exchequer. The trade done by one of these societies last year, if done by a trader, would mean an addition of £1,500 to the exchequer. This was one reason why men were falling in the trade. The Association was urged to take action to impel the railway companies, post office, and other employers of labor to see that their employes' time was not utilized in the cause of co-operation. It was deemed advisable that private traders should see that their premises were made attractive. Another speaker did not believe in the decline and fall of the grocer. The grocer of to-day was more intelligent than 36 years ago, he said, when he was a young man. The grocer to-day kept an emporium, was a man of brains, and was progressive, but he was a bad financier. Grocers must expect competition from company shops. The buying of coupon articles was denounced and the giving of credit was regarded as unjustified. One of the greatest secrets of success was ready money; and the company shops in selling for cash were wiser in their generation than the private trader. Many traders did not succeed, because they did not deserve to. The keeping open of stores to a late hour was denounced. Still another member combatted the opinion of the previous speaker. Trade was not as good as twenty years ago, and traders were only getting a living on goods not handled by company shops. The public should be educated in regard to this competition, for the company shops were selling only cheap grades of goods; and there should be an association of all traders to combat the company shops. The President closed the discussion by expressing the hope that something tangible might be done in the near future.

At the same meeting the following resolution was moved: "This association desires to enter a strong protest against the growing evil of clergy of all denominations appealing to manufacturers and retailers for goods to be supplied gratuitously, or at less than wholesale prices, in connection with bazaars and sales of work. The practice leads to an undesirable form of competition, inasmuch as the prices charged to the public are generally much below those of private traders, and, in the majority of instances, the supporters of places of worship are the sufferers by this system of trading. The hope is expressed that the clergy will discountenance any proposals for obtaining goods from the sources named when bazaars or sales of work are to be held in connection with their churches."

The majority of members thought this too drastic, but the feeling was general that traders should not be broached on the subject of bazaars by customers when paying bills. A conference of representatives of the trade and the heads of churches was suggested, and the President referred back the matter to the committee.

Foam Lake, Sask., has organized a Board of Trade. Mr. Craig is President; A. M. Sparrow, Secretary-Treasurer, and R. Cain, O. Peturson and Angus Robertson, Directors.

The Lindsay, Ont., Board of Trade has made a proposition to G. H. Woodward & Co., to move their biscuit factory from Cannington to Lindsay.

The Orangeville, Ont., Board of Trade at a recent meeting decided to start a weekly market at once, and a committee was appointed to secure suitable premises. The Board also has a proposition before it advocating the closing of all stores at six o'clock in the evening.

A pure food by-law is before the Victoria, B.C., City Council, and has already received endorsation, the civic authorities apparently being agreed as to its necessity. The measure provides for the appointment of one or more sanitary inspectors to enforce the civic health by-laws and act as inspectors of food, drugs and agricultural fertilizers. Dairies, milk shops, slaughter houses, etc., will be visited; and milk, cream, butter, cheese, meat, poultry, vegetables and other natural products offered for sale for human food or drink will be inspected. The officers are empowered to stop vehicles carrying these goods and destroy all articles unfit for use. A money penalty may also be imposed on offenders.

CANVASSING FOR ORDERS.

The question as to whether or not it is advisable for a grocer to solicit business by canvass outside the store is a very interesting one. A letter from our Guelph correspondent this week discusses the matter quite comprehensively and in an interesting manner as follows:

"Some firms believe in going after business with all their energy, while others not only believe it, but also do it. That is not the way to build up a successful business and there is no money in it,' said a prominent grocer the other day, in talking of going out after orders at private houses. 'You get the orders in some cases, but never get the money. It is hard work enough to get the money for what you sell in the store when they come with their orders, without going out begging for orders and then have to go and beg for your money.'

"This canvassing for trade is just the means of giving a number of people a chance to get into your books who never intend to pay. We lost more money in that way than in any other in connection with our large business,' said another former partner in a large grocery store. 'If I cannot get business without running after it, I will close up shop,' said another.

Having had some experience in this line your correspondent enjoyed it very much indeed, but could not agree with any of them. There are some bad pays, to be sure, also some who will tell you to your face when asked for money that you worried the heart out of them for an order and now you can whistle for your money till they get ready to pay you.

"Another man told a grocer he would pay him in hogs. 'Tut, man,' the grocer said, 'you have no hogs.' 'Well, if ever I get any hogs I will pay you.' Even at that there are only exceptions, and a clerk can easily detect in a few calls who intend to pay and who do not, and can avoid calling. Keep your eye on the doubtful customers. One firm who keeps a horse and rig on the road all the time getting orders, had no fault to find with bad accounts from this source. You can do a nice business by giving a clerk two half days a week, say Tuesday and Thursday mornings. The mornings are the best, for you get the buyers at home generally. Give the clerk about twenty-five calls each morning of customers living at a distance from your store, and whose trade you would not get if you did not go after it. This gives you a chance to split up the Saturday trade and to ease off this one big day's business each week. He can urge the people to have their orders ready for him and after getting what they have written down he can introduce a new line or two each week, and not lose much time at each place. Give him a book with their accounts each time he goes and see they are properly checked each week. There are a great many people who like to have a clerk call on them once a week and tell them of new things in stock, who will buy and also pay who never see your store from one year's end to another.

"Others like to have their orders called for during the week and like to call on Saturday and pay for it. Each store loses a great deal of trade that properly belongs to it, just because it is not looked after. There are no set rules to run any store, and if you can make any money out of calling for orders, by all means do so. But don't let the other fellow laugh you out of it because he lost some money and cannot see eye to eye with you. Dig right in and get the business that some of those tea pedlers are getting and that properly belongs to you."

ONTARIO GUILD ELECTS OFFICERS

At the afternoon session of the meeting of the Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Guild at Hamilton on Wednesday, the officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: W. G. Craig, Kingston, president; Fred. T. Smye, Hamilton, vice-president. Committee on Costs—William Logan, Toronto; Samuel Vila, Hamilton; and John Dillon, London. Committee to confer with manufacturers—T. B. Escott, London; F. T. Smye, Hamilton; A. H. Paffard, Toronto; Thomas Kinnear, Toronto; W. G. Craig, Kingston, and H. C. Beckett, Hamilton. Legislation Committee—James Gilmour, Brockville; James Gow, Hamilton; John Garvey, London, and J. H. Simpson, Guelph.

The Guild have decided to provide for the travelers' holidays the last two weeks in July, instead of in August, as formerly. This will allow any of the travelers who desire to attend the Quebec Tercentenary.

EVOLUTION IN GROCERIES.

Reasons for the Growing Tendency to Attempt to Eliminate the Jobber.

The following article from a recent issue of the Tea and Coffee Trade Journal of New York, applies to a great extent to conditions existent in Canada, as well as in the United States, and will repay careful perusal by all branches of the trade :

"No jobber who takes time to think—and there are some who do—can fail to recognize in many of the trade movements which are now attracting attention the unmistakable signs of an evolution. Yet the great bulk of the trade fails fundamentally to appreciate the need for careful study and revision of methods and practices. Such firm and immovable problems as the chain store, the buying exchange, the co-operative store, the semi-jobber, the manufacturing jobber and the changing methods of manufacturers in merchandizing their goods, all betoken a trend which needs something more than mere contemplation. If the old factors in the process of feeding the nation are to prevail they must carefully study the facts and trim accordingly.

"Within a year or two the jobbers' associations have been awakening to this and their aggressiveness has passed the interest along the line to the manufacturer, who is now devoting more attention to the problem than most jobbers imagine. The writer has of late been making a somewhat extended visit among the leading grocery manufacturers and producers and was surprised to find how generally manufacturers are aroused to the need for meeting the changing conditions. As a rule they desire to recognize the jobber as their most desirable and effective distributor. They profess to prefer to use his agency rather than that of the retailer direct, but with singular unanimity they raise their voices in protest against practices which, they say, must be changed before any amicable plan of co-operation can be devised. If half they say be true, one of the wisest things the jobbers' organizations could do would be to indulge in a general house-cleaning and setting to rights of the disorders the manufacturer complains of.

A Growing Tendency.

"There is a growing tendency among the canners and manufacturers to refuse to sell their products under the buyer's label, and to maintain their own identity by an insistence on their own label, whoever markets the goods. The antagonism of certain jobbing interests to this demand is fast driving the manufacturer to seek a direct outlet through the retailer. But, aside from that, there are many concerns which claim to be selling direct from sheer force of necessity, due, they say, to the inability or unwillingness of the jobber to faithfully and loyally represent the manufacturer who relies upon him. Even those who solicit the retail trade direct yet bill through the jobber make complaint of this in most significant ways and there is much in what they say for the jobber to listen to.

" 'I would much prefer to market my goods through the jobber,' said one of the best-known manufacturers of the country the other day, 'and to pay him a handsome profit for his work, but there are circumstances about the situation which make it impossible for me to do so with safety to my own interests. I have been forced to solicit my own trade, although we bill through the jobbers and give them a margin practically for doing nothing. Our goods are of a kind which slowly deteriorate, and therefore need constant watching. Yet we found the jobber letting goods get old and shopworn and then trying to substitute his own brands, which he would watch more carefully. Our only salvation lay in organizing and maintaining a corps of our own salesmen, who look out for us and us only. That's the only reason we solicit direct sales. I'd be mighty glad if the jobbers would reform and let us discontinue such expensive distributive machinery.'

The Salesman's Responsibility.

"The above indicates strongly that one of the weaknesses in the present jobbing system is the salesman. If salesmen were ideal many of the prevailing woes of the jobber would be eliminated and he would enjoy a larger reputation as a merchant of broad calibre. As things are to-day, he is growing more and more an automaton, a mere bit of perfunctory mercantile machinery, whose sole aim in life is to buy for one dollar and sell for two with as little effort as possible. The process is particularly complicated because of the fact that salesmen of the average type follow the lines of least resistance, and fail totally to recognize the need for individual effort in harmony with the policy of the head of the house.

"There are two kinds of merchants : those who simply pass out what the trade may want, and those who seek to influence the trade to take up new lines and new articles on which there is a better chance for commercial gain. The salesman is the essential factor in the differentiation. A faithful salesman will aim to push those goods on which his employer can make a reasonable profit; the average will not take the time to do so. They are content to pass out whatever the customer may ask for. It is difficult for the jobber to guarantee the manufacturer a reasonable and aggressive pushing of his product unless he can have the co-operation of the salesmen. As a rule he prefers to reserve his pushing power for his own goods. In that event, what ground has a jobber left on which to stand in pressing his claims to the manufacturer for recognition ? If the manufacturer cannot safely and profitably leave his interests in the hands of the jobber, what reasonable objection can there be to his seeking a direct market ? In general fundamentals each has ample ground for his contention. But if harmony is to be restored, it is evident that both should investigate their own ranks as well as find fault with the other fellow. Else evolution must proceed uninterruptedly, whoever may fall by the wayside."

RESUME EARLY CLOSING.

Davidson & Hay, the Toronto wholesale house, resumed on Tuesday of this week their usual custom of early closing during the summer months. No matter how brisk business is, 5 o'clock sees an end to the day's work, and this innovation is continued from May to September. The early hour of closing is certainly greatly appreciated by the firm's employes.

BUILDING UP U.S. BUSINESS.

P. C. Larkin, of the Salada Tea Co., Toronto, has just returned from an extended visit to the firm's branches in Montreal, New York, Boston and Buffalo. Speaking to The Grocer, Mr. Larkin reports that trade in Montreal is excellent ; that branch which caters for the Provinces of Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, having shown an increase this year of over 20 per cent. over the corresponding period of 1907, and this, notwithstanding the raising of the 25c tea to 30c per pound to the consumer during the past three months.

In Boston, he reports that general trade throughout New England is very quiet, many of the larger manufacturing establishments being closed entirely and others working on half or quarter time. Notwithstanding this, the growth of this firm's business is most satisfactory, this being one of the most profitable branches.

New York, where Salada is now in its sixth year, is showing very satisfactory business, indeed. Over 4,000 grocers in the City of New York are now handling this tea, and it has established a very satisfactory reputation.

Mr. Larkin expressed surprise that more Canadian manufacturers did not go to the United States for business. They are received there, he says, with the same welcome that the American business man is here, and, if their goods have merit, the fact that they come from Canada is, if anything, in their favor. If the members of packet tea firms who have made strenuous attempts, often unsuccessfully for business in Canada for the past fifteen years, had devoted their energies and money to an exploitation of the American tea market, they would have met with better success. To be sure, there is not as much tea consumed per head of population, but neither is the tea trade looked after, nor understood as well by the American wholesale grocers and merchants, as in Canada. They understand coffee all right, but Ceylon tea to the average wholesaler is more or less a mystery.

Mr. Larkin says Ceylon and India teas are making wonderful progress. Last year 19 per cent. of the total imports into the United States were Ceylon and India teas, and he believes that in the long run these will displace all others in the United States, as they have, to a great extent, in Great Britain, Canada and Australia, and are now doing in Russia.

CLERKS ELECT OFFICERS.

The regular monthly meeting of the Toronto Grocery Clerks' Benefit Association was held in their rooms on Tuesday evening, April 28. Business of importance was dealt with, and disposed of, and the officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, E. Mathews; Vice-President, G. L. Hiese; Corresponding Secretary, W. G. Bail; Recording Secretary, F. Turpin; Treasurer, R. H. Hudson.

The capital stock of Smellie Bros., general merchants, Russell, Man., has been increased from $100,000 to $200,000.

MEETING OF ONTARIO GUILD.

Wholesale Grocers of Province Enjoy Hospitality of Hamilton Trade—A Most Successful Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Guild was held in the Federal Life Building, Hamilton, on Tuesday and Wednesday, of this week. Members to the number of about forty were present from every city and branch of the Guild in the Province, and this meeting was from all appearances the best ever held by the Provincial Guild. President T. B. Escott, London, was in the chair.

On Tuesday morning, after the appointment of W. T. Armstrong as Recording Secretary, addresses of welcome were delivered by F. T. Smye, President of the Hamilton branch, and H. C. Beckett, President of the Dominion Guild. A Press Committee was appointed, consisting of Messrs. Smye and Beckett. Mr. Smye presented his report on legislation. The financial report was presented, showing a very satisfactory balance.

The President, in his address, in reviewing the work of the past year, was pleased to report very satisfactory progress in many matters affecting the interests of the trade. He stated also that other important matters were in the course of attention, and he hoped that these would shortly be brought to a successful issue. Mr. Beckett explained that the question of the suit that had been pending for nearly two years, and which had been decided for hearing sometime in June, was still in unsatisfactory and uncertain position. It was expected, however, that this question could not be very much longer postponed, and he hoped for a very favorable issue.

H. N. Kittson delivered a most eloquent and interesting address on "Know Thy Opportunity," full particulars of which will appear in next week's issue. After the conclusion of Mr. Kittson's address an adjournment was made to the Hamilton Club for luncheon, as the guests of the Canadian Canners, Ltd. After luncheon an automobile trip was tendered by the Canners to the delegates, and a very happy run was made to Grimsby and return.

The afternoon session on Tuesday was taken up by the discussion of the letter of recommendation from the Hamilton Board of Trade re the new Bill of Lading, flag station difficulties and settlement of claims by railway companies. There was also discussion on a letter prepared by the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild, dealing with the relations between manufacturers and wholesalers. A paper was read by H. C. Beckett on "The Importance and Value of Trade Associations and Their Relations With the Government." This aroused the greatest interest, and discussion, and many flattering remarks were made commending Mr. Beckett on his presentation of the subject. The Canadian Grocer will reproduce Mr. Beckett's article in next week's issue.

Interesting discussion with reference to the payment of freight to non-competing points followed Mr. Beckett's paper, and was continued till adjournment to be resumed on Wednesday morning. At 6.30 the visiting delegates were entertained at the Hamilton Club by the Hamilton trade to an informal dinner. After dinner the members of the Guild adjourned to Bennett's Theatre, also as the guests of the Hamilton trade.

Some interesting papers and discussions were given during the Wednesday sessions and the visitors were entertained similarly to Tuesday. Unfortunately W. G. Craig, of Kingston, who was to have given a paper on Wednesday morning, was unavoidably absent through illness.

Owing to the importance and value to the Canadian trade of these meetings, The Canadian Grocer will publish in detail in its issue of the 15th, a full report of the proceedings of the Guild meeting.

NEW FISH DRIER.

Economical System Recently Invented in Newfoundland.

A recent letter from E. D. Arnaud, Canadian Trade Commissioner in Newfoundland, describes a system of fish-drying which has recently been used in St. Johns, and which should be of interest to fish packers generally. The letter says in part :

"Through the courtesy of Hon. John Harvey I have been afforded an opportunity to inspect a new style of fish drying apparatus that has recently been erected on the premises of Harvey & Co., and is now, I understand, patented by John Clouston, of St. John's, who constructed the drier under Mr. Harvey's directions.

"Mr. Harvey explained that while the initial cost of his plant was very much less than one of similar capacity operated by means of hot water, the consumption of fuel was by actual test from one-quarter to one-fifth less, and the result in the making of the fish was more satisfactory than by other methods. A brief description of Mr. Harvey's plant will probably be of interest to fish dealers in Canada, especially the Maritime Provinces and British Columbia, and may induce them to inquire into its merits. It may be roughly described as an oblong structure of close-fitting boards into which dry heated air is forced by means of an electrically driven fan through horizontal metal perforated piping between which the fish are spread on wire trays, the air after passing over which is conducted back through wood air-ducts to the furnace to be used over again. Ventilation is had by metal air-ducts opening close to the floor of the drier, and leading up through the roof, which removes any moisture evaporated from the fish. This drier is designed to spread 70 quintal of small or 90 quintal of large fish, and the furnace consumes one ton of hard coal a week. Mr. Harvey informed me that it has been in operation since December last, and has given very satisfactory results."

A VISITOR FROM BRAZIL.

Native From Centre of Santos Coffee Plantations Spends Few Days in Toronto.

Toronto had a visitor from South America last week in the person of M. Achilles Daunt, of Santos, Brazil, whose home is in the middle of the coffee plantations. Mr. Daunt is a cousin by marriage of General Campos Saltes, ex-President of Brazil. When interviewed regarding coffee growing and the prospects for Santos this year, he spoke in an interesting manner of his native country, comparing the importance of coffee production there with that of wheat growing in Canada. A year ago, Mr. Daunt says, the yield was unusually heavy, the total value of the crop being about $17,000,000. This year prospects are rather discouraging, and the outlook is for a light crop.

The importance of Brazil's coffee plantations is rapidly increasing, according to Mr. Daunt, and there is a steady stream of immigrants coming from Italy, Spain and Northern Africa, most of them with a view to securing employment on the coffee plantations. It will be interesting to note that the total number of immigrants arriving annually is between 200,000 and 300,000, about the same number as Canada is receiving.

TO STIMULATE FRUIT SALES.

Several grocers of Grand Forks, N. D., have combined in a scheme that should get business for the stores interested. A window of one of the stores will be filled with a mixture of various kinds of fruits, it being planned to put as many in as possible. During an entire week purchasers of groceries at any of the stores in the arrangement will have an opportunity of guessing the total number of pieces of fruit the window contains, and each grocer will reward the one who comes the nearest with a box of oranges. This plan should increase fruit sales at all of the stores.

COMES FROM PANAMA.

G. Jackson, a bright young man, who has spent the most of his life in the grocery trade, is in Toronto this week looking for a situation. Mr. Jackson grew up in the trade in England and for some time occupied a position as manager of one of Sir Thomas Lipton's stores. A couple of years ago he wandered down to Panama and until recently has been engaged as manager of one of the Government stores there. Feeling ill effects from the climate, Mr. Jackson started for colder weather and just reached Canada on Saturday. He intends settling in Toronto.

A. H. Mace & Co., Montreal, are meeting with good success in the placing of their ice cream freezers on the American market. Already a New York office has been opened, at 32 Broadway, under the style of M. B. Mace & Co. J. Egbert Peters, vice-president, is manager. The freezers supplied the Canadian trade are being manufactured in Montreal, in the company's own shop on Bleury Street.

Markets and Market Notes

Quotations on Staple and Special Lines of Groceries From Various Points in Canada—Notes and Tendencies From the Markets Abroad.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—

RICE—Advance anticipated.

BEANS—Decline.

FLOUR—Advanced 10c.

COFFEE—Advance anticipated.

FISH—Declined.

Montreal, May 7, 1908.

The opening of navigation has already had an obvious effect on the markets, as there have been appreciable advances in many lines which it was contemplated this event would accomplish. One of the first boats to arrive in the port was the Thomson liner Tremona, with a cargo of oranges and lemons from Sorrento and Messina. Last week the flour market showed some activity, advancing in two lines ten cents, which is due to a more limited supply of wheat in sight at the present time as compared with this date one year ago. It is thought that this condition may affect the price still further, and other advances are expected. The egg market has displayed some stringency as regards supply, with the result that dealers have been forced to pay fancy prices to the country people in order to obtain sufficient quantities for storage purposes. However, this condition of affairs is expected to disappear as soon as the warm weather begins. The bean market has shown a slight decline, otherwise it displays no new features. Spices afford no opportunity for comment, remaining about the same as last week. Coffee dealers here are contemplating an advance owing to the falling off in Brazilian receipts and the continued strong condition of the European market. However, up to the present it has had no obvious effect on the local market, the prices remaining about the same as formerly. In dried fruits, prunes continue to exhibit an inclination to advance, owing to a previously mentioned condition of scarcity of the product on the Pacific Coast. The market for new crop Japan tea has opened and local dealers are looking forward to great activity in this commodity, as stocks of old are almost completely cleaned out, and the reports being received here state that the new crop is quite up to anything in the past in quality, and compares favorably in quantity. These conditions should offer considerable scope for healthy trading.

SUGAR—The sugar situation remains about the same as last week, though dealers report a slightly accelerated market owing more or less to the opening of navigation which has stimulated all branches of trade.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES—The syrup and molasses markets were exceptionally good during Lent, which is credited to the fact that there is less meat used, and butter was exceptionally high, but, strange to say, this condition continues, even in spite of the fact that these apparent conditions are removed. Demand remains very good. Cable advices state that holders will not quote prices on new molasses at present, as they contemplate an advance.

MAPLE PRODUCTS—Advices from the country say that the crop is unusually large this year (of both syrup and sugar). Prices are a little easier, if anything, although there is not a great change. Reports say there are heavy stocks held by the farmers and country storekeepers, which will be held for higher prices as soon as the heavy stocks held by the Montreal dealers are gotten rid of. Demand still remains good.

At present there is scarcely any of the old crop left, dealers having been almost completely cleaned out. Ceylons and Indians are normal.

DRIED FRUITS—The dried fruit market is steady with only a fair demand. Valencia raisins have had a little flutter, advancing about half a cent, as also prunes. The advance of the latter product is no doubt due to the scarcity of article among the Pacific Coast packers.

RICE AND TAPIOCA—Rice market is firm, with a little better demand, and prices are likely to be upheld owing to reports of heavy rains in the East, which may make the rice coming forward to European markets stained. The result is that millers are covering their requirements.

Tapioca is firm, but slow of sale. Very little inquiry for forward shipments either in Canada or the United States is reported. Holders are firm, however, in their ideas, and there may be advance when demand springs up.

EVAPORATED APPLES—There is an advance in this market of about half a cent, otherwise the market is very dull. The demand is fair, and with the exception of this slight increase there is no change in prices.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—There is a good demand for canned vegetables, and the canned fruit market is improving very rapidly and it is expected that this condition will continue until such a time as the fresh grown product becomes cheaper. Much interest is displayed in the future markets, which will be influenced by the new list prices expected shortly.

TORONTO—Demand seems to be a little more brisk this week in lines of both fruit and vegetables. Considerable interest is manifested among the trade in the outlook for this year's prices, which are commonly spoken of as likely to be considerably lower than last year's prices.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Totonto, May 7, 1908.

The wholesale markets are quiet this week, a fact which no one who is in touch with trade will deny. Some of the jobbers attribute this condition to the fact that the farmers are busily engaged in seeding and other farm work and have not been getting out to town to do any buying. Others blame the general condition of trade for the result. Whatever it is, it is certainly being felt. Collections, too, are a little stiffer than they have been though the most optimistic jobbers say they have nothing to complain of.

The markets are quiet, too, from another standpoint, that of changes. Grocery staples are moving along pretty steadily and there is little new to report this week, either from local or foreign markets.

SUGAR—Local feeling continues firm and business fairly active. Some fair raws have been offered lately, but wholesalers seem to be pretty well stocked with this line.

TEAS—Local markets continue firm but quiet. Wholesalers' stocks must be comparatively light, but little tendency to buy is evidenced. Reports from the foreign markets during the week indicate no notable features, and the situation seems to be quieter everywhere.

COFFEE—There is a firmer feeling in the better grades, but no noteworthy change in prices. Business, however, continues good.

DRIED FRUITS—The market continues on about the same basis as at last reports, with some call for prunes, but other lines quiet.

RICE AND TAPIOCA—Business is steady, though featureless at old prices.

BEANS—The market is stiffer this week on account of the presence of American buyers in Western Ontario, who, it is said, are laying in supplies for United States jobbers. It looks now as if the estimate given a local broker a few weeks ago that beans would reach the $2 mark this season, will be justified, as stocks are decidedly light. It seems likely that all the beans in the country will be pretty well cleaned up by the time the new crop comes in at the end of the summer.

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 9 a.m. Thursday, May 7, 1908.)

The outlook continues to be very encouraging. Favorable spring weather and a largely increased area sceded in good time are responsible for a feeling of optimism as to this year's crop and business reflects this brighter outlook. Wholesale houses report an active spring business.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, Ma·· 6, 1908.

Since the last bulletin there has not been much happening in the cheese and butter market to warrant comment, but the attitude of the English buyers is worthy of attention. It was thought that with the opening of navigation there would be considerable inquiry from England, but the volume of prospective business does not come up to expectations. This condition is thought to be only a transitory circumstance, and will disappear as soon as the prices on this side of the Atlantic come within what the Englishmen think is a reasonable range. This condition is the result of the fact that many dealers are holding out for high prices in order to dispose of their small stocks of old cheese at a profit.

The local market is very quiet at the present moment, but now that a period of comparatively warm weather seems to have set in the pasturage will improve rapidly, and this will result in dissipating whatever slight tension there may be existing in the market to-day. Receipts of new cheese have been very light so far, and there is no remarkable activity in old cheese, which is being quoted at from 15c to 15½c to the retailer, whilst the new stands at from 12¼c to 12½c.

A new organization has sprung into being in Ottawa, which is called the Ottawa Farmers' Exchange, and which will rival the Ottawa Cheese Board. It is thought that some interesting developments may be looked for owing to the birth of this new organization. It is said that the older institution has the sympathy of the buyers, owing to the fight which the exchange is putting up to have factory inspection of cheese, and pay at point of delivery. The new exchange has adopted the rules of the Cornwall Exchange, with a few changes.

There is not much new in the butter market, as everything remains about the same as last week. All the dealers are looking forward to an improvement now that comparatively warm weather seems to have set in and before long they anticipate the arrival of ample supplies. At the present shipments are arriving by express, which just about meets the local demand. Held creamery stocks are nearly exhausted. Prices continue steady around 28c to 30c to the retail trade. At the Farnham Cheese and Butter Board 10 factories offered 110 boxes of butter, and all but one factory sold at 28¼c, while one refused 28⅜c.

Reports make it pretty certain that the Canadian exporters are not in any danger of further competition from the New Zealanders, as their product seems to be pretty well cleaned out of the market. Local dealers are not much concerned over the attitude of the European buyers, for, as pointed out, it is only the result of local conditions, which will disappear suddenly, and then activity in trading between here and the Old Country is anticipated. However, in any case, there is not at present any anxiety over shipping facilities as many ships are now, and will continue to be, at their disposal as soon as the two markets come to satisfactory terms. The Board of Trade figures show a great falling off in weekly receipts as compared with the corresponding period for last year.

For the week ending May 2, the total receipts were 695 packages of butter, as compared with 1,607 for the same period in 1907, showing a deficit in the number of packages of 912. Cheese, likewise, displays the same symptoms. For the week ending May 2, the total weekly receipts were 4616 boxes, as against 11,094 for the corresponding week of last year, showing a falling off of 6478 boxes.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

Toronto, May 6, 1908.

Not a very great deal of activity has been evident among Canadian packers during the past week from the operation of two or three factors. First, the British market, which has been kept more than plentifully supplied for the last several weeks with Danish pork products, has not been demanding Canadian products with any degree of activity. During the week this market has just about kept its own and there are practically no features to report. with this condition prevalent, export business in Canadian hams and bacon could not but be anything but light.

The farmers are forcing a share in the situation also, by holding their hogs, evidently in the hope of higher prices later on, which seem almost sure to be realized before the summer is over. Whether they can hold and feed them at a profit is another question.

The Danish markets continue active, as in the past weeks, last week, and very heavy deliveries were made to the British market. American deliveries, on the other hand, were very light, in the face of conditions summarized below.

At time of writing Canadian packers were paying $5.90 f.o.b. for selects, though a tendency was noticeable to slide prices down to $5,75 to $5.80, on the general run of stock. The price offered for hogs off cars at factory was $6.25. Deliveries were comparatively light and an easier feeling was in evidence.

The New York Journal of Commerce notes the features in American markets as follows :

"The past week has witnessed no improvement in cash demand, and prices of spot hog products have weakened because of increasing stocks in spite of light receipts of hogs, because of decreasing consumption.

"In face of these conditions, however, packers bulled the options early week and ran in the shorts, helped by the scare in May shorts in wheat at Chicago. But after the shorts were run in the market has sagged back, as they were free sellers on the early strength, and continued to supply the lessening demand at declining prices to the close. Meantime there has been the smallest demand for cash stuff for consumption so far this season.

"Better receipts of hogs are expected when corn planting is over, and the packers have been taking hogs much less freely, leaving over a good number unsold daily in the packing centres to offset the small receipts, so that eastern cutters had to pay an advance the first half of the week to get enough to supply their current retail trade in fresh meats. At the same time their cured products have accumulated for want of demand, and prices have declined except for lard."

EGGS—Supplies during the last week have not been as large as usual for this time of the year, and dealers have been paying fancy prices in the country in order to obtain stock for storage purposes. The warm weather is expected to have a salutary effect on the market, and supplies will come in in greater quantities. Locally, the demand is very good, and prices show an increase of one cent.

PROVISIONS—Business is quiet this week and but slightly improved over conditions of a week ago. There is, however, a hopeful feeling pervading the trade. Smoked breakfast bacon and hams are very slightly easier, and plate beef is up almost fifty cents a barrel. Lard (compounds) also has advanced from one-quarter cent to one and a quarter cents. The market prices of other goods are firm and unchanged. The farmers are still holding on to their hogs, and as the demand is light, very little is doing in this line.

BUTTER—"Easier" is the word that describes the butter market, and the prices have dropped a cent. There is an improved supply, but the demand also has increased, the dealers carrying but little stock over. The prospect is bright, however, now that grass is beginning to show itself and the tendency is toward a decline in prices.

EGGS—Prices are up again about a cent and the market is very firm. The supply is freer than a week ago, but not sufficient for the demand. From the packers' standpoint, prices will have to be considerably lowered before they do any buying, as it would be quite a bit better for them to pick up supplies as required, even at a high price, than to pack at anything near the present market price. The season is early, however, and the cool weather has kept back work on the farms. They will loosen up a bit with warmer days, and eg prices are expected to decline to a more reasonable figure.

Eggs, new laid		0 18

CHEESE—But little change is noted during the week, and, as reported last week, business is quiet. New cheese is being offered more freely, and the price of old is getting firmer, which was bound to be the case as the season advanced. A slight decline in price is noted for new cheese.

CANADIAN-ITALIAN SPAGHETTI.

Western Wheat Going to Spaghetti Manufacturers in Italy.

The fame of our great Northwest, upon which Canadians build so many fond hopes for the future, has penetrated to the remote corners of the earth, and now the inhabitants of Sunny Italy are looking to it as the salvation of their national dish, macaroni. Lately they have been experiencing some difficulty in obtaining the proper wheat from which this product could be manufactured. This fact having become known among the Canadian shippers, samples were sent to Italy, with the result that we find we have the wheat which meets all requirements, and at the present moment there lie in Montreal harbor three ships which will shortly sail for Italy with this wonderful product of our great Canadian West, and the hearts of Spaghetti consumers from Lombardy to Palermo will contribute their share towards the wealth of the last great West.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Flour Advanced in Quebec, Firm in Ontario—High Prices on High Grades of Wheat Prevent Export Business.

The week has seen an advance in flour in Quebec markets to meet the former advance in Ontario. One or two firms still sell at the old prices, but the majority have followed the lead set a week ago. The milling companies attribute the advance to stronger wheat markets, both in Canada and the United States, and the sharp advance in values, coupled with the steady decrease in available supplies.

There has also been an improved demand from all foreign sources for spring wheat flour during the past few days, and prospects seem to point to the fact that this demand will be stimulated in the near future, while available supplies of wheat will decrease from now until the next crop is harvested.

For some time the bull element in the Canadian wheat market has maintained the higher grades at a higher level than any other market in America, and has kept the millers from doing practically any export business. The output has had to be curtailed on this account, when it exceeded domestic demand.

Cereal markets generally continue steady, with fairly brisk demand and supplies coming in freely.

MONTREAL.

OPENING DOWN TOWN OFFICE.

Wm. Moore & Son, grocers, 402 Spadina Avenue, have sold their business to W. M. Connor, recently of Saskatchewan.

With this item is connected an interesting story of progress. Almost everybody who has anything to do with fruit in Toronto knows Eugene Moore, who, with his father, has been for years at the head of the retail business on Spadina Avenue. Of recent years, however, Mr. Moore has become interested in handling fruit on a brokerage basis and has been so successful in this that this branch has become a good deal more important than the retail business. Feeling the call of the wholesale district, Mr. Moore last week disposed of the grocery business as noted above, and has this week opened an office for the more convenient carrying on of the brokerage business at 32 Church Street. Mr. Moore has the agency for several of the best-known fruit importing houses, such as Underdown & Creighton, J. B. Indereed & Co., Hills Bros., of New York, and, as he says with a smile, "thirteen others." Mr. Eugene will spend considerably more time among the trade under the new arrangement, and his father, Wm. Moore, will spend his time in the office.

RETURNED AFTER VISIT TO FRANCE.

Zeph. Hebert, of Hudon, Hebert & Co., Montreal, has returned to Canada, after a stay of five months in France. Mr. Hebert left Montreal on December 3 for a holiday, which he spent with his family in Paris, and returned on May 4, so that he was just a day over the five months absent. He brought his family home with him.

Mr. Hebert stated to The Grocer that affairs in France and on the continent were in good shape, and that business men there were looking forward to a prosperous year.

His Wife's Wise Advice

Grocer's Better-3-4: Henry, I paid a social call on Mrs. Thompson this afternoon, and she told me that she never knew before that one soda biscuit could be better than another. She said that she borrowed a few from a neighbor who told her they were MOONEY'S; and they certainly were fine! She's going to buy some MOONEY'S from you next week. Hadn't you better lay in a stock, seeing they're so good? Grocer: By jove, I'll send in a 'phone order right away. He did! Go, thou and do likewise!!

FIRST STEAMER FROM MEDITERRANEAN.

The steamer Fremona, of the Thomson line, arrived in Montreal on Saturday, May 2, with the largest cargo on record of oranges and lemons, reaching the extraordinary figure of 65,000 boxes. The Fremona loaded at Messina and Sorrento, and was, therefore, the first boat from the Mediterranean to arrive in port.

PLUCKY TORONTO GROCER.

Struggles Twenty Minutes With Hold-Up Man and Scares Him Off.

Allan G. Duncan, grocer, Toronto, had an encounter on the evening of Friday, May 1, with a thief who entered his store and demanded money at the point of a revolver. As Mr. Duncan was pretending to show where the money was, he knocked the weapon out of the man's hand, seized him in a desperate struggle and held him to the floor for twenty minutes. A couple of young men who came to Mr. Duncan's assistance were afraid to go for the police, owing to threats to "get even" made by the captive, who eventually escaped. The supposed thief has since been captured. This is not the first time Mr. Duncan has been held up.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST

The General Tone of Business is Better With Money Considerably Easier—Receipts of Wheat Small—Live Stock Trade Improving.

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Winnipeg Correspondent.

The extremely fine seeding weather has been followed by a week of cold, that is a bit discouraging, though as a matter of fact it has done no harm and now the weather is turning warmer. The weight of moisture in the shape of both snow and rain, delayed the seeding in many districts, and, indeed, in the more northerly and westerly sections of the West, it has not yet been resumed, but all over the south and middle West the seeding of the balance of the wheat and the oats is being vigorously pushed.

Taken as a whole, conditions are quite as bright as they were a week ago so far as the present year's crop is concerned.

The wheat market has been strong all week and only moderately active, as present prices are decidedly out of line for export, though there has not been a day when there has not been inquiry for Western wheat. The amount of milling wheat still in the country is very small, and the proportion of contract wheat at the head of the lakes is also small, though the receipts of the past week have been more than half of them contract grade. However, the receipts of the week have been running as low as 40 cars a day, and the biggest day of the week was 88 cars, as against receipts of 225 to 250 cars daily last year. If receipts continue to shrink in the same proportion during May the business of the 1907 wheat crop will be all cleaned up long before the end of the crop year, as used to be the case in the old days, when much smaller crops were raised.

The flour market is a steady one, with a difference of ten cents per sack in the prices the two largest of the milling companies are asking for their flour. All mills report that there is very little export demand to Britain, but that they are doing a fair export trade to the Orient and that the domestic demand is improving daily. All the big mills are running full time, and expect to continue doing so.

The live stock trade is increasing in activity, and there is a decided improvement in both demand and price. A good deal of interest has been created by American buyers coming into Southern Manitoba for butchers' stock. These buyers have paid higher prices than the Winnipeg cattle firms, and, in addition, have to pay the 27½ duty. The producers are beginning to sit up and take notice, claiming that if American cattle men can afford to pay ½c to 1c more per pound, making no allowance for shrink, and also to pay the duty, the Winnipeg dealers must have been getting the long end of the stick. Several trains of cattle shipped this spring from Alberta to Chicago have made very satisfactory prices, the tops selling as high as $6.20 per cwt. and the bottoms for $4. The Winnipeg market has evidently been stimulated by these things and on Friday, May 1st, there was quite an influx of Eastern buyers, among them being A. Shortreed, of Fergus, Ontario; J. Wilson, of Maybee, Wilson & Hall, Toronto; Messrs. Isaac, J. Norris and Hector Thompson, of Markham Village, and Messrs. Roberts and Dohan, of Montreal. Bidding was lively and prices of anything like good stock ruled high. Winnipeg has no regular trading hours for cattle, such as pertain in grain and the early man gets the pick. The Eastern men thought they would be on the ground and give the Western men a run for their money. Street cars do not run in Winnipeg until six o'clock, and the stock yards are a mile and a quarter from the hotel section of the city. The cattle trains for the Friday market always the big one of the week, arrive about three or from three to four o'clock. Some of the Eastern men made a spurt and were up at the yards at 5.15, having walked the whole distance, but when they got there they found that the head of a certain big local concern had gone them one better and had been there before five o'clock, and he certainly secured the pick of the bunch for export. For these he paid from 5c to 5¼c and for the two prime bullocks of the bunch 5½c. These two bullocks weighed together made 3,400 pounds, and nothing better has shown on this market for a long time. Taking all classes of stock, cattle, sheep and hogs, there were 54 cars on the market, and the prices for cattle ran all the way from 2½c to 5½c, and the bullocks bought at the latter figure were cheap compared to the stock selling at 2½c.

Offerings of hogs were very liberal, but demand was keen and straight. 6c was paid for the bulk of the offerings. Offerings of sheep were small, being only some 200 for the week, but these were very choice yearlings, and brought 7c on the hoof, they were fed at Brandon. What was said along this line last week might well be emphasized. The sheep sold, giving far and away the best return to the producer, of any stock offered during the week. The Eastern men, though they evidently were unwilling to do anything to boost prices, admitted that there was a scarcity of good butchers' cattle in the East, and that there was likely to be a demand from there for tops all season.

Everything points to the growing need of union stock yards and public abattoirs in Winnipeg, and a regularly constituted live stock exchange. Winnipeg has all the facilities for handling an enormous cattle trade.

One of the most important events of the week from the Western standpoint, was the opening of the short line to Duluth from Fort Frances tapping the C.N.R. There is no doubt that the American capital interested see in this line a means of diverting the Western wheat to the Duluth elevators, which, in these days, are seldom full and represent an enormous outlay of capital. There is no manner of doubt, either, that if the Grain Growers' Association and their friends keep up their agitation about private companies not being allowed to control terminal elevators (in which there is almost entire agreement in the West), that the owners of private terminals, who are also owners of lines of interior elevators, will seek this outlet also for their wheat. In any case, it is an additional outlet for the wheat of the Canadian West, and cannot fail to be a matter of importance to every one interested in Western trade.

The real estate situation continues to develop steadily, and just now there is good sale for fruit farms in British Columbia. These sales are being made by companies that sell only to actual settlers going immediately on the land and the past week saw no less than 12 of these farms sold to men who were all practical fruit farmers and leaving immediately for their new ranches. There has also been a good sale of market garden plots near Winnipeg, running about five acres each, to men who will go to work on them this spring. The sale of house property in Winnipeg is good, and there continues to be heavy cash payments on these purchases. A feature of the building this year is the erection of no less than three costly buildings for charitable or beneficent purposes. Men familiar with trade and business conditions state that there is not surer guarantee of prosperity than this, as the funds for these buildings are practically all pledged before the erection commences.

There is no question that the whole money situation in the West is much easier than it was even a month ago. There is a general air of active business, and though there are still quite a number of unemployed men in the city, the first week of fine warm weather will see these practically all taken care of, that is if they are men who really want to work.

* * *

Taking the entire Western situation into account, conditions are better than they were a week ago, and are such as to confirm the general feeling of confidence that the West is entering on a season of prosperity, with the advantage of a sharp setback last winter to teach her wisdom and a more careful spending of money and a greater wisdom in incurring obligations than has been hers in the past.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Business Opening Well—Pineapples and Strawberries Arriving Freely—New Vegetables Brisk—Fish Quiet.

An improvement in business is noted all along the line this week and the dealers are getting busy. A little more sunshine and a few warm days and they would be jubilant. By the end of May it is expected they will have their hands full of orders. As it is, all the dealers are carrying larger stocks and great quantities of fruit and vegetables are going out to the retailers.

Bananas are slightly easier, and so are pineapples and strawberries. Carload lots of these two lines are quite usual. Oranges are firming up again, the California navel season being nearly over. Montreal reports the first fruit boat of the season from the Mediterranean, with the largest cargo on record. Lemons and oranges seem to be the bulk of the cargo.

Canadian greens are coming in more freely, and already we have lettuce, carrots, spinach and green onions. Most of the garden stuff on the Toronto market is from the Hamilton district, but quite a little is from the Toronto district, and the county of York. It is open-air stuff, too, except that the lettuce is grown under glass. The southern Atlantic States are sending great quantities of cabbage and tomatoes to Canadian points. In fact, these two lines, with pineapples and berries, are the features of the week. A number of price changes are noted.

Fish is quiet, but in a week or so the trade will open up again. Frozen lines and bulk oysters are off, and fresh-water fish are a little easier in price.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—There is not much change in this market from last week. Lemons are a little lower, whilst oranges have advanced somewhat. The Fremona, the first fruit boat of the season, has arrived with the largest fruit cargo on record, which consisted chiefly of oranges and lemons from the Mediterranean.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—Business is very good considering the chilly days we have been having of late, and is much better than during April. "Oh! if we only had some warm sunshine!" said one dealer, "business would then hum." As it is the prospects are very bright, and before the end of the month dealers are sure to be very busy. Pineapples are coming in in large quantities, and carload lots of strawberries are arriving almost daily, bringing down prices a little. Oranges are up and may go higher during the week. SOME WESTERN CHANGES.

It will be remembered that a little more than a year ago an interesting experiment was tried by the various merchants in Cartwright, Man., who joined together to organize a joint stock company. The object was to eliminate destructive competition among themselves, to enable them to buy more cheaply and to provide a new means to fight mail order competition.

The experiment has been a success upon the whole, but the first break occurred recently when J. E. Cameron withdrew from the company, and in partnership with A. C. Lawson, started a general store under the firm name of Lawson & Cameron. All further developments will be watched with interest.

THE MARKETS OF NOVA SCOTIA

Heavy Lobster Shipments to United States Slump Markets—Large Export Business With Southern Points—Grocers Successful in Municipal Elections.

(Special Correspondence to The Canadian Grocer.)

May 4.—The chief feature of the grocery markets here this week is an advance in the price of flour and beef, two very important commodities to the consumer. According to advices received here the Ontario millers have advanced flour twenty cents, and the local butchers have put into effect the summer prices for fresh beef. Scarcity of live stock is the cause assigned for the increase. The markets are in a very healthy condition and there is marked activity. in both wholesale and retail trade.

The fish business is quite active for the season of the year, though the stormy weather greatly interferes with the operations of the fresh fishermen along the coast. The supply of fresh fish at the present time is very limited.

Heavy lobster shipments continue to be made from Nova Scotia points to the United States. This week one thousand crates of live lobsters from this province reached the Boston market and caused a heavy slump in prices, as the market broke from $21 to $16 per crate. Still lower prices are predicted for future shipments.

According to advices received here from Vancouver, the shipment of live lobsters sent by the Government from Halifax, have arrived there in good condition, the loss being comparatively small.

The receipts of eggs this week were fair, but not by any means up to expectations. The price holds very firm at 16c for fresh laid stock. The demand is good.

Speaking to The Grocer the other day one of the leading retail dealers remarked on the great change that has been brought about in the tea trade in this city in recent years. There was a time, he said, when there was little or no demand for package teas, the consumers being somewhat suspicious as to the quality of the contents. The call was principally for bulk teas. The change has been most marked. Nearly everyone now buys package teas, and the sales are heavy. Old customers continue to use the bulk tea, but for one pound sold in this way, ten are sold in packages.

Fruits are in good supply and there are still some fine apples offered for sale. In fact, a lot of the apples are of better quality than it was possible to obtain months ago, and the price is within reason.

Heavy cargoes of foodstuffs left Halifax for the West Indies on the steamers Lobo and Boston, on their last trip. The Lobo, bound for Bermuda, the Leeward Islands, and Demerara, took 23,000 barrels and boxes of miscellaneous cargo, while the Boston had 400 casks of dry fish, and 2,500 casks of pickled fish for Jamaica, and 2,000 drums of dry fish and 2,000 barrels of potatoes for Cuba.

The Mexican line steamer Bornu, which sailed for Vera Cruz, was filled to the hatches with Canadian produce, the cargo being one of the largest ever taken away from this port. The trade with the southern ports this year has been unusually heavy.

The business of R. Urquhart & Son will be continued under the same name. The death of the junior member of the firm, Alex. Urquhart, was noted in a recent issue of The Grocer.

M. W. Davison has purchased the grocery business formerly conducted by Edwin Shaw, at Windsor, N.S. Mr. Davison has a good knowledge of the grocery business, having conducted a store for many years.

* * *

The civic elections were held in Halifax this week, and among the successful candidates for aldermanic honors were Andrew Hubley, grocer; Nelson Smith, of Smith & Procter, dealers in butter, eggs and cheese, and S. Y. Wilson, fish merchant. Constance Upham, grocer, was defeated in Ward Six by J. S. Edwards by seven votes.

HAD A HOST OF GROCER FRIENDS

The Late Donald Morrison, One of the Best-known Figures in Western Ontario Trade.

The late Donald Morrison who died at his home in Windsor on Thursday, April 2nd, was one of the oldest and best-known grocery travelers in Western Ontario. He was born in Sutherlandshire, Scotland, in 1839, and at an early age came to this country with his parents. He made his first start in the grocery business with the old firm of Edward Adams & Co., London, with which he was connected for many years. On his leaving this firm his brother employes presented him with a silver service, which he always prized very highly. He then was employed with Alexander Harvey & Co., Hamilton, whom he represented on his old territory for over ten years, when he again entered the employ of Adams & Co., with whom he remained until his removal to Windsor with his family.

Mr. Morrison was of a kindly disposition, and until his death was closely identified with the grocery business. Nearly every retail grocer west of London was numbered among his acquaintances, and some of them were lifelong friends. He saw active service in Windsor during the Fenian Raid in '66, as an officer in the 24th Regiment of Chatham. He was a lifelong Reformer and a staunch Presbyterian. Mrs. Morrison, two sons and two daughters survive him.

H. Heirman & Co., general merchants, Feversham, Ont. have assigned.

The stock of J. P. Durand, grocer, of London, Ont., is advertised for sale.

The assets of Jos. St Onge, general merchant, St. Onge, Ont., have been sold.

MEN WHO SELL THINGS

We have just closed an arrangement whereby we will have the exclusive right to publish in Canada a book for salesmen, by Walter D. Moody, formerly traveling salesman, buyer and general sales manager for a large wholesale house, and now business manager of the Chicago Association of Commerce—the largest body of business men in the world, numbering about two thousand seven hundred members.

Mr. Moody's book is dedicated to the "Commercial Ambassador," and he has written it primarily for the traveling man. It also contains much educational matter for the business man, young and old, and there is a vein of business philosophy running through it that will appeal to any man or boy interested in self-development and a successful future. It is a book every salesman worthy the name will find indispensable.

Mr. Moody has been engaged for a year and a half in compiling these experiences and observations of his life's work in connection with the field of salesmanship as viewed from the standpoint of the traveling salesman, buyer, sales manager and employer, and as this book appeals to all who are concerned in any line of trade or business, it is just the book those in your own line who are engaged in the creative, money-getting side will find most useful and valuable.

The publication begins in the next issue of The Canadian Grocer and will run for several months. Special subscriptions will be taken during the time it is running, at $1.00. Of course regular subscribers get it without extra charge. We would appreciate very much our readers drawing the attention of commercial travellers, and their clerks, to this announcement. Here are some selections which show the author's vigorous and entertaining style.

The salesman who hopes to win real success must change his negative qualities into positive ones, and then stick to some good reliable house where his chances for growth are assured.

A salesman of experience realizes that ideas —practical methods of selling goods—are of the greatest value, and he also knows that it pays him to search for them.

Time and thought taken in complaining of competition is useless expenditure of energy. It lessens your capacity for the accomplishment of things for which you were employed.

The Salesman goes out and digs up business, while the Order-taker just shambles around, waiting to be fed, like the hippopotamus in the menagerie.

A good salesman must know more about his goods than the man he is selling to knows about them. Knowledge and enthusiasm beat oratory every time. Enthusiasm in a salesman begets enthusiasm in a customer.

The best salesmen any house can have are the salesmen it builds for itself. The old saying, "Salesmen are born, and not made," is the veriest kind of tommyrot in this day of science and progress.

What the world of salesmanship wants is educated enthusiasm. The purest of king's English will secure an audience and hold attention for the salesman anywhere, while slang and short cuts of speech often excite distrust and offend the ear of the truly refined.

AUSTRALIA CONSIDERS COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS.

J. S. Larke, Canadian Commissioner, Sydney, Australia, writes the editor of The Canadian Grocer as follows:

Sir,—I notice that the commercial travelers of Canada seek to obtain an arrangement of election day that will enable them to be at home. In Australia election days are held upon a Saturday, as a rule, which enables their desire to be carried out. The extent of Canada makes the fixing of Saturday a greater difficulty than in Australia. The vote of commercial travelers is an important one, not so much for the numbers as for the general intelligence of its members, secured through their intimate knowledge of the condition of the large sections of the country, their opportunities in this respect being greatly beyond those of almost any other class of the population. Hence it is important that it should be registered.

Another arrangement that assists a commercial traveler in Australia is that Christmas and New Year are observed on the days on which they fall, but the other holidays of the year are held upon the Monday following their natural date. This enables the commercial traveler to spend these holidays with his family.

J. S. LARKE.

BLOW YOUR OWN HORN.

The man who blows his own horn is the man who succeeds. We used to look upon him with suspicion, but in these strenuous times unless you make yourself felt and heard you are apt to get lost in the crowd.

Whatever your business, you will have to blow, blow, blow. Tell folks what you have to sell, how much better it is than similar lines, in what particular points it excels, and so forth. If you don't tell the people about it, who will?

If you are looking for a position you must impress the prospective employer with the fact that you are better than the average. If you lack confidence in yourself you can hardly expect that any one else will trust you.

If you have nothing to "blow" about, then you had better keep quiet. Look around you and see how many people are filling good positions that you could fill just as well as they if you had the chance. In many cases it is because you have not the "nerve" and not having it you cannot impress other people with your ability.

Other things being equal, Jones who "blows" and can back it up has a hundred chances where Smith has one chance.

NEWS FROM NEW BRUNSWICK

Trade Increasing With Opening of Navigation—Province Suffers Disastrous Fires—Fredericton Fighting for Better Freight Rates.

Special Correspondence to The Canadian Grocer.

May 4.—There has been little change in grocery markets during the past week. Ontario flours advanced 10c a barrel, as was expected, making the price $5.-75, as it was a few weeks ago. Business has been very good with both retailers and jobbers. The former have had a big demand for seeds and some good-sized orders for general groceries have been shipped to the south shore of Nova Scotia and along the New Brunswick coast, in the various schooners and steamers that are now plying their usual summer routes.

A rather serious fire on Tuesday, 28th April, caused about $15,000 damage to the Sutherland building, Union Street, where a number of stores and small factories had their quarters. A. J. Russell's candy factory was burned out, with a loss of about $1,000, and the Archer Syrup Co. also suffered somewhat. The losses were all pretty well covered by insurance.

About $20,000 damage was done by a fire which occurred in Woodstock, N.B., on April 27. The firms affected included C. B. Snow, grocer. The loss was fairly covered by insurance.

Andrew J. Megarity has purchased the grocery business of Hugh Ryan, 256 Brussels Street, and will continue the business at the same stand. He has had years of experience and success for himself and satisfaction for his customers should result.

* * *

Merchants of Fredericton and vicinity are much interested in the outcome of an inquiry, which was commenced before the Railway Commission at Ottawa on April 23. The Board of Trade of Fredericton applied for an order to compel the C.P.R. and G.T.R. to remove the present differential freight rates against Fredericton and in favor of St. John. It was pointed out that the freight rates were the same between Montreal and Fredericton and Montreal and St. John. They had been the same from points west of Montreal until November 15, 1904, when the G.T.R. and C.P.R. established a differential rate against Fredericton ranging from 2½ to 8 cents per 100 pounds. E. Tiffin, general freight agent of the I.C.R., testified that the discrimination was unjust and should be removed. The C.P.R. and G.T.R. representatives defended their action because of water competition which they claimed may some day exist. No decision has yet been given.

Following the lead of Moncton, St. John, Fredericton and Chatham are now making an effort to secure the Dominion grant of $50,000 for an exhibition. Fredericton and Chatham propose to have the exhibition in 1909, but St. John wants it for 1910.

A disastrous fire visited Buctouche on Saturday, April 25, when McLaughlin's mills, probably the most important industry in the place, were totally destroyed. The burned property included a butter factory, flour, carding and sawmill and a general store. The loss is estimated at between $30,000 and $40,-000, with insurance of $12,000. It has not yet been decided whether the company will rebuild or not.

R. M. Weeks, of Millerton, is erecting a large building for a general store at that place.

GROCERY FACTS.

Interesting Information Regarding the Regular Lines Handled by Grocers.

NUTMEGS.

The genuine round nutmeg sold in the best shops is the kernel of the fruit of the tree known as Myristica moschata, or nutmeg tree. Some botanists call it Myristica fragrans.

It is a native of the Moluccas, and is grown extensively in Hainan, also in the Islands of Banda, East Indies, and in Africa. Nutmeg culture is also becoming a source of much profit in several of the West Indian Islands, especially in Grenada.

In size and foliage the trees resemble pear trees. They do not come into bearing till nine or ten years old. The fertile trees continue to produce fruit 70 to 80 years, and on an average each tree will yield ten pounds of nutmegs, with about one pound of mace, every year; but when thoroughly manured it is said they will produce ten times that amount. It takes nine months for the fruit to come to maturity.

The process of curing the nutmegs for the market is as follows. The ripe fruit containing the nutmeg is nearly a spherical droop, not unlike a round pear or common walnut, and of golden yellow color without and white within. These are gathered up from under the trees every day, except Sunday. The outer or fleshy part of the fruit is rather tough, something like candied lemon, and is in fact often preserved and used as a sweetmeat; but it readily splits in two like a pea, and inside this outer fruit is found a thin but very hard shiny brown shell, tightly wrapped in a bright red network or ligament known as mace. It is inside this shell that the ordinary nutmeg of commerce is found. The mace is peeled off and pressed flat between heavy rollers.

The female, or round nuts, are the best; they should be large, fresh, moist, heavy, of good smell, and yield oil readily when pricked and not be worm-eaten or corky.

If a quantity of nutmegs be found infested by insects they may be easily got rid of by exposing the nutmegs on sieves to the fumes of burning sulphur, in a close chamber or other suitable vessel.

HOW "GROCER" ORIGINATED.

The word "grocer" itself embalms a history. It is derived from the French, and means a wholesale merchant, or dealer in the gross, or in bulk. Taken in connection with the familiar qualification, "Italian grocery," it points to a business which collected commodities from distant parts in bulk and distributed the same to households according to the facilities of commerce and the demands of civilization. As distinct from provender, groceries were always connected with spices and other tropical products designed for the table and the stomach. The green-grocer, as his designation implies, dealt in fresh, not dried, fruits and vegetables.

Keeping Books By Machinery

There was a time when the only way to harvest grain was by means of a hand sickle. Then came the cradle, and finally the self-binder.

Some firms still stick to the old-fashioned way of keeping their books; and this in spite of the fact that the works automatically and like a piece of machinery and is as much cheaper and better as is the self-binder and thresher better than the sickle and flail. Here is how it works:

If a man wants credit for $10.00 and you think he is good for it, give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book, and have him sign the receipt or note form in front of book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00. No trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on, until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass-books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best. For sale by the jobbing trade everywhere.

Talking to the Point

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS get right down to the point at issue. If you want something, say so in a few well-chosen words. Readers like that sort of straight-from-the-shoulder-talk, and that is the reason why condensed ads are so productive of the best kind of results.

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS are always noticed. They are read by wide-awake, intelligent grocers, who are on the look-out for favorable opportunities to fill their requirements.

Another Store-keeper Sued for Damages

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH IN CAKES

SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH IN TINS

Dangerous stove polishes continue to get store-keepers into trouble. The daily papers of Detroit, early this month, report Mrs. A. D. ——— is seeking to recover in the courts $15,000 from Mr. C. G. ——— who sold her some inflammable, liquid stove polish that exploded and severely burned her face and arms.

Wise store-keepers will keep out of trouble by handling only the stove polishes which are safe in the hands of the user. RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish are made by reliable processes and are absolutely free from dangers of fire or explosion. PUSH THEM.

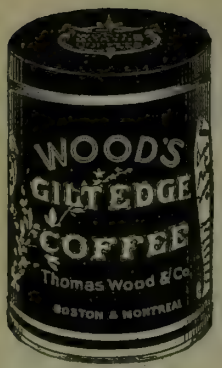
The Slogan of the Future



ESTABLISHED 1879

An expert in trade progress makes this bold statement:

"Each year it becomes more and more necessary for the retailer to confine his attention to goods of known value."

And on the firm and lasting foundation of merit and worth

WOOD'S COFFEES

stand forth. Their "known value" has been demonstrated for more than a quarter of a century.

The Grocer who "confines his attention" to them reaps his reward in profitable trade.

From Father To Son

A business that descends from father to son is usually a long time in the making. If it is worth having at all it is certainly worth keeping. And the proud old father of Felix Codou admonished his son to preserve that reputation for quality he had gained only by a life-time of hard earnest endeavor to produce a Macaroni that would be the peer of all.

Codou's Macaroni

And Vermicelli, Spaghetti, fancy letters and figures — pastes of all kinds (but only the best of each) take equal rank with the Macaroni made by Codou. The factory has been enlarged several times — isn't that fact an eloquent tribute to the steadfastly maintained high quality ?

SOMETHING ABOUT PEAS

CANNED PEAS are sold in four grades or qualities—

Grade 1, known as Extra Fine Sifted Peas, or Petit Pois (Tresfins.)

Grade 2, Extra Sifted Peas, known as Sweet Wrinkle.

Grade 3, Double Sifted Peas, known as Early June.

Grade 4, Sifted Peas, known as Standards or Marrowfats.

Prices for these Peas vary according to Grade.

The brand is not an indication of the Grade. Make sure that you get the grade you pay for.

You cannot mistake Aylmer Faultless Peas as they have a wrapper label. These are the finest Peas on the Market at the price.

They will realize a splendid margin of profit. All you have to do is to call your customers' attention to them to make quick sales.

CANADIAN CANNERS, Limited

Doesn't it Stand To Reason that when you sell a customer canned goods which are positively delicious in flavor and purity, she will want the same brand next time? No use talking, you can't be too particular in your selection of canned goods. To get the continuous trade of a customer you must sell her canned goods which have POSITIVE merit. The look and the taste must carry a conviction of outstanding excellence. That's the kind of canned goods which go into the cans of

OLD HOMESTEAD BRAND

Clean, well-grown, juicy fruits and vegetables, preserved in cans, with all their delicious natural flavor absolutely unimpaired. Give your customers Old Homestead Brand, and you can positively rely on them coming back again and again for more of it.

Your jobber is anxious to supply you with Old Homestead Brand.

was the immense output of "SALADA" Tea for 1907. So great has become the demand for "SALADA" that the sale now equals 34 packets for every minute of our lives. We have taught MILLIONS of people to be dissatisfied with any tea that is not as delicious and healthful as "SALADA."

If the problem is "How to satisfy the demands of the greatest number of your customers with the best tea" sell "SALADA."

Are YOU fully sharing in this profitable distribution of the most popular tea on the American Continent.

As Pure as Windsor Salt

$1.00 Sold $25 Worth of Groceries

It was a thirty mile trip to town and the instructions of Mrs. Smith to husband John were to get a dollar's worth of Windsor Salt at the grocer's—naturally husband John secured his entire list of groceries at the store that was stocked with "Windsor." He spent twenty-five dollars in that particular store.

The reason why Mrs. Smith was determined to have Windsor Salt was and is plainly evident its uniform excellence, purity, whiteness and dryness. It pays to sell the salt that helps to sell other goods in the store.

This is one point that we keep constantly before us, that the consumer to-day demands that the goods that they consume shall be as near as possible to the flavor that you think can be produced only in your own kitchen. We have special facilities for turning out the best pickles, and we have made the most of them. For instance, we provide the seed from which the vegetables are grown and so get the best from the start; the cucumbers go straight from the vine to the factory, so that none of the fresh crispness is lost. We make our own vinegar and it cannot be beaten for pickling purposes. It will certainly pay you to specify that you want our goods when ordering pickles.

TIRED OF SUCH POOR 25c. TEA

She Went to His Competitor for Something Better

Do you know that while you are hunting for some kind of a tea to sell at 25c.—anything that "will do"—you are slowly but surely driving your trade into your wide-awake, up-to-date competitor's store? If you have no complaints, don't be too sure your customers are satisfied. It is easier to try another store.

A prominent grocer told the writer a few days ago that Mrs.———— (his competitor's customer) came to his store and said she did not like the 25c. tea she was getting from her grocer. He realized his opportunity and sold her a 30c. tea, and has sold her ever since.

Her grocer was anxious to please her by selling her a 25c. tea, even when he knew it was very inferior to what he had sold her in the past, and his competitor got his customer.

WHY DON'T YOU SELL A BETTER TEA?

Be honest with your customers: explain the advance in price: talk quality instead of price, and don't let your competitor sell your customers their tea.

When recommending Red Rose Tea or Estabrooks' Bulk Blends to your customers you can depend on them being the same high quality as in the past. We could not afford to reduce the quality, so we raised the price.

Just write a Post Card to-day for a case of tea or samples of any grade.

MEN WHO SELL THINGS

We have just closed an arrangement whereby we will have the exclusive right to publish in Canada a book for salesmen, by Walter D. Moody, formerly traveling salesman, buyer and general sales manager for a large wholesale house, and now business manager of the Chicago Association of Commerce—the largest body of business men in the world, numbering about two thousand seven hundred members.

Mr. Moody's book is dedicated to the "Commercial Ambassador," and he has written it primarily for the traveling man. It also contains much educational matter for the business man, young and old, and there is a vein of business philosophy running through it that will appeal to any man or boy interested in self-development and a successful future. It is a book every salesman worthy the name will find indispensable.

Mr. Moody has been engaged for a year and a half in compiling these experiences and observations of his life's work in connection with the field of salesmanship as viewed from the standpoint of the traveling salesman, buyer, sales manager and employer, and as this book appeals to all who are concerned in any line of trade or business, it is just the book those in your own line who are engaged in the creative, money-getting side will find most useful and valuable.

The publication begins in this issue of The Canadian Grocer and will run for several months. Special subscriptions will be taken during the time it is running, at $1.00. Of course regular subscribers get it without extra charge. We would appreciate very much our readers drawing the attention of commercial travellers, and their clerks, to this announcement. Here are some selections which show the author's vigorous and entertaining style. See pages 51-52.

The salesman who hopes to win real success must change his negative qualities into positive ones, and then stick to some good reliable house where his chances for growth are assured.

A salesman of experience realizes that ideas —practical methods of selling goods—are of the greatest value, and he also knows that it pays him to search for them.

Time and thought taken in complaining of competition is useless expenditure of energy. It lessens your capacity for the accomplishment of things for which you were employed.

The Salesman goes out and digs up business, while the Order-taker just shambles around, waiting to be fed, like the hippopotamus in the menagerie.

A good salesman must know more about his goods than the man he is selling to knows about them. Knowledge and enthusiasm beat oratory every time. Enthusiasm in a salesman begets enthusiasm in a customer.

The best salesmen any house can have are the salesmen it builds for itself. The old saying, "Salesmen are born, and not made," is the veriest kind of tommyrot in this day of science and progress.

What the world of salesmanship wants is educated enthusiasm. The purest of king's English will secure an audience and hold attention for the salesman anywhere, while slang and short cuts of speech often excite distrust and offend the ear of the truly refined.

The following gentlemen were also present: A. P. Murray, sales manager Edwardsburg Starch Co.; Jos. Ruddy, Brantford Starch Co.; R. L. Innes, sec.-treas. Canadian Canners, Limited; T. A. Nairn, president Canadian Canners, Limited; W. R. Drynan, Canadian Canners, Limited; Col. J. B. MacLean, president MacLean Publishing Co.; W. H. Seyler, The Canadian Grocer.

The proceedings were conducted according to printed program arranged for stipulated time discussions of the various subjects and adhered to very satisfactorily.

The Opening Session.

The meeting was called to order promptly at 10 o'clock Tuesday, by the president, T. B. Escott. After the appointment of Mr. Armstrong as recording secretary for the sessions and the selection of a press committee of H. C. Beckett and F. T. Smye, the chairman of the Hamilton Guild, F. T. Smye, in a very happy speech, extended a hearty welcome to the visiting delegates and congratulated the Hamilton Board on the large turnout of members from all parts of the province. He hoped every member would take an active part in the discussion of the very important questions before them and guaranteed them all a pleasant time after the conclusion of their labors. He regretted, however, that vice-president, W. G. Craig, of Kingston, was unable through illness to be present. W. Roos, of Randall & Roos, Berlin, was also ill and sent his regrets for non-attendance.

W. G. CRAIG.
Of W. G. Craig & Co., Kingston, the Guild's New President.

The minutes of the last meetings of the Guild were presented and taken as read.

F. T. Smye read his report on legislation and touched upon the very satisfactory result of their efforts in securing the passage of the bill regarding canned goods labelling and in doing so paid worthy compliments to Adam Zimmerman, M.P. for Hamilton, for his strenuous and good work in connection with the bill.

Mr. Beckett, in a few words, explained that the bill amending the Criminal Code was receiving close attention in the House and it was hoped that the trade, both wholesale and retail, would shortly see the objectionable and restrictive clause eliminated from the act. Honore Gervais, M.P. for West Montreal, was interesting himself in the bill and doing good work as also was E. M. Trowern, the secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association. Mr. Beckett also reported that the suit in connection with the action originated two years ago had been set down for a hearing on June 3rd.

T. B. Escott, president, then presented his address.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

"It is a pleasure to join our Hamilton friends in extending to the visitors a hearty welcome to this, the fifth annual meeting of the Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Guild. Let us hope that the short time we spend together may prove pleasant and profitable. Nearly a year has gone by since our last gathering in London and it is some satisfaction to recall the advancement that has been made since then. Many manufacturers have complied with our request for more liberal treatment. All this has been brought about by your committees, supported by the unanimous voice of the trade.

"The legislation committee has made progress during the year, notably in securing an amendment to the Pure Foods Act, securing to owners of private labels the right to use these labels. It is hoped and expected also that the desired amendment to the Criminal Code will be adopted before parliament rises, the injustice of the present law, as it now stands, being apparent to all. The committee regret that they have been unable to bring sufficient influence to bear upon the government to induce them to establish a bureau of Inland Trade and Commerce although the need is very great and it is hoped the committee will continue to press the matter upon the attention of the proper authorities.

The Guild Suit.

The unsettled Guild Suit has continued to block our best efforts, the Crown having postponed from time to time the date of hearing, thus preventing the case coming before the court up to the present, but the date for the trial is now fixed for June 3.

Five Years' Progress.

"It is encouraging to review the progress we have made during the short period of five years, when this Ontario Guild was born. That year the travelers' midsummer holidays were adopted. The following year the agreement withdrawing travelers from the road at Xmas was adopted. But more important than all has been the constant education going on among ourselves. When we consider where we started, and observe the progress we have made, the lack of intelligence that existed then as to the cost of selling goods, the general expenses of doing business, and the more general knowledge that exists now along these lines, we take courage. We are sometimes discouraged because we have not made more rapid strides, forgetting that large bodies move slowly, that we cannot advance faster than the most conservative of our number may deem wise. Meetings like this where we can meet together and talk over our needs is one of the very best forms of education. Unfortunately those who require this help most think they need it the least and fail to attend, and even think it a waste of time to read literature sent to them. We must be patient, however, remembering that we cannot as a body move faster than the slowest member. It is usually the ill-informed merchant who makes many of the prices on goods which prove so unremunerative to himself and the rest of the trade. If all could see the advantage of making a sacrifice of the smaller for the greater our aims would be achieved.

"We can view the future with hope, feeling assured that organization will bring good results. The present is a critical time in the history of the grocery trade and will require courage, sacrifice and good judgment to bring about the best results for both wholesalers and retailers whose interests are identical."

The financial report was laid before the members and after brief discussion of a few minor points, adopted.

H. N. Kittson delivered a most interesting address on the subject of "Know Thy Opportunity," which is reproduced herewith.

H. N. KITTSON'S ADDRESS.

Some two thousand five hundred years ago, Pittacus, known to school boys as one of the seven wise men of Greece, coined, among other precepts, the well-known maxin, "Know thy opportunity." The lapse of time has in no degree weakened the force, or impaired the significance of this aphorism. It appeals to us to-day as an utterance pregnant with wisdom, and attesting the philosopher's shrewd powers of observation, as it no doubt appealed to his hearers when it first issued fron his mouth.

The greatest intellect of our own race crystallizes the same idea into words when he makes Brutus declare: "There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune; omitted all the voyage of their life is bound in shallows and in miseries."

"On such a full sea are we now afloat, and we must take the current while it serves, or lose our ventures." In deed, if we were to search for a definition for success, we probably could not reduce it to a simpler or more accurate formula than this, "Opportunities turned to best advantage."

Volume of Canadian Trade.

I propose to ask the Grocers' Guild the simple question, "Do they know their opportunity?" Do they know that opportunities are present to-day which, if turned to advantage, would make for the substantial betterment of the conditions of the wholesale grocery trade? There are in the Dominion of Canada upwards of 152 firms or corporations carrying on a wholesale grocery business. The aggregate capital of these firms and corporations, according to Dun and Bradstreet, is $19,043,000. If we multiply this by six times to arrive at the total volume of trade of these firms and corporations we have the enormous total annual output of $114,258,000. If we divide this by 6,500,000, the present population of Canada, you will see that this is equal to about $17.50 per head of the population. Surely this is a very moderate estimate of the total annual output of the wholesale grocery trade; but suppose, to make assurance doubly sure, that we are not over-estimating the total trade volume, we knock off $44,258,000, we still have the enormous total of $70,000,000 as the annual output or selling power of these firms and corporations.

FRED T. SMYE.
Of Balfour, Smye & Co., Hamilton, the Newly Elected Vice-President.

Does the Guild, do the several firms comprising it, realize what this fact means? I do not mean, do they simply apprehend that this is a fact, but do they realize what is behind and what is involved in this fact?

What This Fact Involves.

It means that the wholesale grocery trade have something in their control, at their disposition, which manufacturers are anxious to get, to acquire which they can be made to pay a reasonable price; that is, if the wholesale trade want an adequate equivalent for the service they render the manufacturer as their chief distributors.

It can surely be assumed that the trade do want an adequate equivalent—but have the trade the courage, the patience, the resolution to take hold of the fact, that this enormous selling power is a negotiable instrument which can be converted into increased profits by following a persistent, intelligent, and united policy as regards the manufacturers.

It is a notorious fact that buying syndicates in the retail trade and departmental stores buy some lines from manufacturers as close as wholesale houses do. Their ability to do this is possible only by reason of the apathy of the wholesale trade; is possible only by reason of the fact that so many members of the trade, while they theoretically believe in the effectiveness of united action in practice, want to plow their lonely furrow, or paddle their own canoe.

Manufacturer and Wholesaler.

The manufacturer understands the weaknesses and jealousies of wholesale grocers, and he trades on their fears. He tells one firm, "If you don't handle my goods, A. B. will handle them, and he will steal your trade, and although I do not provide you with a reasonable profit, yet you must keep the goods in stock, or lose your trade to your rival." He defeats every house in detail, just as Napoleon deafeted the armies opposed to him by preventing their united action. If buying syndicates, by reason of working together, even in their restricted operations, are able to obtain important concessions from manufacturers, and practically buy as cheaply as the wholesale trade in some instances, does it not follow that if the wholesale grocery trade, in dealing with manufacturers, would deal as one man and adopt a uniform policy, a persistent, resolute course, they would be able to bring such a tremendous pressure upon the manufacturers as would compel them, in fixing their prices, to provide a reasonable profit for the wholesale trade. If one man owned the 152 houses doing business in Canada, do you suppose he would look at a manufacturer who offered him a wretched 7½ per cent. as his payment for selling and distributing his goods and taking the risk of bad debts? Why, he would laugh at it. He would tell the manufacturer that he had either to pay him adequately for the service of marketing his goods, or he could distribute them himself. The manufacturer knows quite well, that on economic grounds, and on other grounds, that distribution through the wholesale trade is the most satisfactory way of marketing his goods.

A Remedy Proposed.

Now, why cannot the trade adopt a policy that will put them in as advantageous position to deal with manufacturers as they would be if this large output to which I have referred were controlled by one man. There is no insuperable difficulty about it. When it is considered that trade unions, by reason of united action, in the face of grave difficulties, in the face of inexperience in organization, in the absence of reserve capital, have been able to improve their position in such a marked degree; have been able to obtain a fairer compensation for their work; it ought to be an object lesson to the wholesale trade; it ought to be clear that the problems they are called to solve are not so complex or so difficult as those which have been solved and are being solved by the trade unions. If the wholesale trade would exhibit a similar spirit; if they were willing to submit to a little temporary inconvenience; to forego a little temporary profit to mave a much larger gain, it is difficult to estimate to what extent it would better the conditions of the trade.

Co-operative Effort Necessary.

The one difficulty that presents itself to me is to find some way of bringing home to each individual firm a real live belief that co-operation with other firms in endeavoring to secure that which cannot be attained by individual effort, is just as important a part of the business of each individual firm as any other detail of its business. Once this idea gains a solid hold on the trade each individual firm will take as keen an interest in the Guild as in the details of their own business. The collective thinking machinery of the firms comprising the Guild will be available to find solutions for the problems which arise from time to time with the ever-changing conditions of trade. The Guild will act as one man, and the tremendous power of the united trade will be able to bring home to manufacturers the fact that their own best interests will be best promoted by making the wholesale trade the exclusive distributors; or that when it is found necessary to market products in part through the retail trade, they will at least be made to provide a reasonable margin of profit in the difference between the price to the wholesale merchant and the price to the retail trade.

It must not be inferred from any argument that has been advanced in this paper that there is hostility on the part of the trade to manufacturers; on the contrary, it is frankly admitted that some manufacturers have given the wholesale trade sympathetic and substantial support in their endeavors to put the trade on a better basis. It is largely due to the fact that the wholesale trade are either divided in their opinions, or too apathetic in bringing their united views to bear upon the manufacturers generally, that manufacturers have not been more anxious to co-operate with the wholesale trade.

There has been a reluctance among some people to lend support to any form of co-operative effort. There are some people whose hair would stand on end if it were proclaimed that competition is no longer the life of trade. But the fact cannot be ignored that the spirit of co-operation is in the air. It will, to quote a prominent American writer, be the next great form of business development and progress.

This paper suggests an idea. The means of carrying out that idea will discover themselves under patient and persevering effort.

Success-bringing Maxims.

A prominent figure in American politics, who has been marvellously successful in every enterprise upon which he entered, had two maxims which guided his whole life. These were printed in large letters and were hung over his bed so he could see them as he rose in the morning, and as he retired at night. The maxims were:

1st. When you want a thing go out and get it.

2nd. Bring it home with you.

A large manufacturer whom I met on the train a day or two ago, told me confidentially if the trade would act together as one man they could prevail upon the manufacturer to give them whatever they wanted.

The whole question is, do the wholesale trade want a better profit? Will they go out and get it? And will they bring it home with them?

I conclude this brief paper with the axiom with which I began it, "Know thy opportunity."

Important Questions Discussed.

Various important matters were discussed, among them the establishment by the Federal Government of a Bureau of Trade and Commerce, quantity price, rebating, prepayment of freight to non-competing points, proper railway bill of lading.

A Luncheon and Auto Trip.

At the conclusion of the Tuesday morning session the delegates were entertained to a luncheon at the Hamilton Club by the Canadian Canners. After luncheon the hosts took their guests on an automobile trip through the fruit belt of Canada—a trip to Grimsby and return—and it is needless to say it was much enjoyed by all despite the dry and dusty roads.

T. B. ESCOTT.

Of T. B. Escott & Co., London, the Retiring President.

Tuesday Afternoon's Session.

The afternoon session opened with a discussion of the letter of recommendation from the Hamilton Board of Trade regarding a new bill of lading, flag station difficulties and settlement of claims by railway companies. Messrs. Beckett, Escott and Kinnear were appointed a committee to appear before the Toronto Board of Trade on May 20th to present the views of the Guild before the railway authorities and shippers.

A discussion followed on the paper prepared by the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild dealing with the relations between manufacturers and wholesalers.

H. C. Beckett's paper on "The Importance and Value of Trade Associations and Their Relations With the Government" was an able and carefully prepared one and at its conclusion it was decided to have it published in The Canadian Grocer and also printed and circulated among the members and others directly interested. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Beckett for his work in placing the position of business conditions so clearly before the trade.

MR. BECKETT'S ADDRESS.

In submitting for your consideration and discussion a subject of vital interest, viz., "The importance and value of trade associations and their relations with the Government," it is with the firm conviction and a feeling of confidence that the time is coming when the difficulties under which the trade and commerce of this country have labored in the past, will be largely minimized by progressive, intelligent measures so much needed in view of the changed conditions of trade.

In dealing with a matter so important might we not profitably consider the reasons for our many difficulties?

Briefly then, trade associations, their value and importance as a factor in promoting and bettering trade conditions have not been thoroughly understood or appreciated by the average merchant, the press, the public generally, and particularly by our federal and provincial governments.

Associations Not Understood.

Trade associations have been misrepresented, have been regarded with suspicion, have been looked upon as combinations pure and simple. It has not been fully realized, and is not yet fully realized, that trade associations are absolutely necessary to promote healthy and honorable trade conditions. Without them how can we successfully wrestle with the complex problems that confront every business man and every business community? If there are evils in business, united effort is the only practical remedy. Individual effort is barely noticed. Organized effort means power and will be noticed sooner or later.

When a great many concerns or units are engaged in the manufacture and sale of goods of similar character, order, system, and recognized business customs are necessary to prevent confusion and disaster. The reasonable, sensible, businesslike and only practical way to deal with all problems that confront and endanger any line of trade is through an association.

The Keynote of Progress.

The keynote of progress is clearly and unmistakably organization and unity of effort, and the things so far accomplished by trade associations, in spite of hasty and narrow-gauged opposition, are too pronounced to be doubted.

Take our own business, to those who will study the grocery trade on broad lines, and remember what has been accomplished in the past. You must admit that it would be fatal to halt in the march of advance. No matter how imperfect we appear in each other's eyes it must be clear to you that the work should progress until we reach that state when retailer, wholesaler and manufacturer will realize the benefits of co-operation on lines of mutual fair dealing. It should not be assumed that these three interests are antagonistic, but it should be our constant effort to work out lines along which the three classes can harmonize.

If education is necessary for the young, is it not equally necessary in business? Have we not dishonesty to contend with in business? Should dishonest travelers and dishonest merchants be permitted to pursue their nefarious and demoralizing methods unchecked and unhindered? What will the next generation of business men be like? Things have come to a pretty pass when honest men, and men with honest inclinations, are to be discouraged in any efforts they may make to put the merchandising and manufacturing of goods on a higher scale than has existed recently.

That progress in association work has been slow is largely due to blind self interest, prejudice, suspicion and jealousy of a competitor. It has perhaps not occurred to all that a remedy for the evils which exist in business should, and must, sooner or later, be exercised in accordance with honest, sound principles, and under government regulation.

Some Peculiar Ideas.

Sometimes we find people in business with peculiar ideas. They imagine they can continue selling goods that cost them 107 for 105 and still pay their creditors. Such people are a menace to the trade, as they are damaging to the manufacturers, and their license to do harm is not in the interests of healthy trade conditions. To such we should turn our attention and be able by reasonable methods to prevent the spread of this disease.

To anyone familiar with present day conditions it seems incomprehensible that there are men in business who belittle and underestimate the value and importance of trade associations. But there are such people and to them can, in a great measure, be attributed present day evils. They are mean enough to take advantage of what others have done for their benefit, but, either through fear or meanness of heart, will take no part in the work themselves.

There must be some recognized, legally-sanctioned security in business to prevent serious conditions with respect to the investment of capital. Failure in legitimate business is not lesirable, and any effort to bring about a better condition than at present exists among merchants and manufacturers should be encouraged and intelligently investigated.

The Government's Antagonistic Attitude.

Now what has been the attitude of both our Federal and Provincial Governments in respect to trade associations? In a word—antagonistic. And why this antagonism? A prominent Canadian banker quite recently gave a reason which I am firmly convinced is true, viz., an irresponsible press. If a country is honeycombed with agitators who are opposed to capital and to corporations or associations generally, why do politicians and cabinet ministers listen to and heed the false and erroneous statements which so frequently appear in an irresponsible press and stand ready to shape their course by what they foolishly imagine to be a popular cry? The answer is easy—it is a question of votes. Thousands of dollars are spent annually to maintain a labor bureau, to catch the labor vote, and it is to the credit of the labor unions that they have succeeded in impressing the governments with their numerical importance, even if they are in the minority. Will the long-suffering merchants and manufacturers of the Dominion have to show their power at the ballot to get a proper recognition at the hands of indifferent cabinet ministers?

It is deplorable that more thought and attention is not given by those who are placed in authority, to find out the actual commercial needs of our country. Those who would give careful attention would see signs of the times which ought to be heeded. That evolution is in progress in the conditions of trade cannot be denied by any thoughtful and intelligent representatives of the people. The wonder is that the necessity for safeguarding the commercial interests of Canada is treated so lightly and indifferently, and that practically the only attention given to trade associations is to regard them as a menace to the commercial prosperity of our country, rather than a medium for good and all that stands for honor in business.

H. C. BECKETT.
Of W. H. Gillard & Co., Hamilton.

Should Look to Business Men.

It is to business men as a whole, those who are engaged in the great service of carrying on the operations of trade throughout the length of this great Dominion, that a government should look for opinion and advice to bear upon legislation affecting business interests which are interlaced with the interests of all. Let the voice of business men be heard and a wise government will adopt progressive measures.

Agitation is an aid to redress and the more the importance of trade associations is discussed, the more thought will be applied to them, the more attention will be given to them, so that ultimately trade opinion will evolve a plan that will minimize, if it does not completely cure, the unsatisfactory conditions which at present prevail.

Should Protect Legitimate Business.

In the interests of good government there should reside somewhere the power to protect the legitimate merchants and manufacturers of the country against waste and wrong. Such power should reside with the government if trade associations cannot be trusted to stop at the proper limit. Personal interest may not yet have acquired the necessary intelligence and sensitiveness to stop at the point where it begins to invade people's rights, and as good government should protect the people's rights, trade associations should be recognized. Although suggestions were made to the Ottawa authorities months ago, and promises made that enquiry would be instituted with a view to progressive measures, nothing has been done. It has already been suggested that the trade and commerce department should wake up and enquire into the commercial needs of our country; it has been suggested that a Bureau of Internal Trade and Commerce be established, with power to pass upon agreements between merchants and manufacturers, and to perform such other work as would safeguard the interests of the people. Our neighbors across the line have received the promise of their president that something must be done to prevent the senseless and vindictive attacks upon necessary business methods. Why should the trade of our fair country be persecuted and intimidated? Is there any sensible reason that can be given for it? The importance of the matter requires immediate attention. Promises so long delayed look like insincerity. It is not a position to inspire confidence. Can merchants and manufacturers expect anything for the future? Let us hope so.

It should be the law of the land that no legislation be enacted, affecting the trade of the country, without first getting the opinion of trade associations through such associations' accredited representatives. No man with a fad should be allowed to quietly get the ear of parliament and then railroad through some legislation hurtful to the interests of sound business, as has been done in the past. The things our legislature do to hurt business frequently indicate a complete lack of knowledge and grasp of the subject dealt with. What may have taken years to build up is destroyed in a night. At present there is no government mehtod to safeguard the business man, and it is necessary and desirable that there should be.

Suggestions Regarding Methods.

In the first place, a complete and accurate record of the names and the officers of every trade association should be on fyle with the Department of Trade and Commerce. This record would be of benefit in enabling the governments to get in touch with the trade of this country. The trade should be consulted. The governments should get at what would be best for the general good, based on sound business. They should consult business associations, not individuals, on questions concerning the business welfare of this country. No bill should be allowed to pass its second reading without first sending a copy of it to the accredited representatives of every trade association in Canada. Under the present system no provision is made to keep the trade informed of what is going on. It is only after it is too late that the trade discovers some new regulation seriously damaging business without being of any benefit to the consumer. Thousands of dollars are spent annually in huge deputations to Ottawa protesting against unfair legislation. The business men of this country are put to enormous expense when this might be avoided if reasonable and businesslike methods and regulations were adopted.

I would suggest that steps be taken by this Guild to bring the attention of parliament to the present unsatisfactory and out-of-date methods, with a view to the adoption of progressive measures so much needed under the changed business conditions.

The prejudice against associations must gradually but surely disappear. We must join in a cry for higher standards of ethics in the conduct of business. The change will not only be beneficial to the business men of to-day, but will have a good and necessary influence on the thought and conduct of the young generation soon to shape the commercial future of our nation.

It was moved by M. P. Byrnes (T. Long. & Bro., Collingwood), seconded by F. T. Smye (Balfour, Smye & Co., Hamilton), and carried unanimously: "That the members of the Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Guild place on record and desire to express their hearty appreciation of the kindly offices of Mr. Adam Zimmerman, M.P. for Hamilton, in connection with the Canned Goods Act and other matters important to the commercial trade of this country and for so strongly and ably endorsing, supporting and advocating a measure of justice to the wholesale trade."

An interesting discussion regarding payment of freight to non-competing points was opened by Geo. E. Bristol (Lucas, Steele & Bristol), and the present tobacco situation was also discussed. This closed the business proceedings of the first day's session.

Entertained by the Hamilton Trade.

At 6.45 the members were the guests of the Hamilton trade at an informal dinner at the Hamilton Club and afterward to a theatre party at Bennett's new theatre. The Hamilton trade's courtesies were much appreciated by the delegates and the royal entertainment offered at the dinner certainly put a new construction on the word "informal," but as one member remarked. "It was always so in Hamilton—they know how to entertain."

Wednesday Morning Session.

The Wednesday session opened at 9 a.m. by the reading of communications.

The important question of summer and winter holidays for traveling salesmen evoked interest and lively discussion. It has been the custom for some years for the trade of Toronto and points west and north to have all travelers off their territories during the first two weeks in August, but this year, owing to the Quebec Tercentenary falling in the end of July it was thought well to place the holidays two weeks earlier in order to permit those salesmen desiring to attend the festivities to do so. Messrs. J. Dillon, A. M. Smith & Co., London, and H. Blain (Eby, Blain, Toronto) were movers and seconders, respectively, of the following resolution:

"Whereas, at a meeting of the Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Guild, held in Hamilton May 5 and 6, 1908, it was unanimously agreed by those present that travelers' summer and Christmas holidays are necessary and desirable,

"And whereas, for the purpose of properly acquainting every firm with the particulars as to territory and date, and thus avoiding mistakes and misunderstandings, it is proper that a memorandum should be signed in duplicate each year, agreeing to same,

"Now this memorandum witnesseth that we, thw undersigned, agree that we will withdraw all our travelers in the district west of but not including Toronto; as far north as, but not including, North Bay; and as far west as, and including, Windsor, from the 18th day of July, 1908, till the first day of August, 1908, both days inclusive, and that during that time we will not send out a substitute to cover such territory or solicit business by personal canvass or telephone. We also agree that each succeeding year we will withdraw all travelers in the above-named district for a holiday season of two weeks commencing the early part of August or the latter end of July, the exact date to be fixed at each annual meeting of the Ontario Guild, and also that we will withdraw our travelers for one week, viz., from the 25th of December to the 1st of January, both days inclusive, this and each succeeding year until this resolution is rescinded."

Vice-President W. G. Craig's paper was not presented, owing to Mr. Craig's absence through illness.

The Cost of Doing Business.

F. T. Smye, chairman of the Hamilton section, presented a most important subject for discussion, "The Cost of Doing Business." Mr. Smye emphatically stated that it was his opinion that the individual members of the Guild as well as jobbers generally did not go into the cost question closely enough and this was the cause of a vast amount of cutting and dissatisfaction. It was a most important question and he felt that every member should seriously look into this question for not only his individual satisfaction and comfort, but also for the general good of the trade. This discussion, which was participated in by a goodly number of the members, brought out many valuable points. Mr. Logan, of Davidson & Hay, Ltd., T. Kinnear, Hugh Blain, H. C. Beckett, John Garvey, London, J. H. Simpson, Guelph, W. P. Riley, of Riley, Ramsay & Co., Port Arthur, presented many strong arguments for serious consideration of this important question. On motion of H. Blain, seconded by T. Kinnear, the president was instructed to appoint a committee to inquire into the cost of goods and report to the next annual meeting of the Guild.

The Year's Canned Goods Policy.

A discussion on the canned goods policy for 1908 was an important feature of the session. The position of the canned goods question was very ably presented by H. C. Beckett and the retrospect he gave of the jobbers' position in the days before the trade was protected at least a margin over cost was borne out by the commendatory applause he received from the members. Mr. Beckett held no retainer from the Canadian Canners, nor was he there to speak for them, but his firm's experience, and no doubt that of every member present, had been that this very important branch of the wholesale grocery business had never been on a more satisfactory basis than during the working of the present plans, and he for one felt that, looking to at least a margin on this branch of the business, to say nothing about a profit, it was the duty of every member to adhere to the present arrangement and strengthen the hands of the canners in their efforts to put up guaranteed goods at reasonable prices and profits. R. L. Innes, sec-treas. of the Canadian Canners, who was present, addressed the meeting and briefly explained the position of the canned goods industry and the satisfactory working of their plans for the best handling of this important business. Like every business, there was here and there a seeming anomoly in the working of the plans, but with every season the faults were being remedied and if the trade were united on the question it would not be many years before a mutually satisfactory arrangement would be working for the benefit of all interests, the packer, the jobber, the retailer and the consumer.

Something About Profits.

The claim that big profits were made by canners is a fallacious one, There were at present six canneries to his knowledge that were for sale, and others working along at no profit. Only lately one well-equipped canning factory that had cost its promoters and owners $20,000, was sold for $5,750. If profits were so good this would not occur. It was the question of consolidation that saved many of the present packers from ruin. Mr. Innes said the question of doing business with the Canadian Canners was one that rested entirely with the wholesale trade. As far as the company was concerned the jobbers were assured of proper and satisfactory treatment.

An adjournment was made for luncheon at the Commercial Club, where the members were entertained as guests of the Hamilton trade. After luncheon E. M. Trowern, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, read a very ably-prepared and comprehensively explicit paper on "The Evil Effect of Co-operative Societies if Introduced into Canada." Mr. Trowern's remarks were closely followed and a very hearty vote of thanks tendered him. The Grocer regrets that owing to its great length it is unable to publish the address complete, but takes pleasure in presenting the leading features herewith.

MR. TROWERN'S ADDRESS.

In making this preliminary comment on the subject matter of this address, I have done so with a view to preparing the way to the discussion of this subject, which is not, I am sorry to say, as well understood as it should be, and for this reason I have called your special attention to the importance of the preservation of individualism in trade and commerce, especially as one of the main planks set forth by co-operative society advocates is "To eliminate the principle of individualism from trade and commerce" and they claim also that the present system of the distribution of merchandise is obsolete, expensive and inconvenient, and they lay great stress on the fact that with their system all who purchase from them share in the profits and that the private trader is doing for them what they should do for themselves.

Spread of Co-operation in England.

The co-operative system of retailing started in England over forty years ago and through the indifference of the merchants and by their lack of proper organization the system spread until it has made serious inroads on the private enterprise of the country. The methods that are adopted by these concerns for promoting their enterprise are of the most delusive character that could perhaps be foisted upon the great unthinking masses of the people. In addition to their socialistic doctrines, in which they state that the individual trader must be destroyed, they put forth extensive philanthropic pretensions, by claiming that they hand back to the consumers and members, dividends which represent their savings, whereas the amounts which are handed back are simply the amounts which they have filched and overcharged, these poor unsuspecting persons, who have been captured through the guise of fraud and misrepresentation. They also surround themselves invariably with what they term "Educational Committee" which in simple language means an "advertising committee." The duty of these committees is to visit the women's guilds, the young men and women's associations, hold meetings in parish churches and they have processions of children, and social gatherings all proclaiming the great advantages that these co-operative stores have over the individual merchant.

The Dividend Promise.

This sophistry has had the desired effect, and as they dangle the promise of dividends before the eyes of their poor deluded dupes, they announce that all this money has been taken from them in the past by what they term "private traders" In operation the scheme is a twin brother to the old trading stamp fraud, that through the efforts of our association I am pleased to say has been banished from our Canadian shores, and I hope that if the co-operative society plan of doing business ever raises its head in this Dominion, that it will receive the same fate its fellow comrade received.

A Duty to Countrymen.

Let us not, however, rest content and believe that because we have not in the past had to contend with this delusive monster, that we will not be called upon in the future to defend our rights as merchants of this country. Nor should we be rocked into slumber by those who tell us that to talk about these stores and to point out their deceptive practice is only to advertise them, and that if we leave them alone they will die a natural death. As fair-minded, fair dealing and honorable citizens of this country and as merchants who should know the pitfalls and sloughs in commercial transactions, we owe a duty to our fellow countrymen to protect those who are unfamiliar with the tricks of trade and to place upon every hole in the roadway of commerce of this character a red light, pointing out the danger and thus preventing the wayfarer from being injured or entrapped.

Some Peculiar Methods.

Chief among the methods these promoters adopt in baiting their hook to catch the unsuspecting, is that of securing persons of high rank and social standing and associating their names on the directorate of these companies. As an example of that, we find that His Excellency the Governor-General of Canada, Lord Grey, is president of the International Co-operative Alliance, and not content with occupying this position in Europe and receiving the appointment of representative of His Majesty the King in this new land, we find that this worthy person has brought with him those old-land errors, and that he is endeavoring to prepare the soil and plant the seed for this dangerous weed in this our beloved land. Every true Canadian heart beats with pride when we know that we are part of the great British Empire. We fear God, we love our country and we honor our King, but we must frankly confess that we are not by any means pleased when our King's representative departs from the duty that has been assigned for him to do, and endeavors to promote a scheme in this country, that is eating into and destroying the very heart and marrow of that great army of shopkeepers of which England for centuries has been so proud, and if still further attempts are made to influence our legislators in the direction of securing special legislation to promote these societies here, I will feel it my duty to call public attention to this fact and to ask that he be recalled and returned to the land from whence he came. We have considered briefly the moral effect that these stores have on the business and consuming community, now let us see to what extent they have been able through their tactics to displace trade out of its legitimate channels.

Statistics Regarding Co-operation.

During the year 1905 up to Jan. 1906, the Wholesale Co-operative Society of England located in Manchester, Newcastle, and London, had a turnover of $91,890,720. This society is composed of 1,138 retail societies, which form a membership of 1,635,527 members. They have 16,116 employes. In addition to this they have formed manufacturing industries which supply these wholesale houses. They manufacture biscuits, preserves, soap, flannel, corsets, woolen goods, drapery, boots and shoes, furniture, brushes, shirts, and they have a printing plant and flour mill.

The Wholesale Co-operative Society of Scotland is composed of 280 retail societies with a membership of 374,402 members. The turnover of this society for 1905 was $33,310,742. They employ 6,892 persons.

Among the retail co-operative societies of Scotland, the Society of St. Cuthbert, Edinburgh, is one of the most flourishing. It is composed of about 35,000 members. For a period of six months ending September 4, 1906, their turnover was $3,373,473.60, with gross profits of $1,033,248, and this will give you some idea of how this plausible proposition has eaten its way into the very heart of the commerce of the old land.

Those familiar with the strange channels into which trade sometimes flows, these enormous figures which represent such a large volume of trade, are not surprising. We have all seen the rise and fall of many institutions which were able to capture the trade by all sorts of strange and misleading devices. At one time in the City of Toronto, the Wholesale Grange bid well to be a dangerous rival, and in the field of finance perhaps we can point to no greater competitor and disturber of the legitimate loan company business than that of the York County Loan and Savings Company. But where are they to-day? Strange devices will always attract strange and curious people, and if the giving of dividends on the purchases were discontinued by these co-operative societies, and they were compelled to do business without pretence, and without giving bribes, and upon fair, honest and legitimate grounds, they would soon cease their operations, and the great body of honest business men would raise no objection.

Given Special Privileges.

In reviewing the summary of the evidence that was laid by the Traders' Defence Association of Scotland before the Royal Commission of Labor, we find that these stores in England and Scotland have secured special government privileges by not being called upon to pay the income tax that is demanded from the ordinary merchant and manufacturer, and the loss is estimated at one hundred thousand pounds sterling per annum. For purposes also of further deceiving the public and clothing themselves in philanthropic garments, they are only required to register under the Industrial and Provident Societies Act, as friendly societies, whereas they are trading for profit, and competing with skilled merchants in all lines of trade. Another deceptive feature that they add to their already great list of crimes is that of stating that their system enables the poor man to save and that it is conducive to thrift. Like many other concerns whose love of gain is greater than their regard for the truth, they sell at what they term the "regular price" which is supposed to infer, that they are the prices quoted by the regular legitimate trade, and from off these prices they hand back what they term to be a dividend, which is supposed to be what they have saved the poor man, whereas they have entrapped him into their net by false pretences and pharisaical methods, and then they endeavor to hold him there by bribing him with what they have already taken from him through trickery and deception.

A Few Comparisons.

To prove the truthfulness of our statement—goods were purchased in a grocery store in Scotland of a regular, legitimate dealer, and also in one of the most pretentious of these so-called Co-operative Stores, and it must be remembered that they always pave the way to the homes of the people by starting in the grocery and provision business first, and they endeavor always to keep groceries as near as possible to cost price, and make up their average profit on other lines, so as to be able to pay their bribes or dividends quarterly or half yearly. The prices quoted were as follows :

	Co-operative Store Price	Regular Dealer
1 lb. of tea	1s.	1s.
2 lbs. of sugar	4½d.	4d.
½ peck of flour	5½d.	5d.
½ peck of oatmeal	5½d.	5d.
1 lb. of pres. ginger	7d.	6d.
1 lb. pot of barley	2d.	1½d.
7 lbs. wash. soda	1d.	3½d.
1 cake Pears soap	4d.	3½d.
1 doz. Rickets Blue	9d.	6½d.

It is quite unnecessary for me to make any further comment on this as the prices speak for themselves.

Some Questionable Features.

Around all this glamor and pretence, they boastingly assert that their object is to help the poor man and that these stores were started by men who are devoting their lives to the alleviating and abolition of poverty, and the encouragement of thrift, and they state that they give no credit, only to those who have shares or stocks in these societies, and in order to secure credit they must deposit their share or stocks as security, and they allow them to obtain credit up to a certain margin of the value of their stocks. If a poor man who is honest and respectable, and who had dealt with them for years, but who had no stock in these societies, but who through sickness or loss of work, and who perhaps was struggling hard to raise and educate a family, asked for credit, they would be appalled at his insolence and he would be pointed to the door, and perhaps told that he might be able to get credit across the way at the corner grocery store, where it can be said to their credit, that if it was not for the wisdom, the good judgment and the true Christian souls of some of these noble-minded retail grocers of ours and other countries, hundreds, yea, thousands of poor and well deserving men would be compelled to beg bread, and their little families would have to be taken care of and raised by the state.

Instead, then, of being the poor man's friend, these stores are the poor man's enemy. In justification of this statement all we need to do is to visit the great army of brokers in the old land who live on the profits that are secured by advancing money on what is known in street parlance as "Co-op Checks," or the immatured dividends or bribes that are given with every purchase, a system that is both demoralizing and degrading.

A Local Example.

Not alone are they satisfied with inducing the public to purchase at their stores, but they have a pretentious system also of inducing the public to invest their money in shares, which range all the way from one shilling upwards. In the city of Toronto there has recently been started one of these co-operative societies. The capital stock of the concern is placed at $40,000. In their prospectus they offer 9.875 shares of stock for sale at $2 per share to the public, which is equal to $19,750. Ten thousand shares, which is equal to $20,000, is given to the promoters for their services, and the directors have subscribed for the balance. Out of every $2 share subscribed and paid for by the poor working man, whose friend these concerns claim to be, 40c is given to the promoter, or 20 per cent of the capital, which is the poor man's money, is given away to induce him to invest in a company in which they claim in their prospectus that tens of thousands of working men will derive the benefit of the profits, which otherwise would go to swell the pockets of the few individual traders.

They state that 50 per cent of the profits will be divided as "bonus" among the members according and in proportion to the amount of their purchases. Twenty per cent of the profit will be paid in dividend on the capital stock, and the remaining 30 per cent. of the profit will be applied to create a fund to be used in the further extension of the business.

This concern has already started operations in the northwest part of the city of Toronto, and I am pleased to be able to state that our association has not been asleep. Meetings have already been held in the district and all preparations are made to let the searchlight in on this promoters' scheme, which, like its parent across in the old land, has captured the word "co-operation," one of the most beautiful words in the English language, and one which Webster says means, "a concurrent effort of labor," and with the use of this word it may be said, "they have stolen the livery of heaven to serve the devil in."

Further Considerations.

With the figures that have just been quoted from their own prospectus, showing the disposition of the capital stock and the cost of the promotion, can it be expected that these stores can save money for the purchasers ? Not at all, unless they charge high prices for their goods, and then their continued existence largely depends upon the amount of new capital in the shape of new shares that they can induce workingmen who are not familiar with trade to invest in them. Over eight hundred failures have occurred in these societies in England and Scotland in the past twenty years, and the actual financial condition of a great many others can never be learned until possibly they are placed under the close inspection and scrutiny of the assignee.

A Message to the Wholesalers.

Wholesale merchants you have a duty to perform, you are a strong link in the great chain of commerce, you have met here to-day and some of you have been reflecting why every wholesale merchant in Ontario was not present. Why some do not enter your ranks. Let me tell you, that your movement, like the movement that I have the honor to represent, is an educational one. Because the other merchant does not see and feel just yet that someone must stand guard on the portals of commerce is no reason why you should forsake your duty. You are doing a grand and noble work, and I hope you will continue in it.

In closing, let me say, I wish you all success in your good work, and as a representative of the retail trade of Canada, I desire to extend to you the hand of good fellowship, and hope that in the future our interests may be more closely wedded together than they have been in the past.

We are two great armies moving along in the same direction, both organized for the same purpose. We are handing out the goods, as you are gathering them up from the factory and from the mill, each endeavoring to do their part, and following out our natural and divinely ordained purpose, and thus demonstrating in a practical way the true spirit of co-operation.

Some Votes of Thanks.

A vote of thanks was moved by H. Blain and W. Logan to the Hamilton trade for the splendid manner in which they had entertained the members of the Guild.

A vote of thanks was also moved by H. C. Beckett and F. T. Smye to the officers of the Federal Life Co. for their kindness in granting the use of their meeting room to the O.W.G. Guild.

O. E. Truesdale, Brantford, and A. McIlhargey, Stratford, also moved a vote of thanks to the Canadian Canners, Ltd., for their hospitable entertainment.

The thanks of the Guild were also tendered to the American Tobacco Co. for their thoughtful remembrance.

The Election of Officers.

The nominating committee for the election of officers for the 1908-9 consisted of Messrs. Smye, Beckett, Kinnear and Marr, and the following officers and committees were elected :

President—W. G. Craig, Kingston.

Vice-President—Fred. T. Smye, Balfour, Smye & Co., Hamilton.

Committee on costs—Wm. Logan, of Davidson & Hay, Toronto ; Samuel Vila, of James Turner & Co., Hamilton ; John Dillon, of A. M. Smith & Co., London.

Committee to confer with manufacturers—T. B. Escott, London ; F. T. Smye, Hamilton ; A. H. Pofford, of Davidson & Hay, Toronto ; Thos. Kinnear, Toronto ; W. G. Craig, Kingston ; H. C. Beckett, Hamilton.

Committee on legislation—Jas. Gilmour, Brockville ; James Gow, of McPherson, Glassco & Co., Hamilton ; John Garvey, London ; J. H. Simpson, Guelph.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the retiring president, T. B. Escott, for his close and conscientious labors during the past year ; also for the very efficient manner in which he had conducted the proceedings of the present sessions.

The time and place of the next meeting of the Guild was left to the discretion of the president-elect, W. G. Craig.

Mountain Echoes.

That automobile trip to Grimsby was full of excitement and dust—principally dust. There ought to be little sand in strawberries this year—the delegates picked up most of it.

My ! Grimsby is an awful dry town—even the pump wasn't working.

If J. H. Gilmour and R. J. Carson are as good in picking up "yellow dust" as they were in collaring the King's highway at Grimsby they are to be envied.

That broken auto got home finally. The occupants took the trolley in.

"The King's Inn, 1794," was the only oasis in the desert of dust. It is well to have a posted driver.

The table and working arrangements at the meeting room were most convenient. The flowers, so thoughtfully provided, were a pleasant idea on the part of the committee.

What a working quintette, Messrs. Smye, Beckett, Bristol, Gow and Vila! How those Hamilton jobbers work together ! Wake up, Toronto !

The London trade was well represented, every house having a member present.

The Messrs. Simpson, of Guelph, though a young house, were right in it with the old war horses.

It was Mr. Riley's first visit to a Guild meeting in Canada, and no more interested member registered. Port Arthur and New Ontario's interests will not suffer if he can help it. He has the "hustling air."

Fred Smye kept things on the move in the meetings.

The courtesies extended by the Canadian Canners, Limited, were highly appreciated by all.

The automobile ride through the "banana belt" while enjoyable, would have been a veritable treat a few weeks later when the peach, cherry and apple trees will be in bloom.

The great fact is "These Guild meetings bring the trade closer together and a better understanding of each other's business methods and trade news is the result. We meet, we learn and we profit."

REMOVING TO LARGER QUARTERS

The head offices of the Queen City Oil Co., Toronto, have been removed to the third floor of the Ogilvie building, 63 Bay street, southeast corner of Wellington street. For the past ten years the executive offices of this busy house have occupied the whole of the fourth floor in the Lawlor building, but these premises had become entirely inadequate to give the necessary working space for the executive trade and accounting staff of this constantly growing business. By securing the entire third floor in the new Ogilvie building, where up-to-date offices have been fitted up, nearly double the floor space affords ample accommodation in the centre of the wholesale district.

THE RETURN OF "SUNNY JIM."

A Breezy Story of His Recent Rejuvenation.

"Sunny Jim" is with us again. His sunny face again greets the youngsters who have been patiently awaiting his return after an absence of several years. Thousands have missed his happy countenance and have sorrowed over his demise—but he has not demised. He has bobbed up again as he did six years ago, when his name was a household word and his face adorned the pages of magazines and newspapers in this and other lands. He is welcomed home as a long lost and almost forgotten sojourner in strange lands.

In other words, "Sunny Jim" has been rejuvenated, regalvanized, resusticated.

Of course you have heard of "Sunny Jim." You have heard of him unless you have been living on the sandy slopes of Patagonia or in the caves of the South Sea Islands—but the probabilities are that the famous "Sunny Jim" has penetrated even these remote corners of the earth; for he is a national character almost as well known as Jack Canuck. Originally introduced to show the healthful and helpful effects of a well known breakfast food upon the human temperament, "Sunny Jim" became recognized as a natural expression of that type of good-natured, wholesome healthfulness with which all are familiar. Many rhymsters have embalmed him in poetry and song and his name became a byword on the stage. Thousands of happy-go-lucky swains in villages and towns were nicknamed "Sunny Jim." His sunny face was "benevolently assimilated" by other advertisers of all kinds of commodities. Thousands of letters were received by the H-O. Company merely addressed to "Sunny Jim," Buffalo, N.Y. "Sunny Jim" indeed was the most widely known character that ever came down the dusty highways of twentieth century publicity.

Many who knew "Sunny Jim" have perhaps forgotten the popular breakfast food with which his smiling countenance was identified. They remember "Sunny Jim" but they may have forgotten "Force." His reappearance in the public press is merely an effort on the part of the H-O. Company to reclaim this popular evangel of good health and good living, and to re-establish him in the affections of the people. "Sunny Jim" is the personification of sunshine and happiness, but he isn't half so sunny as the boy or girl who eats his famous breakfast food every day in the year.

THE COST OF ECONOMY.

By Rev. G. C. Peck, New York.

"And King David said to Ornan, Nay; but I will buy it of thee for the full price.—I. Chronicles, xxi., 24."

Thus did one man decline to take advantage of what the world would call a "bargain." Such refusal, however, might be little better than quixotic. One needs a good reason when he persists in making things costly to himself. David evidently thought he had such reason.

He had gone up to Ornan's threshing floor for the purpose of there erecting an altar at his own expense. The shame of his recent crime was so keen that he was willing to pay any reasonable price for expiation. Judge then his surprise to be offered the property without cost to himself. What a chance to economize !

But David knew a thing that we sometimes forget. The soul's processes can never be cheapened. To shave the cost of one's altar is to cheat oneself. Life has no real short cuts to triumph. God appoints no bargain days on which the shrewd trader may enrich himself at the expense of the Almighty. To attempt the payment of one's spiritual debts in the property of another, to offer the sacrifices of a contrite heart without personal drain, is a specious fraud.

What is the "spoiling" of a child ? What but the payment by parents of the price which the child ought to pay ? "My child does not know the meaning of self-denial," said a mother overfond. Pity such a child ! Missing the meaning of self-denial, he will miss all the real prizes of life. I knew a young man who made a "hit" at his first public venture. But that first hit was his last; he has never found the range since. Easy success ruined him. The short cut was a blind alley. The sorriest thing that ever happened to Coleridge was when his friends guaranteed him against a rainy day. His muse sickened with the absence of bracing airs. Hardship had kept his soul awake, but ease drugged him. Oh, the cheats we practice against ourselves by our economies !

The last place for a man to save money is on his gifts. Let him wear the old overcoat another season, if need be; let him reduce the length of his bill of fare, but let him not shave the cost of those altars which love builds. The dearest economies we ever practice are those which touch our benefactions. Our loss is greater than that of the cause we refuse to help. Charity can better stand my withholding of help than I can stand withholding it. To let another do my giving is to let him have my blessing. If Ornan builds my altar for me he also takes my joy.

That man who asks how much he must give up in order to be a good man has gotten hold of the wrong end of the matter. The question rather is how good he wants to be. A disciple who finds that his path includes no crosses may well pause to ask which master he is following. Life's real altars represent the shedding of blood. To repeat, then, David's great renunciation at Ornan's threshing floor, to hold bravely to the sacrificial quality of human life at its best, to refuse all ignoble lightening of loads, to bleed that we may bless—in spite of all complacent voices to the contrary—this is one of the rich truths of life.

*What the Canadian Trade is Doing

Letters From Our Corps of Grocer Correspondents From Coast to Coast—Interesting Happenings of the Week in the Various Towns and Cities—Discussion of Trade Problems.

CHATHAM.

May 11.—During the past week the series of rural and village burglaries in this vicinity has continued without intermission. On Tuesday night two armed men broke into J. A. Halliday's general store and Arthur Smith's jewelry store at Merlin, and later tried to enter the Molsons Bank there, being driven off by a clerk named Munro. Thursday night H. J. Merritt's grocery at Louisville was entered, and $100 worth of goods and $15 in cash taken. The same night burglars visited Ridgetown, entering the Leitch Veneer and Basket Works, Newman & Co.'s bean office and R. Watt & Son's Machine Works. In practically every case, except the Louisville robbery, the amounts obtained were small. The announcement on Monday that four suspects had been arrested at Stoney Point after a hot chase by Provincial detectives, was a source of general relief.

The annual meeting of the Wallaceburg Sugar Company was held last week, the old Board of Directors being unanimously re-elected. The reports presented at the meeting made a good showing for the past year. The prospects are that the beet acreage this year will be a large one.

* * *

Geo. R. Bradley, of St. Catharines, was in the city last week, in the interests of the local branch of Bradley & Son.

* * *

Harry Keeley, who has been conducting a meat business on King Street, has moved to Fifth Street, adjoining the bridge. His new premises have been handsomely fitted up.

* * *

D. B. McDonald, formerly in the meat business in Tilbury, in partnership with Jas. McHardy, has moved to Chatham, and taken a position with W. J. Easton.

City merchants have an awkward handicap to contend with in handling the egg and butter trade. Several rural merchants in this vicinity are accustomed to send out rigs, which tour the country for miles around, buying up eggs. Each rig carries a big stock of groceries, and as the buyers offer one cent per dozen more in trade than in cash, the housekeepers naturally stock up with groceries. The buyers take only eggs, which are readily turned over, and do not take butter. When the farm wives bring their butter to town, the grocers find that they have already stocked up with groceries and expect to be paid for their butter in cash. Some local grocers are urging that a definite understanding be arrived at with reference to the prices paid for butter, and that a decided difference be made between cash and trade prices.

Miss Nettie Collins, for the past three years a valued member of the grocery staff of John McCorvie & Son, on Saturday severed her connection with that firm. It is understood that Miss Collins, who has made many friends, alike for the firm and for herself, has a better situation in view.

* * *

Chatham is apparently up against a meat famine. Last week prices on choice cuts were raised from two to three cents per pound; though for inferior grades of meat prices were left at the old level. Butchers state that meat was never so scarce; that there are practically no cattle in the country fit to kill. Owing to the high prices of feed last fall, farmers sold off their stock rather than carry it over the winter. During the past week pork prices have shown a slump; but this condition is considered only temporary, and a rise is daily expected.

A. J. Barassin, Harry Andrew's chief clerk, was down town Friday for the first time after a five weeks' illness. His many friends were glad to see him once more. Mr. Barassin expects to resume his duties this week.

Merlin was visited by a bad fire Monday morning, five stores being destroyed. The total loss approximates $50,000. Among the sufferers was R. Abram, grocer. Mr. Abram, however, succeeded in saving a good share of his stock. The plate glass windows of J. N. Halliday's grocery were smashed by the heat.

Albert Owens has resigned his position at H. A. Andrew's grocery and will shortly leave for Mount Clemens.

INGERSOLL.

May 11.—The buoyant spirits so noticeable amongst the grocers and merchants in general in the first days of spring were conspicuous by their absence last week. "It never rains but it pours" was the thought that gave adequate expression to their sentiments. A week good spirits whether one is in or out of of rainy weather is not conducive to business. However, the hopeful ones are never weary of looking for the cloud with the silver lining and when business does "pick up" the increase will no doubt atone for the comparative dullness that has reigned for the past couple of weeks. The backward weather has had its effect on everyone. The farmers are behind with their work, in fact, the season seems to be from two to three weeks later than formerly. In grocery circles great preparations have been made for a busy summer. The stocks are large and much attention is being given to displaying all seasonable lines, such as fruits and vegetables.

A few seasons ago the merchants and their clerks used to have a weekly half-holiday during the warm months. Much emphasis was laid on the fact that recreation had its beneficial influences and with picnics and other pleasant outings the season was spent in a very enjoyable way. Last year practically no attention was paid to the half holiday and just now a great many clerks are beginning to wonder if there will be a return this year to the good old days when keys were turned in the doors once a week and for a few short hours everyone left their cares behind them.

It is only reasonable to suppose that there will not be the usual summer demand for maple syrup this season, and particularly that of foreign manufacture. This is due to the unusually large production in the immediate vicinity and the fact that many citizens stocked up when the price dropped considerably below that of former years.

Practically all the merchants report a good demand for early vegetables. These, of coures, require no little attention if they are to be kept fresh, but they are something for which there is a good demand. Some of the merchants are decidedly particular as to the manner in which they are displayed and those who have studied the peculiarities of their customers know how necessary this is. "Are these fresh," is invariably the question which the grocer has to answer and if he has kept them well supplied with water he can usually answer truthfully "They are."

Society. The merchants in general have shown a commendable spirit in connection with the preliminary details and with such earnest co-operation it is expected the event will be the biggest red letter day in the history of the town.

NEWCASTLE, N.B.

The M. McLaughlin Co., of Buctouche, on the 25th April lost their flour mill, butter factory and general store by fire. The loss is about $30,000, with insurance of $12,500. This was one of Kent county's most important industries.

Richibucto merchants have decided to close at 6 p.m. every Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

VANCOUVER.

May 9.—The local market is almost entirely devoid of the popular brands of condensed milk and cream manufactured in Canada, namely, the St. Charles brand and the Reindeer. For a couple of days it was impossible to secure any, but during the last day or so a very limited amount has been passed around to the retailers. These two brands enjoy a large sale and practically hold the market, because of quality and price. There are some imported creams which are a little higher, but the sale of the others is not anything compared to the two mentioned. The scarcity is, no doubt, due to the opening of railway and mining camps, and the outgoing of large numbers to out-of-the-way portions of the country, when condensed goods form a staple part of the provision outfit. The Dawson spring trade is also about to open, and this will take a large amount.

Mooney's biscuits, made at Stratford, are taking a good hold in Vancouver. They retail at the same price as the local, and with steady pushing on the part of the local agent, Harry McKelvie, the increase in business is very encouraging. Mooney's sweet goods, however, are not as popular as their sodas, falling a little behind Perrin's and Christie's. These older and better known goods are giving way in the sodas to the newer arrival.

Some of the importers will be caught with California butter on their hands. A large consignment is on the way here from the south, the jobbing price being 32½c. When local creamery jobbed at 35c, the California product had the preference, but local has now dropped to 30c, retailing at 35c, and those who have the California coming will have to drop it to make it acceptable to the retailer.

Chilliwack is about to have a branch of the B. C. Retail Merchants' Association established there. W. Ladoux, secretary of the provincial association, has been in the town for a few days interesting the retailers with the result that a majority of them have signified their intention of becoming members, the object of the association being to safeguard the interests of the retail men in all sections of the trade. A committee consisting of G. H. W. Ashwell and B. F. Malcolm, were appointed to take charge of the organization work. It is expected that officers will be elected at the next meeting.

A. H. Napper and Mrs. Napper have left Greenwood to again reside in Grand Forks. For nine years, Mr. Napper has been with the Hunter-Kendrick Co., Ltd, in their general stores at Grand Forks and Greenwood, and went to the latter place when the firm sold out its Grand Forks business one and a half years ago. He is returning to Grand Forks to go in with John Donaldson, who has purchased the Columbia branch of Jeff Davis & Co.'s business.

The organization is announced of the Coldstream Valley Fruit Packing Company, a company formed in Vernon to take over the business of buying and packing fruit formerly handled by the branch of the Oscar Brown Company, of Vancouver, in that city.

L. Acton, for many years bookkeeper in Fell & Co.'s grocery store, Victoria, has entered the business of his brother, William Acton, who has a similar establishment on Yates street, as partner. The premises of the latter business will be enlarged to meet the increasing demands of trade.

Victoria retail grocers celebrated the first half holiday of the season on Saturday. From now on during the summer an afternoon a week will be taken off.

Rowland Machin, of Victoria, who returned some time ago from a trip to Mexico, made to ascertain the possible trade relations with British Columbia, has received a communication from Kendal & Co., dealing largely with the organization of a large departmental store in the city of Mexico. Most of the capital will be subscribed in England, but $25,000 will be allotted to capitalists in this country, a similar amount being raised in Mexico.

* * *

Arthur Kidman, of Sydney, Australia, who controls the refrigerator space on the steamers plying between British Columbia and Australia, left this week for the east. He will visit Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal, Boston and New York before leaving for the Old Country. He will attend a convention in France of those interested in refrigerator carriage, returning here in August. The trade in which he is engaged with this port has increased wonderfully. In 1905, only 600 carcasses of frozen mutton were shipped here, but during the past year the figure was 40,000. These were all used in the province. Three thousand cases, (56 lbs.) were also sent over from Australia. These arrive here in what might be called the off season and find ready sale. The establishment of a preferential tariff would greatly foster traffic in such lines as this, as well as fruit, as the seasons between Canada and Australia are just opposite, and the goods would reach here when wanted the most.

EDMONTON.

May 7.—Business in every line is booming in Edmonton at present, and the grocers as well as others are feeling the good times and are profiting thereby. The promise of good crops, the sale of the city debentures, the railroad construction work near the city, the civic improvements being carried out, the establishment of new industries in the city, and the prosecution of various private business enterprises all combine to counteract the effect of the partial crop failure and the money stringency, and to put new life in the trade. According to present indications trade in Edmonton for the balance of the present year should surpass all previous records.

The Retail Clerks' Protective Association held a meeting in Pythian Hall on Wednesday evening last to discuss the early closing question and to make arrangements, if possible, for the weekly half holiday in the retail stores. T. C. McRae, president of the association, occupied the chair. Many retail merchants in the city have expressed a wish that arrangements could be made for a weekly half holiday in the stores during the summer months and suggested that the Clerks' Association should take the matter up. The members of the association were very much in favor of the plan and a committee composed of Messrs. La Riche of Gariepy & Lessard, Berkman of A. Cristalls, and Forsyth of Ross Bros., was appointed to circulate petitions for the signatures of the merchants. One petition will ask for the closing of all retail stores in the city every Wednesday afternoon during the months of June, July and August. The other petition will ask for the closing of all retail stores at six o'clock, except on Saturdays and days before holidays.

According to present conditions there is every probability that there will be an early harvest this year, and a larger acreage and larger yield per acre of grain in the province of Alberta than in any previous year. The fall and spring wheat is now practically all sown, and it is estimated that the acreage is considerably larger than last year. Farmers are now preparing for oat sowing, and it is expected that the acreage of both oats and barley sown this year will be greater than in the past. Seeding is fully one month earlier than last year, and with good growing weather the harvest should be early enough to preclude all danger of frost. With these facts before them, is it any wonder that the farmers of Alberta are optimistic?

Hugh McDonald, of Edmonton, has purchased the cheesemaking plant that was installed at Erskine and will soon have it in full swing. Mr. McDonald is a thoroughly experienced cheesemaker and feels satisfied that everything points to the enterprise being entirely successful.

A baseball club has been organized by the employes of Revillon Bros. Judging by the interest shown by everyone of the large number present, Revillon's will be a force to be reckoned with all the time in the struggle for the amateur championship of the city.

A very successful advertising fair was held at Little's grocery, corner of Third Street and Jasper Avenue last week.

GALT.

May 12.—The condition of the trade in Galt remains about the same, and the grocers unhesitatingly admit that while they are not complaining, trade is not increasing in volume as rapidly as might be the case.

The pineapple season is in full swing, and local grocers advise the public to buy this fruit now, as the price will undoubtedly increase later on in the season. The fruit this year is somewhat larger than usual, but prices are about the same.

* * *

Fresh strawberries have arrived, and a small quantity is finding a ready sale at 25c per box. Green vegetables have been on sale for some time, in fact, one grocer has been able to supply his customers with fresh lettuce practically all winter.

The efforts to increase the Galt market are already producing good results and the attendance the past two weeks has included farmers who, for years have made it a practice of attending other markets. They find that the prices in Galt are fully as good, if not better, than in other places, and have announced their intention of coming here regularly in the future. On Saturday butter was 30c per pound, and eggs 15 cents per dozen.

Your correspondent dropped into a large grocery store the other day, and met a gentleman coming out. "Did you see that man?" asked a member of the firm. "Yes, what has he been doing?" "Well," said the grocer, "he is just one of many who make a practice of dropping into a grocery store and picking up an apple, orange, or, in fact, anything which happens to be lying round. You have no idea of the amount which is annually lost to grocers in this way. Suppose three men dropped in every day and helped themselves to an apple each. In two weeks they would do away with over a peck of apples. With apples at 20 cents a peck this would mean a loss of $5 per year in apples alone. Do you think that these same men would think of going into a book store and picking up a post card or a paper, talk a few minutes and walk out? On the contrary, they would be brought up with a short turn by the proprietor of the store. Why it is that the grocers suffer in this manner is hard to understand. And, to use the popular expression, we are 'up against it' when it comes to stopping it, for some of the offenders are our best customers. One man, however, frequently comes in and makes his mid-day lunch at our expense. We have, as a last resort, placed everything eatable out of reach, and find that this has been of some good, although a number on the free list have nerve enough to reach around behind the counter and get what they want without as much as thanking us." That everything eatable had been placed out of reach was easily to be seen, and The Grocer correspondent was forced to walk into the back shop to get his daily apple.

The agitation for a half-holiday during the summer months is gaining strength, and it now looks as if the desired end might be obtained. Concerted action is the secret of success in this agitation.

GUELPH.

May 11.—R. J. E. McCrae, of J. A. McCrae & Son, left on Tuesday morning for an extended trip to the West. Bob earns his holidays. He is continually on the rush and certainly comes under the head of fellows who do it. May he have a pleasant trip and come back bigger and just as good looking is the prayer of several of our young ladies and the only fear is he may get picked up out West and then there will be wailing and grinding of teeth.

A complimentary banquet given by the Canadian Shredded Wheat Co. under auspices of Dutton St. Methodist Church Ladies' Society was held last Tuesday evening in the church and was a success. The company's representative also made business good in their line by giving several of the merchants special window decorations which was used to good advantage.

E. J. Moore, editor of The Canadian Grocer, spent a couple of hours on Saturday afternoon in the city and got acquainted with a number of the grocers.

The bogus check artist has been doing business in our city again and as usual the grocers were easy money at first but afterward got after their man had him arrested and got squared. Now as one who has been bitten, though not in this instance, why don't the grocers make it a point at these meetings to draw up an agreement among themselves not to cash any checks, not even for regular customers except in some special cases. Are we all so anxious for business that for fear of our opposition getting a piece of it we never stop to consider whose check we are taking except that the name seems familiar. "We make it a rule to cash no checks," said a grocer to me to-night and I laughed at him for he happened to be caught some years ago and when I mentioned the fact to him he said, "Don't tell anyone now for they have all forgotten about that." We learned our lesson then, why cannot all grocers learn the lesson now. Stop and think every time you get a check presented for an order. We don't mean a check from a responsible party. It is all in those two words, stop and think, when you get the check, not after your man has gone.

The Kingston correspondent wants us to talk wagons. I wonder if he doesn't like to forget some of the day's worries when he picks up The Grocer, come to Guelph to the old boys reunion for a week and we will give you free board, a good time and show you some of the best wagons and where they are made and all you will have to do is to keep sober.

* * *

The people are all glad to see the price of rolled oats and biscuits getting back to the regular basis. It has not been such a snap to get 30 cents for an ordinary 25-cent package as it looked to be at first.

* * *

Most of the seedsmen and grocers around here have dropped money on Dutch Sets and potato onions this year on account of the general good crop last year on these lines.

* * *

Potatoes were scarce for a few days last week and the price got up to $1.10 a bag but that was all that was necessary to bring them out. 85 cents is again the ruling price.

KINGSTON.

May 11.—The Board of Trade held its annual meeting lately and by a unaminous vote Harry W. Richardson was made president. The Richardsons are amongst the largest handlers of grain on the continent, having elevators all over. Discussions followed regarding schemes for Kingston's future prospects, and the general feeling was that Kingston was going ahead.

* * *

Kingston feels proud to think that the wholesalers were wise enough to elect Alderman W. G. Craig president of the Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Guild. He is worthy of the honor.

What about soap? Does it pay to get a bar, say a 12 oz. one of your own that you may control and push and make a better profit on, or sell the kinds advertised so much. If you buy a line of your own for say $3.25, and have to pay $3.65 for the advertised soap, who pays for the advertising?

* * *

And now that spring has actually come the subject of early closing is up for discussion. One way to get at it is for a couple of clerks, say lady clerks, to go round with a petition and ask the grocers to close at 6 o'clock sharp excepting Fridays and Saturdays. May it come quickly.

On account of the incessant rain our markets have been well attended. Farmers, not being able to do any work on the land, hitch up and bring in surplus produce. Potatoes are getting quite scarce and prices jumped up to $1.15 a bag. A grocer bought a big load of potatoes from a small farmer last week and after Mr. Farmer had gone, weighed the lot and was two bags out. Many of the bags were sugar sacks. The sugar men should use a larger sack, and fold the top and then sew it. The small sacks are a nuisance to grocers, but a bonanza to mean farmers.

I asked a grocer the other day if it paid to handle crockery and chinaware. He said, "It may pay some merchants, but it paid me to get rid of it." It is a good business in itself and it would be better, he thought, if there was less mixing up of lines.

* * *

At last we are to have good roads. Ald. Graham, once a grocer, is chairman of the board of works and is a hustler and with Ald. Carson, another grocer, to advise and aid him, we will soon have roads smooth enough to deliver eggs without patent carriers. Several blocks are to be paved.

* * *

J. Y. Parkhill & Co., grocers, are in their new quarters. They have just put in a large refrigerator from the Eureka Co., Toronto. Mr. Parkhill saw their ad. in The Grocer. Yes, it pays to advertise.

Lee & Kirk are now settled in their new general store and it is bright and up-to-date. Herb Dunlap is looking after the grocery department. They have a milk business in connection.

Kingston has more groceries to the square yard than any other city in Canada.

Last month I was induced, partly by the agent and partly by the ad. in The Grocer, to put in two Dayton computing scales. I had been looking at that picture in The Grocer for a long time, I oated to part with the old up-and-down counter scales. We had been so long together and I had often felt proud of them after shining them up. Yes, all this had weight! Well, so far I don't regret the move. They are certainly money savers. I think they might be made to sell for less money, but when years of anxious moments have been spent in perfecting these instruments we must settle down and pay for brain wear. I wouldn't part with them now for twice the money. Just throw on a ham 15¾ lbs. at 16c. and you see the price at once. The old way you had to finger around after the weights and tear off a piece of paper, look for your lead pencil that had worked down through your vest pocket into the lining of your coat, and, well, you figure it out and to make sure you are right you ask the other clerk to check your figures. Do you see the point? Well, get one and try it, and tell them you saw the ad. in The Grocer.

HAMILTON.

May 11.—The unlooked for drop in the price of soda biscuits is being freely discussed among the trade. Most grocers think it means smaller profits on these goods, as the price was before, a fairly good margin was shown, but as it looks now, the profit will be pretty well cut out. In the face of the advance in flour it seems a funny thing.

The many friends of Thos. Upton, "The Jam Man," will regret to hear of his serious illness. After a sudden attack of appendicitis he was removed to the City Hospital, where it was found necessary to perform an operation. He is doing nicely and hopes are expressed for his speedy recovery.

* * *

The clerks are again agitating for the Wednesday half holiday, commencing the first of June, and the prospects look favorable at this stage for their succeeding in carrying their point.

The political pot is beginning to boil and both parties are working away with a hearty good will. We have three lawyers as candidates and I see from the local papers that the grocers are going to ask a pledge from them to support and push through the house a bill for law reform. The division court act is the one that the average merchant would like to see changed so as to make it easier both for debtor and creditor to collect small accounts, say up to $25. As it stands now a great many merchants abandon their claims rather than incur the excessive costs of a suit. If merchants all over the province would take this matter up and pledge their candidates in the same way, it would no doubt put it in such a shape that our legislators could not afford to ignore it and in another year there would be a rounding up of delinquent debtors that would make the merchants smile.

Futures in canned goods are being offered either with fixed or open prices, but I don't think there are many people buying. It rather looks now as if some of the large holders of 1907 pack would rather get a rebate on their old stock than speculate in futures, as it is a well known fact that the consumption has been small and there are large stocks to draw from.

LONDON.

May 11.—For weeks investigation has been going on before the county judge into the affairs of Lind, Kerrigan & Co., wholesale grocers, whose assignment was announced some time ago. It was suggested by some of the parties interested that there was a discrepancy between the estimate of the value of the stock, as given by the firm and as subsequently computed by the assignees. The solicitor for the firm says the claim was set up that the firm had sold in a clandestine manner some of the stock, thus defrauding the creditors to that extent. This, it was claimed, was shown by the difference in the respective valuations, that of the firm being considerably higher than the figure set by the assignee. The further claim was made that the condition of the books showed that some such dealings had been carried on by the firm. The insolvent's solicitor, in an interview, said: "These charges have now been thoroughly investigated, the case being enlarged from day to day, till all those who were in the firm's employ were examined. No trace of any goods having been sold could, however, be found. It was shown that the books had been kept in a loose manner, there being some entries for which no account could be given, but there was nothing to indicate that any false entries had been made." The members of the defunct firm are said to have left the city since the investigation and it is likely the assignee will declare a dividend on the stock which was sold. There is some question between the bank and the general creditors as to the bank's right to collect certain amounts of the firm for which drafts were handled but which had been held and not sent forward for acceptance by customers, or, having been sent forward, were not accepted. The bank claims that there is an assignment of the debt, which claim the other creditors dispute.

The Retail Grocers' Association, at their regular meeting this week made final arrangements for their excursion to Detroit on June 17th. It was decided to run it via Grand Trunk, and the fare was fixed at $1.45, good for two days. This will enable excursionists to see two American League baseball teams play in the championship series. It was also arranged to have the regular Wednesday half-holiday during the months of June, July and August.

J. Maynes, grocer, Adelaide Street, has disposed of his business to a Mr. Boyne.

Wholesale and retail trade is quiet. Teas, coffees, sugars, in fact, all the staples, are very firm.

AN UNFORTUNATE ERROR.

No one is infallible. That is something we found out last week when a most peculiar and scarcely to be understood error occurred in our advertising columns. The advertisement of the F. F. Dalley Co., Hamilton, bore a prominent line which should have read "2 in 1 Shoe Polish." Through some unaccountable error the line was set up "Stove Polish" and ran that way through the issue. Considerable care has been given to organizing a department which would detect such errors, which are almost bound to occur more or less frequently in a print shop and the department is particularly efficient. In this case, however, it fell lown in some unexplainable way and the mistake was passed. Everybody, particularly everybody around this office, knows 2 in 1 Shoe Polish and the mistake cannot be accounted for. We are only too glad to rectify it.

In one of their regular weekly shipments to the Buffalo branch last week the Salada Tea Co. sent over two cars of package tea.

REPORTS OF BRITISH CONSULS.

The Department of Trade and Commerce announces a further strengthening of that department. In future it will publish in the weekly report, from time to time, such extracts from the reports of all British Consular Officers in various parts of the world, as may be deemed of interest in Canada.

Our department should now go a step further and deal with the reports of the British Consuls in United States and Germany in the same way.

BUSINESS MEN AND POLITICS.

Ontario and Quebec are in the throes of an election campaign. None should take a keener interest in the campaign than the business men of these two provinces.

The government of a province, to be successful, must be businesslike. Government is only another term for business management. If business men leave the elections to the average politician, they cannot expect the return of men to the legislatures who will follow business-like methods. Grapes are not gathered from thorns, or figs from thistles.

Party exigency is the first thought of the average politician. It is not business necessities or conditions that give him concern. In politics, as in business, you get what you pay for, and too often pay dear for it.

It is unfortunate that the business men of this country who have both time and means at their disposal do not take a more active personal interest in political affairs. There are business men in every community who are in the position to do so, but the call to acquire money sounds louder in their ears than the call to lend their assistance to managing the business of the state. And the second generation of wealthy business families seem as little disposed as their progenitors to enlist their service in the public services.

Money evidently breeds either love of ease or greed for more gold, rather than the desire for useful service to the state.

A CRUSADE OF OPTIMISM.

Canadians will take a great measure of interest in the movement that has been started in St. Louis to bring about by concerted public efforts a revival of healthy business conditions in the States. Not only on the grounds of charity, for charity after all is a national as well as individual attribute, but on the grounds of self-interest. Likewise, we wish our neighbors across the border a speedy recovery from the depression which still surrounds them. The juxtaposition of the two countries, the shadow in a commercial sense, which the larger state must throw across the smaller, and the great business transactions between the two, make the well-being of the Republic a matter of importance to Canada. We know to our cost how her financial panic helped to precipitate, if it did not induce, a smaller one here. And we realize that in the same way the aftermath of depression is not having the best of influence upon our own recovery. It is not essential to Canadian convalescence that the States should get well likewise, but her well-being must certainly be most helpful in its tendency.

We cannot, therefore, but regard with interest the propaganda of optimism which has been started in St. Louis, and which shows signs of spreading, as it should do, through the Republic. There is nothing like optimism to clear the shadows from the path, and to make apparent that things are not half so bad as they appear to be. The National Prosperity Association of St. Louis, behind which are all the business interests of the city, has been organized to bring about the return of prosperity at an accelerated rate by means of a crusade of confidence. An effort will be made through the press, through the business associations, and through the traveling salesmen, to encourage the people to see the sunshine that is clearly in the pathway, and to believe that things are much better than the majority think that they are; and that it is only a question of a very short time, how short depends upon the people themselves, for the full tide of prosperity to return.

E. C. Simmons, a wide-awake local merchant, is the chairman of the executive committee of this national movement for the restoration of confidence, and in writing on the project, says that the problem they are undertaking is to quicken the recovery of the States from the disasters of October. The association believes in the power of encouragement, and in the value of showing to the nation that conditions are fundamentally sound and healthy and that nothing now exists but a lack of confidence to restore the measure of prosperity that existed a year ago. "We ask," says Mr. Simmons, "every business man—in fact, every commercial man and house in the country—to lend us their aid, to work with us, to join hands in the gospel of good cheer. If they are pessimists, we want them to become optimists; if they are optimists, we want them to increase their optimism."

We wish the National Prosperity Association of St. Louis the greatest measure of success in the crusade, and trust that the co-operation they appeal for will not be withheld. Cannot we take a lesson from this movement? Cannot all our newspapers, our various great commercial corporations, our industrial and labor organizations combine in a similar hunt for sunshine? We are apparently now getting more sunshine than the States, but Canada could do with much more. We have all the way through preached the doctrine of optimism in this paper. General co-operation throughout the country would soon dispel all thoughts as to depression and hard times.

SHOWING THE SILVER LINING

The silver lining to the cloud of trade depression, which has been hovering more or less darkly over Canadian trade this spring is now becoming evident, though in a way that seemed to be little expected.

Whatever has been felt of quietness in trade and tightness in the money markets is having one beneficial effect, which, while it is evident to some extent in Ontario and Quebec, is particularly a feature in the West. The difficulty experienced in trade is putting business generally on a better basis.

Wholesalers tell us that they are having little trouble with the well-established firms, and a study of the reports of business changes show that while a large number of retailers have gone out of business, in a great many cases these were firms who were operating on small capital and with not too secure methods.

In the West a great number of businesses are adopting the cash system and the recent difficulty, which has certainly been evident there, will have the effect of cutting out, to a considerable extent, the credit business which has been done.

The fact that the business men in the West are exhibiting a confidence in the future is shown by the interest they are taking in general trade matters. Last week a representative of the MacLean Company working in Southern Manitoba sent in 79 new subscriptions for the various trade papers published by the company, a pretty good evidence of how matters are moving in that district. Ontario, too, is not greatly behind along this line as may be realized, when another representative working the central part of the province sent in 23 new subscriptions last week.

While the chief object of the trade papers is to supply news, considerable attention and space have been given in later years by the MacLean papers to educational matter, showing how success has been reached in various businesses and with a view to raising the standard of trade. This campaign is having its results in all branches of business and will benefit Canadian business generally.

RAISING TRADE STANDARD.

The meeting of the Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Guild in Hamilton last week, which is reported at length on pages previous, was remarkable for one feature. All through the proceedings a tone of desire to raise the standard of trade by co-operation between manufacturer, wholesaler and retailer was much in evidence. The meeting was not called to bicker over prices and to make interior arrangements, as some supposed, but for the discussion of matters which will affect the trade generally. This fact will be very readily realized after a perusal of the report of the proceedings and the addresses given.

It is recognized that the interests of all three departments of the grocery trade are so closely united that what is advantageous or injurious to one will in almost every case likewise affect one or both of the others to a considerable extent and action along proposed lines is considered from this standpoint.

In their campaign for a better education of its members in trade problems and its efforts to raise the standard of the grocery trade the Guild is doing a worthy work and deserves all encouragement.

MONTREAL'S PROPOSED EXPOSITION.

Although the Montreal City Council turned down a motion the other day that a small tax should be levied in support of an exposition in Montreal, the project has by no means been shelved. At this embryonic stage of the proceedings no other decision than that which was given could be expected from the civic authorities. Taxes cannot be, or should not be, lightly imposed, and the warmest advocate of a Montreal exposition, whether it be local or international, cannot as yet admit that the citizens generally have given their sanction to that financial support of the scheme which is necessary to carry it out successfully. As it was stated in the Montreal Council, the public must pronounce first, before civic action can be definitely taken.

It is the public then who have to be convinced as to the desirability of an exposition being held in Montreal, or rather not so much convinced as to its desirability, as assured that the project is seriously meant, that it will be run on businesslike lines for and in the best interests of the city. No enlightened man can be blind to the benefits accruing from an exhibition of a strictly public character. Not only would such a project advertise the city, holding forth great attractions to visitors, but it would assemble the various industries of the community, and of those in other parts of the country desirous of exhibiting wares, stimulate trade generally, and be of great educational value.

It is doubtful if the average man in the street fully realizes the extent and resources of Canadian manufacturing enterprise as represented in the city of Montreal alone. He knows of this and that factory, but there are many others turning out their products in as great, if not greater, abundance, of which he is in total ignorance. If during the recent misgivings as to Canadian prosperity, alarmists had been able to visit such an exhibition of industrial resources and enterprise as the city of Montreal could display at any moment, less panicky talk would have been uttered. An object lesson would have been given that would have silenced many doubters. In an educational sense, therefore, an exposition is of great value, while from a business point of view there can be no doubt as to its benefits.

It is evident that the idea of an exhibition has secured strong hold upon business circles in Montreal, and it is only for the promoters to show the citizens generally that they are determined to carry the scheme through on broad lines, to obtain all the moral and material assistance that is required. We have no doubt that this assurance will be given to the city.

Not only has a local exhibition been mooted in Montreal, but an international one as well. From the one idea to the other is an easy stretch in discussion, but not so easy in realization. With adequate aid from the Dominion, Provincial and City Governments, and proper organization, we believe with the Assistant Commissioner of the Canadian Government Exhibition Commission, that there is nothing to prevent such an exposition in Montreal from being a national, as well as financial success. Montreal would make a splendid location for an international affair, not only so far as the Dominion is concerned, but in regard to Europe and the States. A successful exposition would be of lasting benefit to Canada, but a project of this kind is a mighty undertaking, and no chance must be incurred of the nation being discredited in any way. Before the support of the Dominion can be lent, a reasonable amount of assurance must be given that the project can be successfully organized and carried out.

Let the Montreal business men, therefore, show that they can make a success of a local exhibition, as we have no doubt that they can, and then will come the time for seriously considering the greater project.

MAY SOLICIT LIQUOR ORDERS.

A very interesting case was decided by Judge Choquet in Montreal last Wednesday, and it will be considered as a test case by grocers who conduct a mail order or canvassing business. F. X. Benoit, of Longueuil, was charged with having violated the license law by selling liquor in St. Lambert, which is a prohibition place. One of his clerks used to go round, solicit orders and deliver them. Mr. Cloran, representing the revenue, claimed that this clerk was nothing but a traveling salesman, but J. A. St. Julien, K.C., said he was nothing of the kind, simply a clerk paid by the week. Judge Choquet could not see any infringement of the law and declared that taking any other view would only mean restricting trade. He, therefore, dismissed the case.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST

6,000,000 Acres to be Sown in Wheat—Crop Prospects Splendid—Interest in the Application of Royal Commission's Findings—Cattle Market Lively.

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Winnipeg Correspondent.

Glorious is the only word that describes the weather of the past week for the purposes of seeding and starting a crop. ot even the champion farmer grumbler of the West, and there are some good ones, has had anything to say against conditions for the coming crop. As day succeeded day the weather has grown warmer, so that with the moisture in the soil, the ground has been like one huge forcing bed and the young wheat plants are not only shooting up but are stooling splendidly. Splendid progress has been made with the seeding of oats and already some barley is in the ground, though only in isolated patches.

It is generally conceded that 6,000,000 acres will be sown to wheat alone in the Canadian West this year and a very greatly increased acreage to oats.

The amount of the old crop left in the country is extremely small. The Ogilvie Milling Company this week issued a statement of what they consider the amount still in farmers' hands for sale and have placed it as low as 1,500,000 bushels and while men conversant with the situation declare that this is too small the most optimistic of them do not put it beyond 2,500,000. The receipts continue to dwindle from day to day and the market has gained in strength, culminating in a runaway market Saturday on which July wheat sold for $1.19⅛ and though the price afterwards broke it closed over two cents above the previous close.

It is a little difficult to see how this figure is to be maintained in view of the fact that the moment our wheat goes higher Old Country buyers cease to bid. The majority of them have pretty good stocks on hand and has been said before, will take the minimum of our wheat rather than pay the high price for it. It may be that before long they will come to our price. It was noticeable that one big milling firm felt they had to increase their stock this week and bought 75 000 bushels one morning. This is a house that generally calculates to have 250,000 of Canadian wheat either in store or in transit between the head of the lakes and Great Britain but in this particular instance they have allowed their stocks to dwindle to something like 80,000 bushels, hoping for a break in the market. Their representative bought aboua half and half, two and three northern and paid $1.10⅛ and $1.03⅛ respectively for it. He thought it high then but in view of today's (May 9) prices it was cheap. How many British millers there are in the same predicament will depend on the price of the balance of our crop.

Intense interest has been created here by the news from Ottawa that practically all the findings of the Royal Grain Commission are to be acceded to by the Government and become law. The announcement was only made Saturday morning and there has not been time yet for grain men to digest it and see how they will be affected by it. One of the things that will be hailed throughout the entire West with satisfaction is the intention of the Dominion Government to control terminals. For a long time it has been felt that this was absolutely necessary in the interests of the producers of wheat.

The fact that a sample market and order point for Winnipeg is to be advised is another most important matter, but on this there is great diversity of opinion. The farmers want a sample market and order point without mixing elevators, but that on the face of it is absurd, the one is a part of the other. Of course, the farmers' objection to mixing elevators is the danger there will be of skinning the grade, but by many who have gone into the matter it is held that there need be very little trouble of this kind, with the Canadian system of inspection. The wheat will all have to be inspected out of the mixing elevators and the only regulation that will be required is that when a mixing elevator has once put out cards for inspection they will have to go at whatever grade the inspector gives them, the owners of the elevator not having the privilege, as they have in Minneapolis of taking the cars into the elevator again and doctoring them up so as just to reach the grade and no more.

There is little doubt that the creation of an order point at Winnipeg will do much to stimulate the grain trade, and it should have the effect of inducing the erection of more mills here, but for this cheap power will be necessary.

One thing that will accrue out of making Winnipeg an order point is that if it is an order point for wheat it will be for barley also. This has been a much mooted question here for the past year. The Canada Malting Company have established a fine plant here, and it was their intention to double it. but when they found out they could not have cars of barley detained here long enough to buy on sample, they abandoned the idea of enlargement and began to consider moving to Fort William. Barley for malt must be bought on sample, the grade is no guide to the malster and in a season like the past, when there was so much frosted grain it was quite impossible for barley to be considered on sample at all. As barley for malting brings anywhere from 4 to 8 cents over feed barleys, according to the year, this is a most important matter to Western farmers, particularly as barley is an excellent crop for the purpose of eradicating the weeds with which too many farms have become infested, through excessive wheat-growing and careless cultivation. For a long time it was thought that Western barley was not good for malting but it has proved excellent and in anything like a good season the color is fine. The yield per acre is heavy and altogether it is a very profitable crop.

Anything that suggests cheaper fuel is always a live topic in Western Canada and the announcement that the Manitoba peat plant was already being rebuilt is of importance. This plant was opened for operation last fall and had been running about five days when it was burned down. It was supposed that the fire was of incendiary origin. Now the plant is being re-built and will be in operation very early in the fall, if not in the latter part of the summer. It is situated at Lac du Bonnet and near to immense deposits of natural peat. The capital in the company is all local and the machine that is used for compressing the peat is patented and has a capacity of 40 tons to the square inch. The factory will have a capacity of 100 tons per day. The peat produced is not only excellent for domestic purposes but can be used for smelting purposes also. The supply of the raw material is almost exhaustible and there is a ready market for anything in the shape of cheaper fuel. The peats are round and about three inches long and just about the density of hard coal.

The cattle market has been a very lively one all week and a large number of very fine steers have come forward, in fact, every fresh trainload shows a smaller percentage of undesirable stock.

Eastern dealers seem to have been giving our market a good deal of attention and during the week one very good train of range cattle was shipped through the yards here on its way to Boston for export. These cattle had been collected by a Chicago house. Local exporters, too, are sending forward some excellent stuff. One Thursday Gordon, Ironsides & Fares shipped a train of twelve cars of perhaps the finest export steers that have ever gone forward from this market. The prices paid for these ranged from 5c to 5⅛c, the bulk being sold at 5⅛ and in some cases at least the freight was assumed by the purchasers.

Hogs stand steadily at 6 cents for tops and have plenty of bidders for all lots coming.

QUEBEC MARKETS

Montreal, May 13.

POINTERS—

Fruits—Declined.

Beans—Advanced.

Vegetables—Declined.

Butter—Declined.

The great cargoes which ships are discharging of fruits from the Mediterranean and other lines from foreign countries have had their effect upon the local market, as several lines have dropped, and then approaching summer is also exerting an influence over the market as the countries which ship to our markets are producing a greater abundance as the season advances. Cable advices regarding the opening of the new crop Japan state a falling off of 5 per cent. in prices compared with those which were asked a year ago. This fact they attribute to financial difficulties which are shaking the flowery kingdom. Receipts of both eggs and butter have greatly increased since our last market report. Beans have gone up with a jump, which is attributed to the manipulation of the market by the western holders. Maple products are arriving in great abundance. This week presents no very alarming symptoms in its markets aside from the usual inevitable fluctuations of small magnitude.

SUGAR—Sugar is featureless, there being nothing of any consequence to remark. Demand is good and market steady.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—Vegetables are in good demand, also fruits, and the market remains unchanged since last report. The falling off in demand for canned fish has not been as large as was expected since the Lenten season closed.

TORONTO—Demand is reported somewhat brisker this week and lines of both fruit and vegetables are moving more satisfactorily. It is freely stated that many houses are still somewhat heavily stocked, the year's business having proved rather disappointing. Futures are being offered in some quarters at fixed and open prices, but interest seems to be rather closely centred in the old pack goods.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—
Sugar—Quiet.
Fish—Declined.
Beans—Advanced.
Soda Biscuits—Declined.

Toronto, May 14, 1908.

The wholesale markets continue dull again this week, with no ostensible cause except general trade conditions. Some say the retailers and consumers are feeling the stiffness of things even more than a couple of months ago. Others again are optimistic and claim that their business is ahead of last year.

The financial side of the question is none too favorable and collections are slightly harder to make.

The markets continue comparatively quiet in the matter of changes. Staple groceries, with the exception of beans, which are very stiff, are comparatively steady. The fruit and vegetable markets noted in detail elsewhere show considerable activity and the fish markets are notably easier.

SUGAR—The local market is quieter than it has been for several weeks. This has been influenced by conditions abroad which have shown perhaps an easier feeling in the general situation. Willett & Gray in their weekly review say of raws:

"The news from Cuba, which now controls the situation, has not been of sufficient importance to change the crop out-turn prospects.

"It is evident that for two weeks past the feeling has been rather of disappointment on the part of sellers that the advance was not continued, than of any actual decline in the market. Even the few nearby sugars, which must eventually meet the market, are still held at full-up prices in the expectation that they will be wanted. There is really no good reason for any important downward reaction if holders have the strength to wait.

"As mentioned last week, the question of supply and demand to September means further imports of European beet sugar. On this point our Prag (Austria) correspondent writes: 'Concerning the beet sugars suitable for America, we beg to inform you that after the budget in England having passed an increased demand for refined for the United Kingdom is to be expected, in which case the supply of beet held by Austrian refineries would not be free for sale.' This letter explains the cable recently received by us from the same correspondent, that almost the entire supply of American qualities in Austria (100,000 tons) is held by refiners there, only about 25,000 tons outside being free to purchase for America.

"This may prove a more important feature for higher prices later on than is now considered.

"Germany writes that we can have 200,000 tons beets, suitable for America, if willing to pay 13s. for it.

"Europe is more interested in the working out of the Cuba crop problem and the demand from America than in the size and progress of European beet crop or the influx of Russian crystals in September to replace the beet sugars of Germany and other countries which will be drawn to the United States.

"The failure this week of two big sugar refineries in Russia, Charitonenko & Sons and the Cherkassy Refining Co., may be the outcome of the recent large sales of Russian crystals at or near German raw beet prices, and may tend to clear the atmosphere somewhat by checking further apparently forced sales of Russian sugars.

"Our cable advices from Batavia report the commencement of the harvesting of the new Java crop, insuring the export of a fair amount of sugar during May.

"According to an official report received by us from Cuba, the long drought is broken, the rains which have fallen this week benefitting the next crop and permitting the planting of cane. Details which we give of the location of the centrals now grinding show that the greater number are in the eastern parts, where conditions have been rather more favorable than in other sections, and where shipments are made from the outports."

Private cables from London report a reduction in the English duty of about one-half, say to 1s 10d per cwt, equal to 40c per 100 pounds, which is presumed to apply to 98 degrees test sugar and refined on which the former rate was 4s 2d, equal to 91c per 100 pounds. This reduction should cause an increase of the consumption in the United Kingdom and improve the general situation sooner or later.

The world's visible supply is given by Willett & Gray as follows: "Total stock of Europe and America, 3,036,875 tons, against 3,441,775 tons last year at the same uneven dates. The decrease of stock is 404,900 tons, against a decrease of 385,337 tons last week. Total stocks and afloats together show a visible supply of 3,176,875 tons, against 3,551,775 tons last year, or a decrease of 374,900 tons."

TEAS — Local business continues quiet, a condition which has existed for a good many weeks. Reports from markets abroad still point to a maintenance or an advance on the present high prices. In their weekly circular just received, Gow, Wilson & Stanton, of London, say:

The Northern Indian crop is stated in Calcutta circulars to have closed 7¾ millions short of last year. With the further increase in the total taken outside the United Kingdom, the amount available for home consumption should not be far short of 19 to 20 millions less than in 1907, the heavier imports of China have to some extent discounted this shortage, but the position is an undoubtedly strong one. With much less tea remaining in growers' and importers' hands than was the case at this period of last year, it seems probable that prices may touch a higher level before the teas of the new crop arrive. Private advices state that the season will be late in opening, owing to severe drought and to exceptional heat experienced in the growing districts.

S. T. Nishimura, who is just now looking after business in Japan, cabled his office in Montreal on May 9th, regarding Japans, as follows:

In consequence of some financial disturbances the market opened for new season's tea at about 5 per cent. lower than last year. Crop is of good quality and the present operations are practically same as corresponding time last season.

COFFEE—Local houses report business as continuing good. The only change is a tendency to firmness on lower grades of Santos and Rios.

Willet & Gray give some interesting information in their review of the situation, as follows:

A cable report was received in this market yesterday from one of the large Santos exporters to the effect that most of the planters in the San Paulo districts had stopped picking coffee owing to the discovery that the beans were, to a large extent, unripe. Some time ago a report was received from an expert in Brazil showing that the flowerings were very deficient in the last days of August, none in September and afterwards only partly good flowerings in October and November, so that the question of the next crop was very uncertain and the result might show serious losses.

BISCUITS—Christie's declined all their lines of sodas last week. On bulk the decline is 1½ cents, or from 7 to 5½ cents. BEANS—The price is going up by jumps and it seems now that pretty nearly all the beans available in Ontario are bought up. $2 f.o.b., Chatham, was paid by American buyers for hand-picked goods this week, and there do not seem to be many available at this price. Inquiries have been received also from the Maritime Provinces.

FROM AWAY DOWN IN TEXAS.

Frank Menzie, sales manager of the F. F. Dalley Co., Hamilton, is down in Texas pushing the sales of "2 in 1." The company is pasting posters all over the State and Mr. Menzie, writing from Waco the other day said:

"Yesterday as I came out of the hotel in Marlin the first thing I saw was one of our bills, and I felt like sitting right down and having a little talk with it, as it sure looked good to me. Everyone down here has a good word for "2 in 1," and it is only a matter of time until I think we will double our business in this State. It goes without saying, that we have, at the present time, all the largest wholesale grocers in the State of Texas. They are very favorably impressed with our goods, and say they give entire satisfaction to customers."

MORE EARLY-CLOSING.

A note in these columns last week spoke of Davidson & Hay, the Toronto wholesale house, resuming early-closing. Several others of the Toronto houses are following the same plan, much to the delight of the office and warehouse staffs. Among those where the blinds come down at 5 p.m. this week were Warren Bros., Perkins-Ince and John Sloan & Co., and, of course, Davidson & Hay.

R. L. Innes, secretary-treasurer the Canadian Canners, of Hamilton, is at present making a tour of the West, presumably for business purposes. He will return about June 1st.

SOME USEFUL HINTS.

Keep complete stock records.

Don't make an arbitrary claim and threaten to "stop buying" if it is not allowed.

Select a source of supply where you can secure accuracy, completeness and just treatment.

Make quality the prime consideration, and do not compare prices without comparing quality.

Order in ample time to avoid running out of goods should there be a slight delay in transit.

File all price lists, catalogues and quotation sheets where they can be quickly referred to.

Patronize the traveling salesman as much as possible, and have confidence in his representations.

Answer all business communications promptly, and extend the same business courtesy in this respect to others that you exact from them.

Before writing a caustic letter of complaint to the maker, place yourself in his position and try to think how you would feel if you would receive such a letter.

Take advantage of all cash discounts and make your remittances whenever possible direct to the merchant in ample time to reach him before the expiration of the discount period.

Don't fail to properly introduce yourself when opening an account with a house you have never dealt with, especially if you have only recently started in business and have no established credit rating.

THE CANADIAN GROCER

10 Front St. E., Toronto.

A SPRING SEED WINDOW

A Tasty Display From Bracebridge—How one Retailer Disposed of a Stock of Soap.

The window shown in the engraving on this page is one which had a place a few weeks ago in the store of Hutchison Bros., one of the brightest grocery stores in Bracebridge. The window was dressed by D. T. Hodson, one of the partners who have recently taken over the store from Peter Hutchison, the late proprietor.

Mr. Hodson has entered into the spirit of the season and has evidently aimed to attract the farming trade as well as that of the ordinary citizen.

The window, with its foreground of bulk seeds of various kinds, and its background of package goods and cans of packets is well arranged and should have proved a good business-bringer. The addition of the sprigs of grain, the potted plants and green stuff was a happy idea which adds greatly to the general effect.

The window has one fault, however, it seems to us, which is a very common one in grocers' windows. There is too much in it. The effect would have been much more pleasing and the results probably proportionately greater if less material had been used and the articles given a little more room, presumably to grow in.

A SOAP DISPLAY.

Not long since I had what to me seemed far less artistic than some other displays I had had. It was anything but pretty. It was, however, a catchy window.

I had a large pile of a certain brand of soap in my cellar which I decided to unload quickly. Some of this soap I put into the window, which measures 60x40 inches, in the form of a two-storey brick house. The soap was laid as a bricklayer would lay his bricks, flatwise, binding them together. On the first floor I left two openings on each of the two sides of the house for windows, while on the front I left a door in the centre and a window on each side of it. On the second floor I left two windows on each side of the house and three on the front. The rear of the house was left open, not being seen from the street. A second floor from the sides of orange boxes was put in for the purpose of binding the two walls, while the pointed roof was also made from the same material, covered with red crepe paper and crowned with two bars of soap for a chimney. Window shades of red crepe paper and lace curtains from confectionery boxes and the building was finished.

A walk from the "front gate" to the front door and around both sides of the house to the rear was left bare, but the rest of the floor of the window was covered with cork from Malaga grapes. The "yard" was decorated with plants from my wife's window garden. On the front of the house I put a card of proportionate size reading: "For Sale, apply at 125 N. Front St., while overhead I hung a card reading: "This property for sale, price 5 cents a brick." In the evening I lit up the house with a small oil lamp.

The last of that pile of soap is on the shelf now, which fact removes all doubt as to whether the display was a success. C. A. Yeager in the Grocery World.

A SEED WINDOW FROM BRACEBRIDGE, ONT.

STAGNANT ENGLISH CHEESE MARKET.

Commercial Agent Gives Light on the Situation.

P. B. MacNamara, Canadian Commercial Agent in Manchester, writing under date of April 15, gives some interesting information regarding the conditions of the English cheese markets. He says:

"The cheese market for the past few weeks has been very disappointing to holders on this side, trade having remained in an almost stagnant condition since the beginning of the year, and so holders of September cheese, bought some time ago, would like very much to be able to see some of their money back again. This is more than anything the result of the New Zealand influx. This colony has shipped a good quantity into London, and it is finding its way all over the United Kingdom. But for this district it does not take so well as it is rather too stiff and does not show enough "meat" to suit the Manchester district. If, however, the New Zealand makers catered for this market by making the class of goods saleable here, there is no doubt it would have a very serious effect upon the Canadians, coming as they do at a time when Canadians have ceased being made. Importers will, therefore, have to take this new competition for the British markets into serious consideration, if the shipments continue in anything like the quantity they have been doing during the past season.

"Reports from Canada state that the season there is backward, and while full prices are being asked for fodder cheese, they are absolutely of no use at the time of writing. Prices will have to show a material reduction if the trade is to be any good to anybody. Prices are at a very awkward level indeed, and with many in the trade selling at 7d. retail, there is very little profit left for the grocer."

THOS. UPTON SERIOUSLY ILL.

Thomas Upton, president of the T. Upton Co., of Hamilton, is lying rather seriously ill just now in the City Hospital. A sudden and acute attack of appendicitis necessitated an operation which was performed on May 5th. The operation proved rather serious, but his many friends will be pleased to know that he is now on a fair way to recovery.

"Men Who Sell Things"

A Reconstruction of the Question of Salesmanship—New Dignity Revealed in the Money-getting Side of Business—The Commercial Ambassador, the Man Who Sells—Business Philosophy for Those Interested in the New Science of Merchandizing.

From a book written by Walter D. Moody, Chicago, on "Men Who Sell Things"—Serial rights for Canada purchased by the MacLean Publi hing Co.

CHAPTER I.

The salesman regularly supplies the electric spark which keeps the commercial engine going.

This book is an attempt to specify the qualifications necessary to the making of a successful salesman, and the reasons for so many failures in the greatest profession on earth, the profession of salesmanship.

I wish to write, not of the doctrine of "luck," "chance," and "good fortune," but of the doctrine of effort and result; to proclaim that highest form of twentieth-century salesmanship which brings success, not to the indolent, the improvident, and the dreamer, but to the striving, the intelligent, and the busy man.

The commonplace salesman who is content with a mediocre degree of success, who lacks either desire or power to labor for the best that his profession contains, is little worthy of the name "salesman."

Work of the type most needed in the field of salesmanship is the successful carrying out of that which reflects the most credit upon the profession.

Little that is worth having is secured in this world except by unceasing toil. The salesman must be glad to do a salesman's work.

"Few battles are ever finally won. There are always positions to be held and new ones to be conquered."

The New Era.

The enormous pressure of new business and the constant tightening of competition seem to crush out the hope and energy of a large proportion of salesmen. The great problem of modern business progress to the salesman is how to deal with this tendency—how to prevent being crushed out and shoved to one side in the mad commercial whirl for conquest.

The well-rounded salesman who has husbanded his strength for the onrush will find methods to reserve his talent and energy from decay. The preservation will come, not through boasting or through the acquisition of new territory and accounts, nor through the magnification of past achievements, but through the natural law of infinite patience, constant study of new conditions, clearer adaptation of means to ends, infinite devotion to instant duty, and absolute fidelity to his house as it is and yet may be.

There can be no more accepted time than the present as the arena of this action. The success of the efficient salesman will be greater in proportion to the number of those who are yet unaware of the changing times and the growing feeling that professional salesmanship must supersede the old school of unorganized ways and methods.

The crowding of the field of salesmanship, and the exhaustion of old-time resources in the art of selling goods, have forced a revolution in this special branch of industry. The pressure of business intensified, manufacturers and merchants who employ large forces of traveling salesmen are looking for a new degree of greatness in salesmanship based on scientific methods.

More zealous care is needed that no talent may be neglected, that employers may not constantly be obliged to seek outside forces with which to replenish their depleted sales ranks.

The successful salesman will not lose his character. His proud claim of leadership on the sales force of his house will not pass into the hands of others if he recognizes the fact that his first duty to himself, and his highest duty to his house, is to have his ship constantly cleared for the action of the present strenuous day, and to be prepared for the coming era of unparallelled commercial activity.

To the twentieth-century salesman it is of the utmost moment to look at coming conditions and make sure the defence of his selling methods against the creeping foe lurking behind commonplace ways—the foe that only newer, better, and quicker methods can halt in his conquest of the indolent, the overanxious, the old-timer and all other types of negative salesmen that go to make up the vast crowd of the improvident and unwise.

Nine-tenths for Knowledge.

A salesman of experience realizes that ideas—practical methods of selling goods—are of the greatest value, and he also knows that it pays him to search for them. It takes brains to influence brains. Someone has said: "For every ten dollars that a high-salaried man draws, he gets nine dollars for what he knows and one dollar for what he does."

The same old way of doing things cannot be successfully employed month after month and year after year. The salesman must be modern—up-to-date—as much as the men of other professions. The physician or lawyer finds that to compete successfully he is compelled to read, read, read, all the time, in order that he may learn of advancement in treatments or procedures.

"To the man who fails belong the excuses." The more good ideas, the better the basis for good work. The best of salesmen fail at times to sell to certain buyers, without being able to give a reason for falling down. The methods employed successfully for many years seem to count for nothing. In such cases no doubt, a very little thing, a mere oversight, perchance, has caused the trouble. To locate the "nigger in the wood-stack" in one's methods means much. The only hope lies in putting the plumb-line of the experience of others beside one's own.

Every new idea aids in the salesman's ultimate triumph—adds a sound piece of timber to the structure of his final success.

Failure does not come through making mistakes, but in refusing to learn by mistakes how to avoid them.

Experience is a good teacher, but it is a great thing to be able to learn from the experience of others, for we cannot all have the same experiences or the same view of similar experiences. There are many pathways to success, but the road of the individual's experience is narrow and rugged.

The old-time "minstrel" traveling man is a thing of the past, and with him have gone the days of getting business by means of circus tricks, chicanery, and sleight-of-hand performances in tact. True knowledge properly applied is the power behind the throne winning the big business of to-day.

Knowledge Power Behind the Throne.

That vast army of business-getters known as traveling salesmen have attained a dignity fitted to promote the interests of their houses in the field, realizing that scientific methods have placed their vocation in the list of professions.

The real purpose, character, calibre, and life of the commercial traveler have too long been depreciated by the general public. He may be suffering in this respect for the sins of his forefathers on the road, but things have changed. No one has a right to look upon any phase or sphere of American manhood as subject matter for a joke book, and the traveling salesman is becoming very tired, and justly so, of being regarded as a five-ring circus, or a wild beast going about seeking whom he may devour.

True, the law of "the survival of the fittest" has caused business on the road to become a contest of wits; but it is also true that the traveling salesman has elevated himself and his work by force of character and dint of his own energies.

Many writers on matters pertaining to salesmanship have not yet discovered the real character and work of road salesmen. We are looking to a higher and better sphere of usefulness in the business and social world than much of the stuff written to portray real road life would indicate.

"John Henry," "It's Up to You," and other modern compilations are side issues compared to the vernacular of the road as served up by some writers in object-lesson style to attract the attention of salesmen as a guise for a course in salesmanship.

Educated Enthusiasm Wanted.

The salesman who regards his work from a serious, high-grade standpoint is constantly seeking instruction of a meritorious nature—new ways and methods. He does not want stories of road life veneered in the coarsest slang, all tending to assign to him a serio-comic role.

What the world of salesmanship wants is educated enthusiasm. The purest of king's English will secure an audience and hold attention for the salesman anywhere, while slang and short cuts of speech often excite distrust and offend the ear of the truly refined. The field is ripe for educated salesmen—the sort that refuse to give their customers credit for knowing more about their business than they know themselves—salesmen who can go out and put up a selling talk that is earnest, logical and clean-cut from the time they strike one town until the train carries them to the next with their pockets full of orders.

The question of handling a customer in making a sale is naturally a local issue to some extent, as merchants in widely separated localities conduct their business according to the usages of their particular sections.

Handling Customers.

It is also true that dealers in small towns require different tactics from the large city merchant; but no matter what the conditions may be, the old saying, "Business is business," holds true pretty much the world over.

With the arrival of interurban electric cars and rural free deliveries and telephones and many other improvements in rural districts, a pace of progression has set in, even in the most out-of-the-way village, that is rapidly changing the ideas and methods of the country merchant. With the farmer buying automobiles, and the prosperous small town business man sending his sons off to college, it is high time for the traveling salesman to begin to realize that a new era is dawning for him also.

It is no longer necessary in making a town to begin the day before by planning some new and wonderful strategy that will insure the selling of a bill to this or that customer; no need of a "Samantha Allen" visit, with a dance at the village hall in the evening with your favorite customer's friends and family.

Tact? Why, yes, that is necessary, of course. You can no more interest the man whose store has just been robbed, or whose head salesman has just left to take a position with his worst competitor now than you could twenty years ago. But you can approach the merchant the country over, small town or large, under ordinary circumstances, and gain and hold his attention with the right kind of selling talk, all on business and delivered straight from the shoulder. Even the "before-breakfast grouch" will listen to you if there is a resolute ring in your voice and a good-natured sparkle in your eye.

Earnestness of Purpose.

One of the most successful business men of my acquaintance started life with a shoestring, and worked his way up from stock-boy to salesman, from salesman to buyer, from buyer to the head of the greatest house in the world in his line, besides holding large outside responsibilities.

The most prominent feature of his character was his remarkable earnestness of purpose. There was not a salesman in the long list of those in his employ who could begin to approach him in selling talk, and he had some of the best men in the business. As buyer, before he became an employer, it is said of him that he could take prospective customers into his office for fifteen minutes, from among the largest and hardest merchants to sell to in the country, and turn them out with an immediate and enthusiastic desire to go through the great establishment and select goods.

He had no time to bandy idle words and rarely indulged in useless sentences or light remarks. He believed buyers came into his store bent on business, and he despatched them with courtesy, backed up by arguments, every word of which put new ideas into his customers' minds and helped to swell the accounts on the right side of his ledgers.

Knowledge of Men.

Basing my calculations on actual experience with a large number of salesmen of all classes, sorts and conditions, I assert without any hesitation that the really big men, those who have made the profession worth while, are the ones who have employed the highest degree of science in their work—not an acquired science, perhaps, but a natural, established, and classified knowledge of men and things relating to the daily routine of their work:

"Brain stuff and soul stuff."

I am not the one to gainsay that an acquired science of professional salesmanship will be generally recognized by employers of large numbers of salesmen within the next five or ten years, in fact, an exact science of successful salesmanship has already been formulated, and is being taught with success; it fits the needs of our profession, just as the science of law or of materia medica fits the requirements of those respective professions, and is receiving widespread attention on the part of thinking salesmen and employers of salesmen.

Failures may be due to lack of natural ability, or adaptability, but they are more often due to lack of intelligent application.

There are many industrious salesmen who have always applied their energies in commonplace ways—for instance, with territories that could easily be made to yield much larger returns from their labor—who have little idea of the great values that may be produced on a given territory subject to high culture in salesmanship.

Don't Chase Rainbows.

There is a natural tendency, when big sales are made by the really successful men, to suppose that they are peculiar to some distant or especially favored location, that the golden harvest, the good things, are away off somewhere else, in the other fellow's territory. Those failing to see advantages at home who are disposed to seek the gold at the rainbow's end, may well ponder the story of the old Persian who sold his little hillside farm, wandered far over land and sea in a vain search for diamonds, and finally died a pauper in a strange land; while the stranger watering his flock at the stream on the little farm found a peculiar pebble glittering in the brook, which proved to be the first of a wealth of gems such as the old man had gone to seek.

All salesmen start with an equal chance, but many are soon distanced in the race. They are content with a steady, plodding, uniform way of doing things, and while they are methodical and obtain good results, those who win figure out some way of getting better results and getting them more easily. They take chances on doing things in other than the prescribed way, often finding the new way the better. Few have the energy to break out and get away into the wild fields of effort worth while.

We get into a certain circular routine, and we go around and around, week in and week out, year in and year out, not realizing that life's really important work is the doing of something new.

The opportunities of the present are vastly superior to the opportunities of the last two or three decades. The needs of our great commercial machine multiply with its growth, and he is the fortunate salesman who has learned the immense value of educated enthusiasm, for to him is open the pathway to high salaried positions that appear as dreams of Aladdin's Cave to his less ambitious brother.

Must Dig Deep to Win.

True, the mountain seems high, but he who finds the right road will surely get to the top. Every mountain seems insurmountable at first, but little by little the distance is laid behind, and at last, half wondering whether it is a mountain after all, we find ourselves at the top. But to find the easy ascent to the golden mountain of salesmanship, the salesman must first dig, dig, dig, deep in the fields of knowledge of his profession.

Successful salesmanship carries with it large salaries—often of from five to fifteen thousand dollars per annum. "Oh! but such salaries are not for me," wails the timorous one. Listen! The salesman who lies down at the beginning with, "Oh, I never had any luck. By the time I get there, I'll find someone else already there ahead of me," would better stay out of the salesmanship business—or any other kind of business, for that matter. He is of little faith, a pessimist, a failure at heart to begin with, and wouldn't hold a position long with any house at a thousand dollars per year, to say nothing of five.

To the bright salesman it is not a difficult task to map out a promising line of action for his career on the road from among the failures and middleweights, and a persevering hustle will do the rest.

A shrewd, perceptive faculty, together with a convincing perseverance, is one of the main essentials to success in promoting any enterprise.

Away with easy-going, rollicking ways and debauching influences! Away with small salaries, "water tank" towns and "one night stands!" Let there be more lucrative fields and broader knowledge! That is the twentieth-century salesman's slogan, and that he is manfully living up to his battle-cry, the payrolls of large institutions all over this broad land will attest.

The Way to the Retailer.

¶ Advertisements should not, any more than individuals obtrude.

¶ Obtrusion is more likely to meet with rebuff than cordial reception.

¶ The advertisement in a trade newspaper never obtrudes, because the medium which carries it does not obtrude.

¶ Every trade newspaper that leaves the press reaches a buyer or probable buyer.

¶ Retail merchants buy trade newspapers for the advertisements they carry as well as for the reading matter which they contain.

¶ They look to the advertising columns of the trade newspaper for hints on what to buy, and where to buy, just as much as they look to the reading columns for market information, trade news, and business-getting ideas.

¶ What, then, is the conclusion of the whole matter? This and nothing else: Those who wish to maintain their standing in the trade or those who wish to improve their standing in the trade should continuously use the advertising columns of a good trade newspaper.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, May 13.—Within the last few days the arrivals of new butter have increased wonderfully, but notwithstanding this extra impetus, the Board of Trade reports show a deplorable falling off as compared with last year's records. The week ending May 9, 1908, shows receipts of 1,032 packages, as against 3,334 packages for the corresponding week of the previous season. These figures show a falling off of 2,302 packages, which certainly is a wide margin for a decrease. The season's receipts up to the present are 1,727 packages, as against 4,941 packages the preceding season, showing a deficit of 3,214 packages. These figures obviously illustrate the remarkable depreciation in receipts, as compared with last year. To-day's reports show a break in price in the new butter arriving. The dealers are taking care of the new make for the local trade and will continue to do so until such a time as the price gets to a proper level for storing and exporting. The receipts of fresh roll butter are very large and consequently the price has gone down to 22 and 23 cents.

At the present there is no old dairy or creamery on this market. With the advent of fine weather, and other natural conditions being favorable, we have made a good enough start to presage a better season this year than last, although reports from the country say that the cows wintered badly, which will, unfortunately, act as a serious handicap.

The cheese trade exhibits somewhat the same symptoms as the butter market, although we are glad to note the relationship between deficits of this year, as compared with last, are not so marked.

The Board of Trade returns for week ending May 9, 1908, give the receipts as 16,388 boxes, whilst for the corresponding period of the previous year, the receipts were 19,867 boxes, thereby showing a falling off of 3,479 boxes, which does not display anything like the difference in the same periods in the corresponding periods in butter. For the season ending May 8, 1908, the total receipts were 21,004 boxes, against 30,961 boxes for the same time the previous year. Cheese remains about the same in price, due, undoubtedly, to the small make, which is not sufficient to disturb the equilibrium of the market so far. There is very little export demand and local dealers are taking care of all the supplies which come their way. The local demand is sufficient to prevent any accumulations of stock. The various local boards in Ontario state that offerings are not large. Reports from Brockville say that the total with them reached 1,291 boxes, of which 303 were white and 988 colored. Winchester reports 72 colored and 110 white registered and sold on the board, while Cowansville reports the sale of 80 boxes of cheese. Of course, nothing definite about the future can be said, but some gratification may be derived from the fact that some condition existing in the country has given a wonderful impetus to the business and it may be hoped that this is a fair augury for the success of the coming season.

New cheese is quoted 12¼c to 12½c.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

Toronto, May 13.

The situation among Canadian packers is no more encouraging this week. The British market for some days has been in a weak condition, on a basis somewhat lower than at last reports and as a result of this offers little inducement to Canadian shippers.

The Danes continue to flood the market with bacon, the killings last week going up again to 44,000. They are certainly sustaining their record this spring and in doing so are a remarkable example to the Canadian farmer.

The American market has been rather dull and shipments to the British market last week were somewhat lighter than usual. Conditions prevalent across the border are summarized in the following weekly review in the New York Journal of Commerce:

"There has been very little interest in hog products the past week and very little change in prices, though they firmed up towards the close with grain, and the extreme scarcity and high price of corn, which will prevent much decline in hog products until feedstuffs are cheaper. But the packers have not depressed prices of products although receipts of hogs have been a little larger and prices a little lower. There has been some demand from the shorts to cover because of the corn situation, but there has been no activity during the week, the provision market being a sideshow for wheat and corn, and oats, as the shorts have been covering the whole list most of the week in Chicago. There is nothing new in the hog supply situation except that the average weights are running a little lighter in the East as well as in the West and heavy hogs are becoming more scarce. Exporters have been out of the market, except for a little lard, towards the close. But other goods have been extremely dull for the home trade as well, as consumption is still falling off, and four big jobbers in New York admit that their distributive trade has fallen off a quarter to a third from normal. The packers have not forced prices, demand being only of a hand-to-mouth character, and concessions would not stimulate it."

Canadian packers are paying $5.75 f.o.b. country points this week, which is 10 to 15 cents below prices offered last week. Farmers' offerings are moderate but seem large enough to supply the present demand.

MAY PURCHASE CANADIAN PLANT

Negotiations in Progress Between American Can Company, New York, and Acme Can Works, Montreal.

Negotiations are under way between the Acme Can Works, Montreal, and the American Can Company, New York, which will in all probability result in the purchase of the Canadian plant by the American company.

Geoge W. Weber, of the American Can Company, New York, has been in Montreal all this week in the interests of his firm and he has been in constant communication with the present proprietors of the Acme Can Works, Jas. B. Campbell and Wm. Pratt.

Should negotiations go through and everything is about settled, the business will be carried on under the style of the American Can Company. This firm will spend a considerable sum of money enlarging the plant and installing new and modern machinery for the manufacture of every conceivable variety of cans, so that when the building is fully equipped to do business on a larger scale it will be one of the finest plants of its kind. It will be remembered that the Acme Can Works spent several thousand dollars a couple of years ago in making the factory up-to-date.

There will be no change in the management of the company. Messrs. Campbell and Pratt continuing as at present.

Mr. Weber stated that if it was found necessary the American Can Company would build factories in other parts of Canada as they intended looking for trade all over the country, and would operate as many factories as would be necessary, in their opinion, to take care of it. They run fifty-one factories in the United States, while their chief offices in that country are located in New York, Baltimore, Chicago and San Francisco.

The American Can Company has been looking over the ground in Canada since the beginning of the year with a view to establishing a branch in this country.

F. J. Lowe, of the J. H. Wethey Co., St. Catharines, has just returned from a trip to Montreal. While there he arranged with Rose & LaFlamme to look after Laurel Brand canned goods. Rose & LaFlamme have handled Wethey's mince meat for twenty years and should make a success of the new line.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

No New Features to Report—No Demand for Manitoba Flour—Cereal Markets Dull.

Matters are rather quiet in both flour and cereal markets this week and there is little new to record.

Demand is very light for flour. The present prices are above an export basis so nothing can be sent abroad and local demand also is very light. These features are noticeable to such a degree that some of the mills have begun to curtail their output. Prices are unchanged.

The cereal markets are feeling the effect of the season's dullness and only a fair amount of business is passing.

MONTREAL.

TORONTO.

FLOUR—The market remains about the same as at last report, though a slightly easier feeling was in evidence at the beginning of the week and has continued. The local trade is feeling the effects of the reaction in the Chicago and Winnipeg markets. As a result both Manitoba and Ontario wheat are quoted lower and buyers are hesitating about purchasing with the markets in an apparently uncertain state. There seems to be an opinion that the recent advances were rather larger than the market justified in view of the favorable crop outlook.

There is little demand for Manitoba flour and some mills are shortening their output. There is no export demand of any consequence. Local firms cabled the British markets on Monday but the price asked seems to be above an export basis. Prices are unchanged.

NEW FLOUR MILL FOR HAMILTON

Brantford Grain Merchants Will Develop Business in the Ambitious City.

A deal involving the big half of a hundred thousand dollars has just been closed by W. B. Wood, David B. Wood, T. L. Wood and A. J. Wood, of Brantford. Although conducting a separate milling and grain business in Brantford, these gentlemen have joined hands in the purchase of the largest and best flour milling business in the city of Hamilton. The property was owned by the well-known firm of Lake & Bailey and is situated in the very heart of the city. The new owners take possession in a few weeks. Messrs. Wood intended to build a new flour mill in the city of Toronto, but could not get a proper title to the site selected for the plant. David B. Wood will make his home permanently in Hamilton and become the active manager of the big mill. D. B. Wood is a practical miller of long experience and first-class business ability, and will certainly make the business a success. Cheap water power, abundance of farmers' wheat, first-class railway facilities and a large local demand for flour and feed in a growing city were the features which led the Brantford men to Hamilton. With these advantages the business may be doubled in the near future.

GRAPE CULTURE IN B.C.

Industry Promises to be Extensively Developed This Year.

From present appearances the culture of grapes in the Kettle Valley surrounding Grand Forks, British Columbia will be very extensively prosecuted this spring. It was stated recently that at least 3,000 grape vines will be planted out here during the next few weeks and that that number will be more than doubled next fall, as that is the proper time for the planting of the vines.

A. D. Morrison, one of the local authorities on grape culture, says that at his private residence in West Grand Forks he has successfully grown grapes and that one vine he has which was just four years of age last year, yielded 75 pounds of grapes. Mr. Morrison states that grape vines four years of age grown in this valley should yield at least 50 pounds of fruit to the vine. These vines if planted ten feet apart would make 175 vines to the acre, which at 50 pounds to the vine would be 8,750 pounds, which, allowing eight cents per pound for the grapes, would make just $700 for the grapes produced on one acre of land after four years. Owing to the great amount of sunshine in this valley this section is especially adapted to the culture of this most prolific of fruits.—Victoria Times.

NOVA SCOTIA TRADE NEWS

Record Lobster Shipments to American Markets, Fish Markets Otherwise Quiet —Large Molasses Cargoes for Newfoundland—Some Local Changes.

(Special Correspondence to The Canadian Grocer)

Halifax, N.S., May 11.

A slight decline in the price of butter and an advance in the price of eggs are the outstanding features of the grocery markets this week. A drop in butter was looked for, but the rise in the price of eggs came as a complete surprise to the trade. The butter market is still fluctuating. Early last week creamery dropped one cent per pound, but the new price did not last long, for on Wednesday it was back at the old figures. The receipts of dairy butter are improving, but not in sufficient quantity to afford any very great relief to the market. The jobbers are, however, living in hopes that an early break will come and that the prices will ease off. The receipts of eggs this week have been very limited and as a result prices have taken an upward tendency. Twenty cents per dozen is the price asked, an advance of three cents. About the middle of the week the stocks held by many of the jobbers had been cleared up, and as is usual at such times, the demand was brisk. What has caused the decreased receipts is not explained, as the weather holds good and the hens should all be laying. So far as known, very few eggs are being exported. The new price is not expected to hold very long.

The fruit business is very good and most of the jobbers are now kept pretty busy. Prices are high in most lines. Jamaica oranges have been advanced about fifty cents per barrel and valencias show a similar increase. Floridas are about done. Jamaicas are quoted at $6, California navels at $3 to $3.50 for 96's and valencias from $5 to $6. Lemons are quoted at $2.75 for 300's, and bananas at $2.50. Pineapples are selling from 18 to 25 cents each and tomatoes per crate of six boxes at $3.25. Cucumbers are ten cents each. American cabbage is now on the market and the price is high. Jobbers say that there is not much money in handling it, but they have to keep it for their customers. Bermuda onions are now coming in and the quality is good.

Sugar is steady at present, the refiners not meeting the recent advance of twenty cents in the raw article.

Canned goods are selling freely, with the price steady. There is a growing demand for jelly powders and the jobbers report large sales of this class of goods. There is not very much doing in dried fruits at present. Fairly good stocks are held here.

There is a good demand for vegetables and the stocks on hand here are in very good condition, better than is usual at this season. In Prince Edward Island potatoes are selling at 35 cents per bushel and turnips at 20 cents.

The fresh fish markets are quiet at present, and the catches are small, owing to the unfavorable weather for carrying on operations. Halibut is much scarcer than usual, but lobsters are in good supply. Large shipments continue to be made to the American markets. The record shipment of the season was made to Boston the other week, when the steamer Boston, from Yarmouth, took 150,000 live lobsters, the consignment being valued at $30,000. This gives some idea of the value of the lobster industry in Nova Scotia and the returns that the fishermen receive for their labor. The stocks of salt mackerel in this province have been cleaned up. There is a shortage in the American market, and the demand is good. No fresh mackerel have been taken in Nova Scotia as yet, but the time for the fish to strike in is near at hand. Some good catches of herring are being made on the Cape Breton coast.

William Kane, who has been managing J. L. Archibald & Son's grocery on Spring Garden Road, has resigned his position. Edmund Clarke, brother of the present proprietor, is now in charge of the establishment.

A new grocery store has been opened on the corner of Great George and Euston Streets, Charlottetown, P.E.I., by McLeod & Johnston.

Record cargoes of molasses arrived at St. John's, Newfoundland, this week, four large vessels coming in from Barbadoes. The barque Victor had 329 puncheons and 300 barrels; the schooner John Flewellyn 344 puncheons, 31 tierces and 33 barrels, the barque Aureola a full cargo and the barque Lavinia landed 551 puncheons, 58 hogsheads and 100 barrels.

OUR HONEY IN GERMAN BEER.

Opportunity for Larger Development of Markets Abroad.

Opportunities for the development of the Canadian export honey trade are pointed out in the following paragraph taken from a letter from J. B. Jackson, Canadian Trade Commissioner in Leeds:

"There appears to be no reason why Canadian honey should not enjoy a larger sale on the British market than it does at the present time. From such countries as Jamaica and Australia, considerable quantities of this product arrive; in fact, only recently a large consignment of 444 barrels weighing close upon 40 tons was imported into this district from Chili. The largest honey buyers in this country are undoubtedly those firms engaged in the manufacture of patent medicines, sweetmeats and confectionery goods. At the same time, however, it should also be of interest to those dealers in Canada who may be inclined to open up the trade to know that large quantities of honey are used in the lager beer industry in Germany. Indeed, manufacturers in that country are said to be keen competitors with local buyers for the supplies that reach English ports. When imported in anything like large quantities, this commodity is generally sent in barrels holding from 1½ to 6cwts. Canadian exporters, however, would do well to remember that as there are so many sources of supply, it is necessary to always forward samples when submitting prices to English buyers."

In a further paragraph Mr. Jackson gives some hints which should be of considerable service to Canadian firms desirous of developing an export business. He says:

"It would appear that some exporters in Canada have not yet thoroughly appreciated the importance of sending samples of their wares to prospective buyers on this side before they can successfully establish trade relations with them. Instances could be given where some shippers have been working under the impression that trade can at once be opened up simply by quoting f.o.b. or c.i.f. prices for shipments, anticipating that the importer would reply with instructions to have the goods sent forward. Seldom is it the case, however, that an importer will trouble to reply to correspondence without a sample from which he can be enabled to form an opinion as to the value of the goods offered.

"It must also be remembered that competition with other sources of supply is becoming keener every month, especially with those countries which have the advantage of close proximity and frequent steamship sailings to English ports. This fact is appreciated to its full value by foreign shippers and if Canadian exporters are to hold their own in the increasingly keen competition the importance of the sample no less than that of the price of the goods will at once be realized as an indispensable precedent to business."

A CHANCE FOR FRUIT EXPORTERS

English Agencies Anxious to Handle Canadian Canned Goods.

J. B. Jackson, Canadian Trade Commissioner at Leeds, Eng., in the last report of the Department of Trade and Commerce, gives some information which might prove of value to Canadian exporters of canned fruit, as follows:

"Some influential firms of produce distributors in this district have recently put themselves into communication with this office with a view to securing the buying or selling agency of Canadian firms exporting canned fruit. What is principally required in this line is canned apples put up in tins holding one gallon, but, at the same time, it may be said that almost any kind of canned fruit could, with little difficulty, secure a ready sale in supplying the demands of the restaurants and other trades."

F. Savage, recently with Bovril, Limited, Montreal, has accepted a position with the Eze Company, Toronto and will cover the territory between Montreal and Windsor.

Markets Active Under Good Demand— Oranges Advancing—Canadian Green Stuff Coming in More Freely—Easier Tendency in Fish.

The warm weather and sunshine of the past few days is causing a rather more brisk condition in these lines.

In the fruit markets the feature is the stiffening in price of naval oranges, which seem to be climbing to a $4 basis. Pineapples are coming on the market in quantity and are in good demand. Strawberries also are arriving freely and in good quality.

The imported hot-house green stuff is easing off as warm weather comes on and the demand for imported goods is lighter as the Canadian supply is growing wider. Celery is practically off the market. Other lines are fairly steady.

The fish markets display an easier tendency with large arrivals of fresh stock.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—Almeria grapes are the only product in this market which has changed materially. They were quoted at $5 last week, maximum price, while to-day the maximum price quoted is $6 per keg. Cape Cod and Nova Scotia cranberries are now off the market entirely. Bananas are in fair demand at firmer prices. Supplies are plentiful. The opening of navigation has given a spurt to all lines.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—The sunshine of the past few days has brought about a notable activity in the local market. The feature this week is the high prices of oranges. Stocks of navels are light and dealers predict that a $4 basis will be reached shortly. Messina Ovals are showing well, both in quality and weight. Bananas are steady and strawberries are coming in freely in good quality. Pineapples are also being delivered freely and the demand for these goods is excellent, as the preserving season for them is approaching.

VEGETABLES—Several lines are firmer this week under the influence of brisker demand. Old potatoes are up 5 to 10 cents. Egyptian onions are firmer and imported cabbage is also advanced. Celery is practically done, only cold storage stuff being left on the market and imported spinach is also becoming scarce. Cucumbers are easier. The arrivals of Southern green stuff are easing off a little as the Canadian goods appear.

SECOND FRUIT BOAT.

The steamship Bellona, from points on the Mediterranean, carrying a cargo of 35,000 cases of oranged and lemons, also a mixed cargo of other Mediterranean products, including marble and wine chiefly, is now in Montreal.

OPENING AFTER FIRE.

Jos. Patterson, whose grocery at 19 Howard St., Toronto, was badly gutted by fire about three months ago, has since been busy rebuilding and remodelling the premises. He opened again this week with a brand new outfit of fixtures and a general new stock, and has issued an invitation to his old customers to visit the new store.

B.C. ASSOCIATION PROGRESSING.

The British Columbia Retail Merchants' Association continues to make rapid progress. A successful organization meeting was held last week in Nanaimo, B.C., and a substantial membership enrolled for that district. Secretary William J. Butt is being assisted in his organization work by Wilfrid Ledoux, who has had considerable experience in that line of work in the Prairie Provinces. Mr. Ledoux has been a retail merchant himself and can talk from experience of the benefits of organization.

J. R. Stewart, general merchant, Gelert, Ont., has assigned.

BRANTFORD CORRESPONDENCE.

May 11.—There has been some difficulty here recently regarding the purchase of supplies on the market by local grocers and butchers at an early hour on market days. In the past there has been a by-law covering the matter but the city council some time ago amended it so that merchants or dealers could purchase at any hour. There is now an agitation on the part of some citizens to have the restriction renewed.

* * *

Fred. M. Smith has purchased the grocery business of G. W. Grantham at 120 Dalhousie St.

Brantford has a co-operative grocery concern. An incorporated company has been organized and a business established on Dalhousie St. George Keen is the president. A good line of stock is carried and is very attractively displayed. Those connected with the company claim the co-operative plan will prove popular and successful here.

* * *

The local grocers are already planning for the annual excursion of grocers and butchers to the Falls. This year, so far as Brantford is concerned, the trip will be a bigger feature than ever. In former years the excursions have just about cleared out the town.

* * *

The continued financial stringency has its effect on the trade here. In this regard Brantford is peculiarly situated as there are so many factory employes who have to be carried while out of work. There are 5,000 working men in the city and as several of the factories are idle and others running with short hands on part time it becomes necessary for the grocers to give extended credit. The industrial outlook is better, however, and it is expected that there will be plenty of work here in the near future. At present the grocers report that collections are very hard.

RECORD NEW BRUNSWICK BUSINESS

Winter Port Trade for Season 1907-8 Just Closed Well Above Any Previous Year—New I.C.R. Flour Shed—Charter for New Jobbing Firm.

Special Correspondence to The Canadian Grocer.

St. John, N.B., May 11.

Business has been very good lately. A lot of spring orders have been sent out, a good deal of freight being shipped up the St, John river since navigation opened. Seed shipments have been very heavy.

Canned goods are in good demand now and several lots of Bermuda and Egyptian onions that have been received are meeting with a ready sale. Molasses is firmer and another advance of a cent is looked for this week.

Beans advanced 10c to 15c a bushel last week; timothy seed is quoted 10c to 20c higher per hundred pounds; prunes are being held at ¼c advance, and evaporated apples are firmer.

The new flour shed built by the I.C.R. at York Point is now ready for occupation and commencing this week all flour will be stored there in future. The new building has a capacity of 7,000 barrels and will greatly facilitate the business of the local jobbers. The former shed was much too small for the requirements and delayed the dealers considerably.

The St. John Board of Trade is endeavoring to arouse a more general interest on the part of business men, in the work of the board. It is now proposed to make a special effort to increase the membership during the present year. What is termed a "Booster Committee" has been formed and its members are diligently canvassing the merchants and professional men to have their names added to the roll. The committee is as follows: J. N. Harvey, T. H. Estabrooks, H. B. Schofield, S. W. McMackin, W. H. Nase, J. Hunter White, R. T. Hayes, H. Colby Smith, Alex. Fowler, E. M. Sipprell, W. S. Fisher and F. A. Dykeman. It is felt that the young business men of the city should take a more active part in the work of the board, and the present movement is designed to secure the active interest and co-operation of as many as possible of these persons. Some 50 additional members have already been secured.

The winterport season of 1907-08 was brought to a close last week. The exports in this period were the largest since the winterport business commenced in 1895-6. The largest previous valuation was in 1905-6, when the exports totalled $23,615,001. Last year there was a falling off in the value, the total being $20,120,430. This year, despite the gloomy reports of financial depression, one hundred and ten steamers took away cargoes valued at $23,685,-160, which is an increase of $3,564,730 over last year and $70,159 over 1905-6. The shipments of grain amounted to 6,377,974 bushels, which is nearly double the amount sent forward last year. The live stock shipments were considerably less than last year, in fact, about half, but the amount of package freight was correspondingly greater.

Charles H. McDonald, wholesale tea merchant, who has been carrying on business on Water Street for the past two years, has moved to No. 55 Dock Street, the premises heretofore occupied by J. J. McGaffigan. The new quarters are larger and more convenient for handling the steadily growing business.

H. C. Creighton, H. W. Cole, Margaret C. Cole and William Smith, of St. John, and George D. Grimmer, of St. Andrew's, are applying for incorporation as H. W. Cole, Ltd., the object being to purchase and carry on the wholesale grocery business of Bowman & Cole. The capital is to be $40,000.

Talking to the Point

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS get right down to the point at issue. If you want something, say so in a few well-chosen words. Readers like that sort of straight-from-the-shoulder-talk, and that is the reason why condensed ads are so productive of the best kind of results.

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS are always noticed. They are read by wide-awake, intelligent grocers, who are on the look-out for favorable opportunities to fill their requirements.

GROCERY FACTS.

Something About the Goods Handed Over the Counter Every Day.

SELF-RAISING FLOUR.

Often prepared by merely adding baking powder to ordinary flour. Many of them contain only a very small proportion of tartaric acid and too much bicarbonate of soda. The acids and carbonates should be mixed in the proportions required to neutralize each other.

By mixing 2 ounces of tartaric acid and 4 ounces of bicarbonate of soda with every 14 pounds of well-dried flour of a good quality a superior self-raising flour is easily produced. Three ounces of cream of tartar may be used instead of the tartaric acid if more convenient. A little ground rice may also be added to advantage.

SOUCHONG TEAS.

These are general names for three or four assortments of fine black teas.

The Chinese term for them is Sian chung, signifying "little plant," or "little sprouts."

The smallest are called Pha-ho ; the largest, Toy-chong ; and a medium size, Pow-chong.

Souchongs rank next to Pekoes, and are very strong, but lacking the delicate flavor of the latter, although generally scented with the flowers of the Tasmanium sambic and Gardenia florida.

First Souchong is a grade better than second Souchong, although growing on the same shoot.

SPAGHETTI.

A smaller or finer sort of "paste" made in Naples, from the same flour and in the same way as macaroni, vermicelli, etc., but in long straight lines.

The words in Italian literally signify "little threads," hence it is of a much thinner and more fibry appearance than vermicelli and appears to be coming very much into fashion.

Keeping Books By Machinery

There was a time when the only way to harvest grain was by means of a hand sickle. Then came the cradle, and finally the self-binder.

Some firms still stick to the old-fashioned way of keeping their books; and this in spite of the fact that the works automatically and like a piece of machinery and is as much cheaper and better as is the self-binder and thresher better than the sickle and flail. Here is how it works:

If a man wants credit for $10.00 and you think he is good for it, give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book, and have him sign the receipt or note form in front of book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00. No trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on, until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass-books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best. For sale by the jobbing trade everywhere.

Another Store-keeper Sued for Damages

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH IN CAKES

& SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH IN TINS

Dangerous stove polishes continue to get store-keepers into trouble. The daily papers of Detroit, early this month, report Mrs. A. D. ——— is seeking to recover in the courts $15,000 from Mr. C. G. ——— who sold her some inflammable, liquid stove polish that exploded and severely burned her face and arms.

Wise store-keepers will keep out of trouble by handling only the stove polishes which are safe in the hands of the user. RISING SUN Stove Polish and SUN PASTE Stove Polish are made by reliable processes and are absolutely free from dangers of fire or explosion. PUSH THEM.

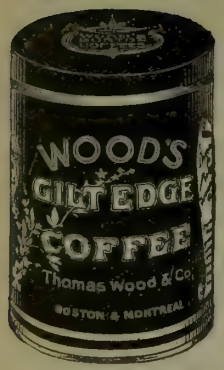
The Slogan of the Future



ESTABLISHED 1879

An expert in trade progress makes this bold statement:

"Each year it becomes more and more necessary for the retailer to confine his attention to goods of known value."

And on the firm and lasting foundation of merit and worth

WOOD'S COFFEES

stand forth. Their "known value" has been demonstrated for more than a quarter of a century.

The Grocer who "confines his attention" to them reaps his reward in profitable trade.

To Maintain and Increase Permanent Trade

We handle only articles of known worth—the tried and tested kind—articles whose intrinsic merit has raised them far above the commonplace. We do this because we like to feel that the folks who buy them are, year after year, adding permanent trade to the business of the grocer who sells the goods. From our own selfish point of view we believe the principle applies with telling force.

We know of No Safer or Surer Way

There is a good living profit on every article we are privileged to represent—each of its kind is, to our way of thinking, a splendid example of honorable manufacture. And because of that important fact we advertise their strong features fearlessly, over our own name, in the Canadian Grocer and elsewhere, every week of the year.

The Editor of The Canadian Grocer,
Toronto

Dear Sir:—

The rumour seems to prevail in some quarters that on account of the rapid growth of our trade in Canada we are on the lookout for a factory site for the purpose of manufacturing on this side.

We wish to emphatically deny this rumour.

For 109 years our goods have been manufactured in that part of England which has now become so famous as the home of our products and we recently enlarged our works to allow for the expansion of our trade on this side. It is our intention to continue to supply the Canadian demand direct from our English factories and you may, therefore, assure the trade that our goods will continue to be MADE and BOTTLED in England and that no alteration will be made in that high grade of pure goods for which our name is a guarantee.

Yours very truly,

WARNING!

Crescent BM&Co. Brand TRADE MARK.

SODA-CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.

Keeping Books By Machinery

There was a time when the only way to harvest grain was by means of a hand sickle. Then came the cradle, and finally the self-binder.

Some firms still stick to the old-fashioned way of keeping their books; and this in spite of the fact that the works automatically and like a piece of machinery and is as much cheaper and better as is the self-binder and thresher better than the sickle and flail. Here is how it works:

If a man wants credit for $10.00 and you think he is good for it, give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book, and have him sign the receipt or note form in front of book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00. No trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on, until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass-books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best. For sale by the jobbing trade everywhere.

The Canadian Grocer and Its Publishers

With this issue is presented the Annual Spring and Export Number of The Canadian Grocer. A particular feature in regard to this number is that its circulation is not confined to its regular list of subscribers. Representing, as it does, the foodstuffs trade in Canada, from the products of which Canadian exports are to a great extent composed, the importance of spreading the news and conditions of the trade world-wide is fully recognized, and the circulation is considerably enlarged. Particular attention is paid in this matter to countries where Canada's products are now largely going and where business is being built up. Selected lists are secured from well informed local representatives of the best dealers in these countries, and copies of the paper go to them with the hope of interesting them in Canadian products and trade. This fact is particularly applicable to Great Britain, the West Indies, Australia, the United States, France, Switzerland and the British Colonies.

Not only is this issue of the paper largely circulated among these dealers abroad, but a very large number of copies go to the grocers in Canada who are not yet readers of the paper. An attempt is made to cover every grocer worth while in the Canadian trade, from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

As representing the grocery and foodstuffs trade of Canada, the paper attempts to be worthy of that trade. After studying the best English and United States grocery papers, we believe we can say without hesitation that The Grocer stands among the best, and yet we are not satisfied. We want to make a better paper, both for our readers' and our own satisfaction. In this desire you can help us. We have several things in mind to improve the paper which will be carried out just as soon as we can afford and arrange to do so. Some of these are coming shortly. There are other things, however, which may have occurred to you, and which we may not have thought of, which could be readily arranged. While we do claim to be authorities in the newspaper business, we do not profess to know all about the grocery business and are very anxious to receive suggestions. We may not be able to do what you suggest or would like, but will try mighty hard, and if we can't, we'll let you know the reason why.

While The Grocer's news service covers the grocery trade of all provinces in Canada pretty fairly, there are still a number of towns and districts in which we have no representatives. We would be glad to hear from anyone in the trade in these places who would undertake to send us the news of the district in, say, a monthly letter, or each week, if the district justifies it.

* * *

Newspapers that are successful are so because they print that which pleases their readers. We have always aimed at this, and that we have not been amiss in our aim is evident from the wide circulation and strong influence that characterize MacLean's trade newspapers. To attain this position, the best newspaper men and women have been secured and large sums of money have been spent and are being spent. To-day our editorial staff is unsurpassed in efficiency and numbers by any publishing house in Canada. Twenty editors and reporters are regularly attached to the newspapers and magazines published by us, while of specialists and correspondents in Canada, Great Britain and France there are 133. Each paper has its own staff of editors, correspondents and specialists.

Newspapers cannot live on their editorial staff alone any more than man can live on bread alone. There must be the co-operation of efficient advertising and subscription staffs as well. It is when these pull together and pull together well that the newspaper makes headway. On the staff of the MacLean Publishing Co. the aggregate number of men employed in either selling, advertising or soliciting subscriptions is 56. This enables us to systematically cover every part of the country. No other newspaper publishing firm in Canada has as large a selling staff as this, and we doubt whether it is equalled by any other on the continent. We do not say this boastingly, but merely to show our readers the extent of our organization.

That the business men of Canada have confidence in the future of the country is evidenced by the advertising they are doing in MacLean's Trade Newspapers. New business for January was the largest by 26 per cent. of any previous month in the history of the company, and the increase for the first three months promises to be equally gratifying. These increases are significant, in view of the marked falling off in the advertisements carried by many worthy newspapers and magazines in Canada and the United States. Profits, unfortunately, do not show any such gain. The increase in publication costs prevent such a desired consummation. But we have faith in the future, and faith is the substance of things hoped for.

It is significant that the growth in circulation has kept pace with that in advertising. From all parts of the country there has been a steady inflow of new subscribers since the new year opened, while old subscribers are renewing in a way that indicates that they are well pleased with our papers. This is the proof of the pudding.

But we are never satisfied. The more circulation we have the more we want. We have recently added several new men to our subscription canvassing staff. This will enable us to simultaneously work every Province in the Dominion, so that every probable subscriber who has come into existence since the country was covered last autumn will be waited upon before the end of the year by a trained solicitor, and no other publishing house in Canada has ever carried on such an extensive subscription campaign through trained personal canvassers.

Art as an adjunct to advertising has become a recognized fact. Art increases the effectiveness of advertising. Three or four years ago the MacLean Publishing Company established a staff of expert ad.-writers whose services were placed at the disposal of advertisers free of charge. The results in the way of increased attractiveness of advertisements have been so gratifying that we have now created an art department for the purpose of further augmenting the effectiveness of the advertising carried by the nine trade newspapers and magazines published by us. The chief of the art department has done some of the most effective art advertising work in Canada, and we are looking for big things.

A Review of Canadian Exports

THE PAST, THE PRESENT, AND POSSIBILITIES OF FUTURE DEVELOPMENT.

"Canada, the land of promise"; "The realm of wheat and gold"; "The world's breadbasket." These are a few significant titles attached to this richly-endowed portion of the Western Hemisphere by those who have spoken more or less seriously of the country's present and of its prospects.

The world recognizes the magnificence of Canada's resources. Stories are being told, and most of them are true, all over both hemispheres, of the possibilities of this country. The eyes of the nations are turned to Canada. But what the world is waiting for is to see how these possibilities will be taken advantage of.

As a thermometer of prosperity and development the exports of a country are accepted as a pretty fair index. And from this standpoint, Canada, for a comparatively new country, will rank among the leaders. A review of the facts and figures presented herewith will allow the formation of a pretty correct idea as to what Canada's export trade has been, its present conditions and what the future will bring forth.

25 Years of Expansion.

The exports of Canada during the past 25 years show a surprising record of expansion. In 1883 the total exports of merchandise from Canada were $84,285,707; while in 1906 (the last Government fiscal year which ended on June 30) they had reached a total of $235,483,956. Of these the exports to Great Britain jumped from $39,538,067 in 1883, to $127,456,465 in 1906; while the exports to the United States increased from $36,096,501 in 1883, to $83,546,306 in 1906; the business with Great Britain being proportionately much greater than that with the United States. The following table will show how these increases are made up:

	1883		1906.
	G. B.	U. S.	G. B.	U. S.
Agricultural products	$ 9,474,740	$11,989,280	$42,305,048	$ 5,779,964
Animals and their produce	13,158,194	6,567,588	57,758,417	7,259,329
Fisheries	2,337,072	3,186,218	6,139,577	4,880,407
Forest products	13,027,337	9,916,040	12,498,738	23,085,040
Manufactures	1,211,189	1,603,274	7,233,232	9,652,328
Minerals	309,794	2,332,051	1,475,839	32,869,004

The above table shows the enormous increase during the past 25 years in exports to Britain of produce of animals and the field. The exports to all other countries increased from $8,651,139 in 1883 to $24,481,185 in 1906.

Last year (1907) there was a falling off, compared with the previous year, the total being $226,512,063. The output of the Canadian farm during 1907 was less bountiful than in former years, and below the normal, owing to unfavorable climatic conditions, especially in the Northwest, where the wheat yield was reduced in quantity and inferior in quality, due to late maturity and frosts. This condition of affairs may have temporarily checked expansion, but no severe or prolonged recession of trade is likely to occur. That this is so may be judged from the Government's report of exports, including coin and bullion, for the fiscal year ended March 31, last, which were valued at $246,960,000, an increase of $7,346,000 in a year. This is a remarkable increase, when we take into consideration the crop failure of last year.

Present Year Beginning Well.

The trade with Great Britain during April of this year shows encouraging increases. Wheat exports increased in quantity fifty per cent. over the corresponding month last year, while the value of this wheat increased sixty-three per cent. Flour exports, however, have shown a large contraction, but it is still considerably above the export level. Cheese exports are nearly four times greater than during April, last year, and there are signs of recovery in the butter trade. Provisions and dairy produce generally are showing an encouraging revival.

The following table gives some export figures for April, compared with the previous month, and with the corresponding month last year:

	April, 1908.	March, 1908.	April, 1907.
Cattle	£ 46,819	£ 82,682	£ 92,318
Wheat, cwt.	184,567	233,527	112,695
Meal and flour, cwts.	47,687	79,412	96,865
Peas, cwts.	305	8,984	3,024
Bacon, cwts.	131,984	169,935	183,320
Hams, cwts.	34,942	43,287	25,558
Butter, cwts.	60	2,032	.....
Cheese, cwts.	140,435	140,468	36,865
Horses	600	.....	.....
Sheep and lambs	.....	1,180	.....
	£587,399	£761,507	£550,845

Exports Principally Agricultural Products.

Canada, of course, is an agricultural country, and, naturally, her exports are largely agricultural, grains, especially wheat, oats and barley, and flour, are the heaviest lines, with apples, cattle and sheep, bacon, hams and canned meats, hay, and leather and paper close up. These are exported principally to Great Britain. Timber, agricultural implements, drugs and chemicals, manufactured articles of iron and wood, and copper and nickel ore, also figure largely. These, however, do not go so extensively to Great Britain, but rather to the United States and foreign countries. Great Britain and the United States are our best customers, but a yearly-increasing trade is being done with the British West Indies, Cuba, New Zealand, Newfoundland, Argentine, France and Germany; and Australia and Belgium, though not increasing their buying of Canadian goods, are still splendid customers. Japan, China and the Far East, also, might be considered, as the possibilities for trade look very bright.

Development of West Indian Trade.

One of the brightest features is the development of trade with the British West Indies. Despite the fact that Canada has no reciprocal arrangement with the West Indies our trade with the islands is rapidly increasing, and the steamers going out from Eastern Canadian ports are carrying larger and larger cargoes of farm produce. A great deal of fish, too, is being taken. In fact, our fish exports are almost wholly sent to the West Indies, the United States and Brazil. These encouraging signs are a fair indication of what might be done under reciprocity if Canada obtained a preference on farm products in the different islands and in British Guiana. Recently it was found necessary to send a special steamer with a full load of Canadian products to Bermuda, and no doubt a market for Canadian manufactures of various kinds, as well as for farm produce, could be built up if closer relations were established.

Flour is one of the lines especially called for in the West Indies, and Canadian millers have found that this will be a great market in future. There are no mills there, and flour must be imported. Labor is cheap enough, but the fact that there is no demand for the by-products—bran and shorts—would militate against the conducting of a milling industry on the islands.

Cuba Takes Her Share.

Cuba, too, is a pretty good buyer of Canadian goods. For the ten months ending January 31, last, Cuba took goods valued at $1,115,089.

An interesting point is contained in the table of exports during these ten months. The total exports were valued at $245,965,226. Of these the British Empire took $130,382,054; the remaining $115,583,173 being divided among all other countries. Great Britain took $119,442,281, the colonies $20,939,773, the United States $100,242,170, and all other countries $15,341,002.

What the Government is Doing.

To build up our export trade the Dominion Government has a chain of trade commissioners and commercial agents in Australia, New Zealand, British West Indies, China, Japan, Corea, France, Norway, Mexico, Newfoundland and South Africa, besides centres in Great Britain whose business it is to keep Canadian exporters and importers in touch with trade conditions and trade matters generally in the various countries in which they act as Canadian Government representatives. The Canadian immigration agents in Belgium, France and Great Britain also supply the Department of Trade and Commerce at Ottawa with information which may be useful to the Canadian trade. A monthly report is issued by the department, supplemented with a weekly bulletin, containing this information, but in regard to this report and bulletin service we are still behind the daily consular reports published by the British and United States Governments. Doubtless our service will be improved in time and Canada, too, will have this daily trade bulletin.

Another aid in the promotion of Canadian trade is the Exhibition Branch of the Dominion Agricultural Department, which was formed after the close of the Pan-American Exhibition at Buffalo in 1901. Both at Chicago and at Buffalo the Dominion and the various provincial governments conducted their own exhibits. Now the Dominion Government undertakes to look after all exhibits and thus prevents wasteful duplication and expense and during the past few years this branch has conducted the Canadian exhibit in Osaka (Japan), St. Louis, Milan (Italy), Glasgow, Dublin, Wolverhampton, Edinburgh and those in New Zealand and Belgium. At present this branch is looking after the Canadian exhibit at the Anglo-French Exposition in London and trying to bring Canadian goods to the attention of prospective customers.

F. C. T. O'HARA.
Recently Appointed Deputy Minister of the Canadian Trade and Commerce Department.

There is an "Extension of Markets" Department, at Ottawa, whose business it is to compile lists of exporters and their products and supply these lists through commercial agents abroad, to traders and probable buyers in other countries.

Another aid to the Canadian export trade is the cold storage stations, the refrigerator car service and cold storage compartment service on steamers inaugurated several years ago for the forwarding of perishable goods, especially fruit and dairy produce, to the British market. This has enabled the small shipper to enlarge his field of operations to some extent, allowing him to enter a foreign market and thus compete for business at home and abroad.

As regards the cold storage system the ammonia process of cool air circulating through pipes has proven itself to be better than the ice refrigerator scheme; but as to the success of the sending forward of fresh fruit and vegetables to the British market by this or any plan, there appears to be some doubt. Tomatoes, especially, are said to have suffered somewhat in transit. These goods and all Canadian goods, sent to Britain, are going to the world's greatest market and are meeting in competition the choicest products of the world. Too much care cannot be taken in preparing and forwarding our merchandise.

During the early part of the last century and while the country was being settled, the principal product of Canada was timber, and this was exported largely to Europe. The timber trade is not now so all-important as it once was and what exports there are go largely to the United States.

Filling the World's Breadbasket.

With the filling-up of the country the wheat fields gradually extended and as the golden grain took the place of the forest, wheat soon occupied the primary position. At first the United States was a good customer, but with the abrogation of reciprocity in 1866 and later the passing of the McKinley tariff in 1890, we had to look for other markets for our wheat and Great Britain's demands began to be catered to. The opening of the West by the C.P.R. made possible the cultivation of immense tracts of prairie suitable for the growing of grains, and so Canada entered the lists as a world's wheat producer.

Meeting New Conditions.

The older parts of the country now began mixed farming, and as Great Britain was already taking Canadian cheese there was an opportunity also to add beef and bacon, poultry, eggs, butter and fruit. The British market presented new conditions and new demands, and Canadians had to adjust themselves to this work. As an instance of this, Mr. C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, cites the case of barley, which, up to the time of the passing of the McKinley tariff, was an article of export to the United States. "British maltsters use enormous quantities of barley," he says, "but we simply could not change the consignment from Oswego or Buffalo to Liverpool. Canadian barley did not suit the British malting process; it was not of the right kind." So the new conditions had to be met and the new buyer had to be given what he wanted. This applies to all our exports. The wishes of the buyer must be respected and the conditions of the market met, so far as possible.

In 1902 the barley exported to Britain was valued at only $172,028. In 1906 it rose to $426,917; and last year to $710,445. Ever since 1890 this grain has shown an advance every year.

Increase in Wheat Exports.

About two years ago J. J. Hill, the American railway magnate, made a speech in which he tried to frighten Minnesota wheat growers and flour millers by telling them that in ten years Canada might monopolize the British market with her wheat and flour. Whether or not he intended to frighten the millers, Canada's export of wheat alone to Britain has shown a rapid and steady increase. In 1902 wheat was sent, valued at $18,024,257, and in 1907 $41,264,798 worth, as against $30,234,611 in 1906; and the prospect is for larger export figures this year. Littl Belgium also bought of our greatest export last year to the value of $995,785.

Bran valued at $228,084 was sent to the English market in 1907, as compared with $155,298 in 1906. This by-product of the flour mill is steadily and rapidly rising in export to Great Britain and the United States, also, is a good customer, taking $185 667 worth last year.

Flour Rising Steadily.

Flour has steadily risen in export value from $2,290,056 in 1902, when 648,199 barrels went forward, to 1,022,926 barrels valued at $4,325,549 last year. Newfoundland in 1907 took from us 246,214 barrels of flour valued at $1,178,954; the British West Indies 67,885 barrels, worth $288,412 and the United States 26 696 barrels, valued at $109,231.

Canadian wheat and flour meet with competition from all the world in the British market, but it speaks highly for the Canadian product when the export values come up so remarkably. The chief competition comes from Argentina, the United States, Russia and Southern Europe, but the high standard of the Canadian grains makes an increasing demand. The Canadian miller and exporter should keep up the quality of his goods and make his special brands called for, as there is no business to be done nor money to be made in competition with the cheaper grades

Canadian Miller's Opportunity.

On the flour situatron some of the smaller Canadian mills are afraid of the competition on the British market and cite the increased number of mills which have gone up all over Scotland and England, but those familiar with the milling business on both sides of the water say Canadians have the better of the argument. There may be some very large buildings and plants in the Old Country, but these only mean an increased outlay on capital account which can be made good in one way only —a high price for the output of the mill. Then there is the matter of offal —bran and shorts. There is a much better market here for these by-products than in the Old Land, although we do send an increasing amount of these to the Old Country every year. Of course labor must be considered, but the number of hands employed in a mill seem to cut but a sorry item. The machinery is either bought in America or is built in Britain from American patents. All in all, the balance is in the Canadian millers' favor.

Argentine up to a few days ago had quite a call on the British market, owing to its cheapness and the partial failure of the Canadian and United States crops last year, but a change has developed. Argentine is running short, and Canadian wheat and flour are again in demand. The proportion of gluten is much greater in our Northern wheat then in the grades coming from our South American competitor, and so better bread is obtained from it. At present there is a call in Britain for Ontario patent, which is a good pastry flour and there is a growing demand for rolled oats and breakfast foods of all kinds. Canada might, and should, do much more exporting in the various lines of grains.

The Railways Participating.

Canadian railways are encouraging the export grain trade by making it easier to carry goods to the seaboard The C.P.R. is building a large elevator on Georgian Bay and constructing a new straight rail line therefrom to connect with Montreal. The G.T.R. is putting up two elevators, one at the head of the lakes and the other on Georgian Bay, and the Canadian Northern is working for the completion of its line to tidewater at Quebec. Added to these we may expect in the not distant future, a railway in the West to Fort Churchill, on Hudson's Bay.

Canadian Shipping Ports.

An interesting point arises here as to the importance of our Canadian shipping ports. A correspondent in St. John, writing this week, says: "The past season (1907-8) saw the largest winter port business in the history of this port. The previous best year was 1895-6, when exports totalling $23,615,001 were sent out, while during the past season we shipped exports valued at $23,685 160. The shipment of grain amounted to 6,377,974 bushels, nearly double the amount sent out the previous year. Live stock shipments the past season decreased to only half the amount sent out in 1906-7, but the amount of package freight was one-half greater than the previous year.

Montreal is our principal shipping port, and the following table shows the position held by that city as regards exports last year compared with former years:

Year.	Vessels.	Freight tonnage.
1903	802	1,890,904
1904	796	1,856,697
1905	833	1,940,056
1906	820	1,973,223
1907	740	1,924,475

A slight decrease is shown in outward freight last year as compared with the previous year. This is accounted for by the fact that live stock, butter, cheese and other export lines, owing to the unfavorable weather conditions prevailing last year, were not offered so freely as usual. Only 96,977 head of cattle went out, compared with 128,160 in 1906; sheep exports were 11,585, compared with 10,791, and 174 horses compared with 641 in 1906. Grain shipments amounted to about 32,000,000 bushels, the largest on record. This year, owing to the high freight rate on grain between Buffalo and New York an increased shipping business is expected in this commodity at Montreal.

Butter and Cheese Trade.

Our export trade in butter and cheese with Great Britain fell off very largely last year, the decrease being somewhere in the neighborhood of 30 per cent., but fortunately this was not due to keen competition in the English market so much as to the fact that we did not have butter and cheese to offer. Demand in Canada with the increasing immigration, is growing so rapidly that the producers, having a much smaller output last year found themselves only able to supply the home demand. There can be no doubt but that as soon as Canada can provide her own market with ample supplies, and have some left over, then will she be able to throw down the gauntlet to New Zealand and the other colonies in the British markets. The general conditions in the British trade in these products last year were much the same in many respects

Now that Canada must awaken to the competition in the English markets of New Zealand and Australian products, which have passed the experimental stage and are now assured factors in the British situation, we have to consider also the debut of a new competitor in the markets across the seas. This new entry last season was Siberia, and some have seen cause for a grave reflection in this event. At the present moment, having the necessary natural assets, it only remains in Siberia for a greater civilization to assimilate these qualifications and evolve from the process proper facilities for placing their products on sale throughout the world.

Up to the present, owing to the primitive methods which they employ, they have not been regarded very seriously, as their butter brings a lower figure in London than the make of other countries.

Much has been said about the utility of silos where fodder can be stored during the winter that will greatly augment the yield of milk and also be cheaper than feeding the cows on hay It is regrettable that the high price of hay and feed led so many farmers to slaughter their cows both in the autumns of 1906 and 1907. Such action on the part of the farmers precludes the possibility of very rapid growth of the industry.

PICKING APPLES FOR EXPORT IN A CANADIAN ORCHARD.

Present Conditions.

The butter and cheese markets of Great Britain are at present stationary and no change is noted since the butter scarcity of two months ago. Then butter sold as high as 36 cents a pound. Just now Danish and other foreign butters can be bought in London for 24 cents, some four cents cheaper than English butter. The Britisher is unable to provide an article of uniform quality, which gives Danish, Canadian Irish New Zealand and Australian butter a chance throughout England and Scotland.

Canadian export butter in Britain showed a serious shrinkage last year—about $1,000,000, compared with $5,459,300 in 1902, which rose irregularly to $6,802,003 in 1906. In fact, it was the smallest showing since 1895.

With butter there is always the element of chance present. With cheese it is different. During the canned meat scare in Britain a great run was made on cheese, with beneficial results to the Canadian exporter, for a taste was created for Canada's product and now a number of people ask for it in preference to the Old Country make The weather conditions in England and on the continent generally since the beginning of the year have been distinctly against anything like a normal season of cheese-making in Europe this year. An English provision journal says of Canadian cheese: "The Canadian product has got the good opinion of the market here. Its quality is recognized to be more and more uniform as the years pass. It is pretty well agreed that there is little difference in the real value between any summer and autumn make now, and buyers know they are getting on to a good article when they buy Canadian cheese, whether it be June or September, July or August."

London retains its position as the chief market for Canadian cheese, with Liverpool, Bristol, Glasgow, Leith and Manchester following.

Cheese exports to Britain which had increased from $19,620,239 in 1902 to $24,300,908 in 1906, last year dropped to $22,001,332.

Egg Trade Fell Off.

In the egg trade during the past year somewhat the same conditions have prevailed as in the butter and cheese situation, which has not made it the brightest of years for this business. The keepers of hens in many cases, owing to the lofty prices of feed, have thought it wise to kill them off. There was considerable talk about the prospects of trade with Great Britain during the past season, but our prices were too high. Therefore, the exporters found no material inspiration in the British markets.

Changing Conditions.

A remarkable change has come over the egg trade of Canada during the past seven or eight years. Ten years ago English buyers came to Canada in the Spring and contracted for large shipments, probably 80,000 to 100,000 cases in the fall. At that time eggs for pickling could be obtained for 9 or 10 cents a dozen, while to-day from 14 to 17 cents has to be paid, the home demand and curtailed production being responsible for the increased price. The result is that egg exports have greatly declined and England now gets, besides the Irish and Danish article, eggs from Southern and Eastern Europe.

In 1902 Canada sent Great Britain $1,691,024 worth, while in 1906 our eggs sent to England were valued at $448,463 and last year at only $270,567.

Poultry Business Increasing.

Dressed poultry exports to Britain totalled $101,808 last year, an increase of $20,000 over the preceding year. Though not so high as in 1902, when Canada exported poultry valued at $216,503, the amount sent to the English market is increasing yearly, despite the fact that a strong home demand has arisen within the past few years. Live poultry valued at $68,276, was exported in 1907 to the United States.

Could Develop Meat Trade.

Although at present one of Canada's most important exports, the live and dressed meat trade, could be considerably developed. For one thing, the embargo on our cattle compelling them to be killed within ten days of their arrival on British soil works injuriously against Canadian trade and should be lifted, for the animals at the time of slaughtering are not in satisfactory condition, owing to the long sea voyage they have just undergone. We may reasonably attribute the falling off in cattle exports last year to the unfavorable weather conditions which prevailed all over the American continent the greater part of last summer causing drought and scarcity of feed.

Great Britain took Canadian live cattle over one year old valued at $8,382,786 last year, compared with $9,742,588 in 1902 and $11,044,248 in 1906; and live sheep valued at $266,019, compared with $430 055 in 1902 and $244,053 in 1906. The United States was a close second in sheep last year, taking $228,184 worth.

Bacon Trade Declining.

In 1903 Canada appeared to have reached its high-water mark in the export of bacon, that year's figures being $15,429,122. Since then the exports have declined yearly, last year's total being $9,907,734. Beef, too, has declined since 1902, when we exported $395,294 worth. Last year the figures were only $71,935, but even that total is $30 000 greater than in 1906.

Exports of ham have been see-sawing from $237,306 in 1902 to $343,370 in 1907, the highest export values being $444,617 in 1903. In fact the year 1903 was Canada's best year in the dead meat export trade. There is, however, an active demand for Canadian hams and bacon in South Africa, where they have an excellent reputation.

Some Strong Opposition.

The British market for hog products requires a lot of study and careful watching. Denmark is a strong competitor of Canada in this line of meat and has the advantage of closer proximity to the market. It takes two weeks after killing to place Canadian goods on the London market whereas, but two days are required for the Danish articles, which, consequently, are put on sale in a milder and fresher condition, and probably are more palatable to the English taste. There is this to be said, however, that the Canadian products are better cured and can be more easily kept if necessary.

When the London market is overstocked a telegram to the Danish packers will suspend killing until a demand again exists. This scheme could not very well work in Canada. Two weeks' goods are already on the way by the time the order is received, and if there is a continued glut on the English market it is the Canadian exporter who loses. Then although both Canada and Denmark are agricultural countries, the community-of-interests idea seems to be working more harmoniously in the latter country. The farmer and raiser of hogs knows he has a profitable line of work and is aided and helped by the packer, and the farmer and packer are both aided by the government.

A Record in Mutton.

Canadian mutton, which seemed to be going under in competition with Argentine, New Zealand and Australian meat last year took a brace and established a record, Canadian exports to Britain being valued at $40,488. The Southern countries above mentioned have first-class refrigerator services and are able to lay down mutton on the English market in an almost fresh condition, thu giving them a good hold on the British buyer. All praise is due the Canadian exporter when he is able to increase his sales in the face of this strong competition.

Canned Meats Decreasing.

Canned tongues, which had been increasing in value up to 1905, when Canada's exports jumped to $3,525,270, have as suddenly declined to $1,349,880 in 1906, and $135,844 in 1907. This extraordinary decline is, no doubt, due to the effect of the campaign carried on during the beef trust arraignment in the United States, and due, too, to the articles which appeared in the public press during the past couple of years This also applies pretty generally to all canned meats.

Enormous Fish Shipments.

Of export fish a most important line is dry salted codfish, which goes in large quantities to Brazil and South American countries; to Cuba and the West Indies, and the United States and Great Britain. Brazil alone last year took $708,206 worth, while the British West Indies hold the record at $735,941.

The United States took $239,253 worth of pickled mackerel, and $144,984 in fresh and frozen herring. The West Indies took $118,605 worth of herring, and the United States $343,934 in sea-fish of various kinds.

Fresh lobsters, valued at $405,503, and canned at $962,471, were taken by the United States. The British market for lobsters has declined to almost nothing for fresh and from over a million dollars in 1906 to $613,428 last year for canned goods. This decline is no doubt partly due to the enforcement of the law regarding the size of lobsters to be caught. France took from us last year $844,865 worth of lobsters.

Fresh salmon exports to Great Britain have declined, the United States heading the list at $135,070. In canned salmon, also, British exports declined to $1,813,672, a drop of over two million dollars in one year. This is due greatly to the shortage of fish and another small export shipment may be expected this year. Australia took $199,088 worth of canned salmon last year.

United States Demand Increasing.

An interesting feature is the increasing export of fresh water fish to the United States. Fishermen aver that enough fish is caught in Canada in a week to supply the Canadian market for a year. Last year the United States took fresh fish valued at $1,124,887. Some of the fish, like carp, catfish and blue pickerel, which particular Canadians would not buy at any price, find ready sale at good prices among the foreign element in the larger American cities. Great Britain still buys our whale and the furs of marine animals, last year taking $199,966 worth of the former, and $111,699 worth of the latter.

The Export Fruit Trade.

A resume of the export fruit business of Canada almost resolves itself into a history of the apple trade with foreign countries. The apple industry in Canada during the year 1907 was particularly satisfactory. The crop did not exceed all records, and, perhaps, might be below the average, but this condition is amply compensated for by the fact that the quality of the year's production was excellent. One peculiarity which might be noted was the size of the Ontario apples, which were a little small, but this fact did not militate against their sale, as their quality left nothing to be desired. A combination of circumstances in the United States and England contributed largely to the good prices which were obtained by the Canadian shippers in foreign markets. In the United States there was a comparative shortage in the crop and a similar condition of affairs prevailed in England. These circumstances acted as a stimulant to the Canadian exporters, who were anxious to take full advantage of the situation. Under ordinary conditions the apple crop for export purposes passes through Montreal, but last season, owing to the strong demand in the United States for Canadian apples, a large volume of the business went to other points of outlet. A specially large number found their way across the boundary at Niagara Falls, and ultimately were offered for sale in Boston and New York.

Last year Canada exported $1,234,290 barrels of apples, valued at $3,696,977, to the English market, against 1,029,418 barrels, valued at $3,475,825 in 1906. Though our exports to Great Britain of green and ripe apples are increasing yearly, we have not yet reached the figures of 1904, when we sent $4,379,826 worth. The United States last year bought apples from us to the extent of $312,761.

There is some slight competition on the London market from Tasmanian and South African apples, but the supply of these is somewhat limited. A demand for Canadian apples exists in Germany, and some effort should be made to take advantage of that trade. The present method of non-uniformity of grade packing prevented the placing of a quantity of Canadian apples with some German houses a year ago, when buyers were sent out to pick up some choice brands. These buyers were disappointed with the way Nova Scotian apples were set out and placed their orders with United States growers instead.

Dried Apples Going to Holland.

Last year Great Britain took but 7,355 worth of dried apples, compared with $12,254 worth in 1906. There has been a decline in the export of these goods since 1903, when the record stood at $29,143. But if the exports to Britain are declining, we are sending large orders to Holland. Last year that country took dried apples valued at $68,442.

Fresh berries of all kinds are going to the United States and practically none to Great Britain. Canned and preserved berries, however, are again increasing in export to Britain, last year about $250,000 worth going forward, against $248,619 in 1906. We are still, however, behind the $370,973 record of 1903.

Canned Goods Aggregate Well.

Canned goods exports generally are about normal, canned apples being the most prominent fruit. Other lines close up are tomatoes, peas, corn, peaches and strawberries. The total value of these exports to Britain last year was $241,003.

Maple sugar was bought in the Old Country more freely last year than for the several previous years, but the United States is still the buyer of this maple line, importing in 1907 $214,317 worth, compared with Britain's $4,482.

The United States continue to buy our turnips, and last year there were sent across the line 1,073,302 bushels, valued at $160,485.

Cereals Are Sold Widely.

Canadian cereal foods were introduced into Great Britain several years ago. Last year exports to that market totalled 27,438 tons, valued at $356,172. This is a falling off compared with 1906, when the value of cereal exports was $860,363. The West Indies and some of the other European countries are becoming large buyers.

Great Britain took practically all of Canada's oatmeal last year. Our total export was valued at $666,130, of which Britain took $611,251 worth. This is a line that has been steadily rising in value as an export article. In 1902, we sent $329,042 worth to the English market, while in 1906 the value had risen to $492,084.

Agricultural Products.

Our bean exports to Britain are declining rapidly, owing to increased home demand, though the United States are also buying largely.

Buckwheat, though not making as good a showing last year as in 1906, is still going ahead. In 1902 we sent $79,094 worth, while last year the export of buckwheat had increased in value to $147,653.

Oats last year went forward to the value of $2,448,800, compared with $762,503 in 1906, and $1,861,661 in 1903. This grain fluctuates much in export yearly, and depends a great deal on the demand and prices to be obtained in the European markets.

Whole peas, too, are continually seesawing. In 1902, $1,105,814 worth went to the English market, while last year we sent but $313,542, which, with the exception of 1905, was the poorest yearly record to date.

Hay is still declining in export, due principally to short crops. Britain took $356,172 worth last year, but this amount is very small compared with the $952,728 in 1906, and but a mouthful compared with $1,702,538 bought by Britain in 1902. The United States in 1907 took hay valued at $240,687.

Exports of hops are up again after the declines of the past six years. In 1907, $32,259 worth was sold, which is the highest in a decade.

Some Miscellaneous Features.

One of the great features of Canada's export trade in the line of manufactures is the increasing demand abroad for agricultural implements. Germany, Australia, France and Great Britain being very large buyers. Typewriters to Britain and linotype machines to South Africa are also special export features. Cordage and charcoal are going forward in growing quantities to the United States, as also are drugs and chemicals and electrical apparatus, fertilizers, ice and manufactures of steel and tin. England is taking aluminum, musical instruments, oil cake, and leather, the latter to the value of $1,491,572.

One of our large export items is printing paper. England last year bought this to the value of $842,646; the United States $677,894, and Australia $600,607; the total value of shipments in this line being $2,500,635. The United States besides took $3,263,735 worth of wood pulp. One very interesting feature is that while Canada imports from Great Britain great quantities of ale and beer, last year $924,614 worth of whiskey was sent to the United States.

One or two facts which have been impressed in various ways throughout this article deserve comment.

It is very evident that as Canada's population is increasing and the country is developing, the demand at home for several lines which were formerly exported very largely has increased to such an extent that local consumption approaches the aggregate production and the markets abroad which would otherwise be open to such products cannot be supplied. This will account for the decrease last year in several lines of export.

This condition will become more evident as the country continues to grow, and it is incumbent on exporters and the Government departments interested to take all possible steps to increase production in these lines of goods.

"DEY SHO' IS HOGS."

Mose, the darky cook of a party of surveyors in Eastern Texas, was greatly annoyed by the razorback hogs that roamed around the camp. One evening, while he was at the spring, a particularly ravenous band of these "piny woods rooters" raided the cook tent and ate everything that was edible and some other things that weren't.

For several moments after his return from the spring Mose could find no words to express his feelings.

"Wall," he finally exclaimed, "de good Lawd suhtainly knowed His business when He named hawgs 'hawgs'! Dey sho is hawgs!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

DOESN'T PAY TO SCATTER ORDERS.

Not a few merchants have the idea that the shrewd way to buy goods is to keep eight or ten different firms in the same line dangling along with small orders to each one, rather than concentrating the orders with one firm, and trusting to that firm to protect them on prices.

Commercial travelers themselves will tell the honest seeker after information that the man who scatters orders doesn't get as good treatment as the man who throws his trade to one house as long as that house treats him right.

Consider just the one item of building up credit for your establishment. It is better for you to do your business in one place, as far as possible, because it is better for you to owe money to one house than to a dozen. Having your account in one basket, you can watch that basket. Moreover, by centralizing your trade, you build up a solid reputation with that house for credit; you are recognized as a valuable customer, to whom the concern can afford to make concessions.

The representatives of that house, when they come to your town, will see to it that you are put next to all the things that you ought to know; the close inside information which the representatives of the big wholesale houses have is not distributed hit or miss, but goes to the concerns in which that house has an especial interest. If there are any inside figures to be given out, you will get your share of them. While a drummer may now and then make a special cut to a new customer to get his trade, he won't keep the system up, and he will plan to get his money back in due time.

By concentrating orders, too, a merchant is able to make up enough of an order to save in freight shipments. If the merchant is patronizing a number of places, he may try to make up enough for a profitable shipment from each one of these concerns, taking the risk of over-ordering in some lines with the object of saving freight. The result is that he is "stuck" with some overstock, and loses more than his freight savings for a year.—Merchants' Journal.

How Canning Is Done

A TRIP THROUGH A TYPICAL CANADIAN PLANT.

There isn't anything much more familiar in the grocery store than a display of canned goods. The grocer, too, when he buys his 30 or 40 cases, talks away with the traveler about "swells" and "leaks," and yet how many of them are familiar with the processes which are gone through in the production of the goods. A representative of The Grocer had the pleasure of visiting several typical canning factories in Ontario some time ago, and in one of them was fortunate enough to secure some photographs of the plant which show pretty clearly how the business is done. Something of the story of the trip and the photographs are given herewith. No attempt is made to give a technical description but rather to put the story in a practical and interesting way and to give points which grocers can talk to their customers about.

ENGRAVING NO. 1—THE MOVABLE PEELING TABLE.

The importance of the Canadian canning industry is shown by the large number of factories, most of them specially built and most of them kept in admirable condition, as regards cleanliness and sanitation, which are devoted to the trade. In practically every factory machinery and appliances are at work which our grandfathers never dreamed of.

For purposes of illustration we're going to follow, say, a bushel of tomatoes from the point where they are unloaded by the farmer, through the factory till they are deposited in the warehouse awaiting shipment.

The tomatoes, which are usually brought to the factory in baskets, are first emptied carefully into a machine usually situated outside the factory proper, near the unloading platform, which washes and scalds them and by means of a moving elevator passes them into the factory ready to be peeled.

A machine has recently been invented which is said to peel tomatoes quite efficiently but as yet it has not come at all into general use and the work is done by hand, usually by women who are employed in large numbers during the season. The peeling is done in a surprisingly rapid and efficient manner at a so-called "table," the extensive piece of machinery which is shown in the first engraving.

The Peeling Table.

The machine, as will be seen, is really a circular series of small bins or compartments fitted on either side of a framework, while between these runs an endless belt of flexibly-connected metal plates which is kept continually moving. The women sit or stand around this table and the tomatoes, which are placed in pails after coming from the scalding machine, come to them by the pailful. Each woman lifts off a pail of scalded tomatoes as it comes to her, places it beside an empty pail in the small compartment in front of her and places the peeled fruit into the empty pail, and the peelings drop into the first one. When a pail is filled it is placed on the moving table, along with the pail of peelings and passes along around the circle, the peeled fruit going to the filling machine and the peelings to another operator where it goes through another process.

With from 70 to 80 women working around one of these tables, and they work remarkably fast, the scene is rather an active one. In most factories inspectors are engaged in watching the peelers, seeing that the peeling is done properly and that all unfit fruit is discarded. These inspectors, too, carry the checks which in most factories are given with each pail of peeled fruit and thus tab is readily kept on the amount of work done by each employe.

How Cans Are Filled.

After being peeled the tomatoes go to the filling machines. These are manufactured in different designs and are continually being improved, so that it is difficult to describe all systems used. In general, however, the fruit is emptied into a hopper in the top of the machine and is fed automatically in exactly the proper quantity to the cans, which pass and stop for the amount required for filling below the hopper. If salt is used it is sometimes squirted in in solution by the machine before the can is filled, or is sometimes fed in in its crystal state. A large amount of the tomatoes, however, are canned without even the addition of salt.

One of the latest machines for filling cans, and a most interesting one to see and hear, in operation, shows a hood down over the can as it comes beneath the hopper, pumps the air out and then forces the fruit in, doing all this in an instant and causing in the operation a noise something like a man walking in a swamp with long boots on.

The Sealing Process.

After being filled the can, which has either a large hole in the top, or has the top entirely open, according to the style used, the latter being a later design, goes to the soldering machine, or to a crimper to be sealed.

With the open-top can the sealing machine automatically applies a cover and this is again automatically crimped around the top of the can in such a way as to provide a hermetical seal, with this style of can no solder whatever is used in sealing.

ENGRAVING NO. 2—RETORTS FOR COOKING.

The soldering machine, which seals the partially-covered cans, is a remarkable piece of apparatus. As the cans pass along on a track entering the machine the small tin caps are applied. In the machine a small amount of spelter is systematically smeared on and then the soldering irons, circular in form and working in sets, automatically drop down on the cans, turn partially round to complete the seal and then rise, releasing the cans which pass out and along the track. The whole process is done very rapidly and the machines are remarkably efficient.

One other point, however, deserves special mention. A tiny hole is punched in the can top before soldering to allow the escape of the heated air. This is sealed by a touch with a soldering iron by a man who supplements the machine and who also carefully inspects each can as it moves past him.

From the soldering machine the cans go to a tester which assures the completeness of the seal.

Two Ways of Cooking.

The next process is an all-important one, that of cooking. Two methods of appliances are generally used for this, one of which is illustrated in engraving No. 2. This shows a number of retorts. After being tested the cans are placed a hundred or so at a time, in a sort of metal cage, and by means of a derrick and overhead tram are swung over these retorts and lowered inside. The covers are then clamped on, the steam turned on and the cooking process begins. The time consumed in the cooking operation varies of course with the kind of fruit and its condition.

The other system of cooking, which, to the uninitiated is a more novel one is entirely automatic. The machine in this case consists of a huge wooden chamber or covered trough from sixty to a hundred feet long, in which boiling water is circulating and through which an endless belt of wooden slats moves. The filled cans are dumped on the slatted belt, pass down into the cooking chamber, and continually moving, pass along to the other end where they again emerge. The passage through this cooking chamber is necessarily very slow and the machinery is arranged so that it may be adjusted to a nicety to allow the fruit to remain the proper time in boiling water. The mechanism may be adjusted so that the cans take from but a few minutes to an hour and a half or more to pass through the cooker.

The Final Processes.

When the cans of fruit are cooked and this is common to both systems, they pass to another endless belt which carries them through a chamber of cold water for the purpose of cooling.

After cooling the cans are loosely packed in cases and are then transferred to the storehouse in connection with the factory, where they are allowed to remain for some time before shipment for the purpose of detecting any "swells" or imperfectly sealed goods, which would probably cause trouble later.

When an order comes in from the broker or jobber the number of cases required is brought into the factory for labelling. This work is done by a special machine which automatically pastes the label and slaps it on the can with an accuracy and rapidity scarcely believable.

It will be seen that through the processes already described the fruit is not touched by hand after it leaves the peelers.

ENGRAVING NO. 3—COPPER KETT LES FOR BOILING JAMS.

How Other Fruits Are Treated.

Fruits, such as apples, peaches, pears and plumes, pass through practically the same processes, though the earlier stages are somewhat different. Plums, of course, are not peeled, but are very carefully picked over and the imperfect fruit discarded. Instead of passing to a machine filler they are dumped into a large shallow box, the bottom of which is full of holes, corresponding to the openings in a number of cans which are placed beneath. A few oscillations of the box serve to shake the fruit into the cans.

Apples are peeled on small hand-machines and quartered by hand. Pears are hand-peeled and in some factories peaches are also peeled by hand. Of recent years, however, a remarkably machine has been designed which peels the peaches without damaging the fruit.

With these fruits a syrup is added and, in the case of apples, a chemical compound is used to prevent deterioration.

After the cans have been filled they pass through the various processes before described.

Jam Manufacture.

One of the departments of practically every canning factory is that given over to the manufacture of jams and jellies. Part of this is illustrated in engraving No. 3. he fruit products entering into the composition of the jams are boiled with the syrup in large copper kettles which are steam-heated and after being brought to the desired consistency are canned or bottled in the usual way.

The process of putting the labels on bottled goods is illustrated in engraving No. 4.

Catsup-making.

The making of catsup involves another department which usually finds a place in every factory. The tomato "pulp," as it is called, the lower grades of which are made from the skins and cuttings of the tomatoes and the better grades from the tomato itself, is boiled in large copper kettles and is seasoned with a variety of spices. It is then run into large tanks from which the bottles are filled by means of specially designed cocks, as is well illustrated in engraving No. 5. A machine for cooking and capping the bottles is also shown here.

Cleanliness in Evidence.

The delightful cleanliness in the clothing of the employes and the premises as shown in this last engraving, is but an evidence of the attempts made in the great majority of the Canadian factories to carry on the processes of canning under conditions which are as far as possible ideal. While all departments of the factories cannot be kept so clean as the one depicted here, it is but fair to say that in the majority of cases every possible effort is made to provide for sanitation and cleanliness in the processes of the canning industry. This photograph would appear, from the dainty aprons and clothing of the women employed, to have been a "fixed" picture, but the writer found just the same conditions existent, and they surprised him considerably, too, when he looked on the same scene some months ago.

For the photographs used in illustrating the above article we are indebted to the Aylmer Canning Co., Hamilton —Editor.

ENGRAVING NO. 5—BOTTLING CATSUP.

"Thomas," said Major Hartigan, as he gazed into his son's eyes with a soul-searching look, "have you eaten any of those canned peaches I put in the cupboard?"

"Father," said Tommy, "I cannot tell a lie. I have not touched one."

The major eyed him wrathfully, as he plunged his hand into the pocket of his coat and drew forth five incriminating stones, which had each one been enshrined in the luscious flesh of a peach but which were now staring in all their horrid nakedness.

"Then how is it," said the parent, "that I find these peachstones in your bedroom, and only one peach left in the cupboard?"

"Father," said Thomas, as he silently but swiftly left the room, and placed a chair in such a position that his father would fall over it if he followed too quickly—"father, that is the one I never touched!"—Philippines Gossip.

The Mission of the Wholesaler

By FREDERICK W. HANNAHS.

The question whether the wholesaler should or should not be the recognized logical medium of distribution between the manufacturer and the retailer has long been a matter of discussion. It has created a feeling of unrest and to a certain extent distrust among all classes of business, but probably in none has this been more apparent than in the grocery trade. Arguments have waxed warm pro and con, but the weight of the logic appears to be largely in favor of the wholesaler.

From time immemorial in the manufacturing business there has been such a recognized medium of distribution through which small buyers have been enabled to purchase goods in quantities suited to their business. In dry goods circles it is an accepted fact that manufacturers of dress goods, linens, etc., shall not sell direct to the retailer. The china, crockery and glassware trades have a custom of their own, which divides their buyers into several classes, each with discounts of such gradation as to make it more profitable for the retailer to buy through the jobber, who in turn is protected by the manufacturer in a minimum profit of at least 10 per cent.

The Jobber an Important Factor.

The grocery jobber—or more properly speaking, the wholesale grocer—is a much more important factor in the commercial life of the country to-day than is generally known. Many years and vast fortunes have been spent by the great wholesale grocers of the country in developing their plants, which of necessity must be large, commodious and adapted to handling a great amount of merchandise at the smallest percentage of expense. The wholesale grocer has attracted to his establishment the food products of the world and is in a position to distribute them to the retail trade at a much less percentage of expense than can possibly be done by the manufacturers direct. The wholesaler's salesmen have at their command thousands of articles from which the retailer may select in small lots just what he wants. For that reason, if for no other, the wholesaler is in a position to be of invaluable service to the manufacturer.

The manufacturer of staple food products must to-day have an immense investment in his plant to meet the demands for the article which he makes; but it would take infinitely larger capital and untold expense for him to deal with the retailer direct. It is a generally recognized moral impossibility for most manufacturers to even attempt carrying the necessary credits in such a distribution of goods. It is much preferable for the manufacturer to deal with the wholesale grocer in a large way, get his money promptly and meet the demand for his goods with the help of the wholesale grocer. It is to the manufacturer's interest to market his goods through the wholesaler, not only because he can move his stock from his warehouse more expeditiously, but also for the reason that he can realize on his investment more promptly and in larger amounts than he could if he sold in such quantities as might be desired by the retailer, who, in most cases, would desire long credit.

A Help to the Manufacturer.

The prompt handling of merchandise and the quick return on his investment allows the manufacturer to keep the price of his commodities at a figure more attractive to the consumer than could be done in any other way. To attempt to supply the retail trade direct would require a tedious and burdensome system, even if sales were confined to the larger retail buyers, who form only a very small percentage of the whole number of retail merchants.

The wholesale grocer has a legitimate field. He cannot be eliminated. Just so long as it is more convenient and economical for the retailer to get from one source from a dozen to fifty different commodities than it is to get them from a dozen to fifty different sources, just so long will there be a need for the wholesale grocer. He carries a multiplicity of goods. His representatives go into localities which it would not pay the manufacturer to visit. No printer's ink advertising, however potential, can do the work of the wholesale grocer, because he is constantly and systematically in touch with the wants of the retailer through salesmen almost every day. His judgment is generally relied upon by his customer.

Jobber Should Be Protected.

Publicity from the manufacturer and the highest type of salesmanship on the part of the wholesaler are both necessary factors in business and should go hand in hand. Owing to the fact that the capital of the wholesaler is largely tied up with the retailer, the manufacturer who looks to the wholesaler for the exploitation of his profits should afford him proper protection. It is to the mutual interest of both that the wholesaler receive a fair margin for the use of his capital and the plant that distributes the product of the manufacturer. Working as he does along lines of least resistance and commanding the widest distributive machinery, the jobber is not alone the most valued adjunct of the manufacturer, but the friend of the retailer as well—one to whom both should cater rather than harass.

Day of Wholesaler Not Passed.

The day of the wholesale grocer has certainly not passed, notwithstanding the spasmodic effort of a few disgruntled retailers to eliminate him. He is logically a necessity to both manufacturer and retailer and from an economical standpoint must continue to be the mainstay, especially of the manufacturer. It is generally admitted that from 85 to 90 per cent. of the staple food products of to-day are distributed through the wholesale grocer. If this be true, it is manifestly unfair that a manufacturer should select 10 or 15 per cent. of the large retailers through whom to distribute a part of his goods at a lower cost than the large majority of retailers must pay. A larger volume of business always accrues to the individual or firm best equipped and having the best advantage for doing business. All such are bound to get the lion's share of trade. Where, then, is the justification for according the small class of large retail dealers a preferential over the large majority of merchants in the same line? Rather is it not to the manufacturer's interest to see that his large distributors have a fair return for the work they render him in the distribution of his product? When manufacturer and wholesale grocer recognize this great mutuality of interest, much good will result to the retail grocers everywhere. In those sections of the country where the retail grocer looks to the jobber as his friend and business protector, the retail merchant is the most successful and prosperous in the land.

It is easy to invent seemingly logical arguments to show the retailer that he can buy more cheaply directly from the manufacturer than through the jobber, but both careful analysis of the logic and actual experience show that it does not always work out in that way. The retailer who delegates his purchasing to an exchange is not only losing his own independent position, but is simply eliminating one jobber by creating another, who is no better able to supply him than the jobber already existing.

Run Your Own Business.

In my opinion, the retail grocer is an important enough individual to stand on his own basis to do his own business and not delegate it to any single individual or any association. It seems to me a very serious mistake when retail grocers will draw their supply from another retail grocer, even though he does a large business, for the reason that they are only building him up, and if he is an honest, up-to-date merchant, he will sell their good customers just as cheaply as he will sell them, and it is to his interest to do it. I have never known of any retail grocer who turned his brains with his business over to someone else to run, that ever made a success.

The Retailer's Position.

My claim is that the retail grocer is entitled to an honorable position in business life to-day, and he should not belittle himself by delegating it to someone else, because no one knows as well as he the needs of his particular customer. Understand me, I am in favor of retail grocers' organizations for mutual benefit and social intercourse. It is a great thing to know that your neighbor has the same difficulties to contend with that you have and you can do him a lot of good and he can do you a lot of good without agreeing on any price or in any way delegating the main functions of your business to him. There are general lines on which you can all work to the mutual advantage of all.

The Wholesaler's Influence.

As has often been said, the influence of the wholesale grocer for the distribution of manufacturer's goods is more potent than that of the manufacturer himself. On the other hand, the retailer is best served by the wholesale grocer for the reason that, as a rule, he is the best judge whether articles offered are salable, and will "take" and be a success in that section. The wholesaler judges because of his greater experience and larger knowledge of business than generally falls to the lot of the average retail grocers.

The Logical Distributor.

The wholesale grocer is the logical distributor, because no one manufacturer can possibly produce all the products now in demand any more than he can distribute them all. There is, therefore, a place in trade for the wholesale grocer that cannot be filled by either manufacturer or retailer. And while that place exists the jobber will remain and flourish.—New York Journal of Commerce.

CARE OF DELIVERY HORSES.

Every retail grocer should be aware of the importance which attaches to the appearance of his delivery horses. A horse ill-fed and poorly kept betrays the slip-shod methods of its owner, and worse than this, it brands him in the eyes of discriminating customers as that meanest of all mean men, the one who abuses and neglects the dumb beast that serves him.

The delivery horse is the faithful worker of the retail grocery store. In the morning he goes to market and on his return he is taken around the order route that the customers may get their groceries in time for dinner. After a scant time for dinner at noon he is taken out again to cover the order route and at night he is all too often given no attention except a feed of oats and a little hay and left ungroomed to sleep all night in a dirty stall. Every minute of the day he is serving his master and every minute he is just as surely advertising the kind of a master he serves.

No grocer should allow immature boys to have the care of his horses. Pretty nearly every healthy boy likes to see how much speed he can get out of a horse; very few boys have the judgment necessary in feeding and watering a horse at any time, and least of all when the animal is in a heated condition. Get a man to handle your horses and discharge those who do not handle them right. Cruelty is one of those offenses that admits of no excuse.

The feet of city horses need frequent attention owing to the hard pavements. The horse that draws a load should be rough shod and will require the attention of a good blacksmith, about once every three weeks if proper care is given.

The stable in which horses are kept should be clean and light; it should be well ventilated at all times, but should be built so that the animals are protected from drafts. The stalls should be cared for night and morning and at night the horses should be bedded down with straw. On coming in at night the horse should be carefully cleaned with a currycomb and a good brush and the same treatment should be given him in the morning after having cleaned the stall, and while the horse is eating his ration of oats. Let your horse have plenty of water at all times except when he is heated, at which time give him a few swallows in the bottom of a bucket and then wait an hour before giving him more. Treat your horse well and he will abundantly repay you.

A TRIBUTE TO THE PUBLISHERS.

The following letter was recently received from Mr. Edward Brown, Mayor of Portage la Prairie, who was chosen leader of the Liberal party at the big convention held in Winnipeg. It will be noticed that he writes after reading two of our papers regularly for fifteen years. During a recent visit to Toronto he called at our office to make the personal acquaintance of the president and managing editor. On May 5 he writes as follows :

Mayor's Office,
Portage la Prairie,
Manitoba, May 5, 1908.

J. B. MacLean, Esq.,
Toronto, Ont.

Dear Mr. MacLean,—During the 15 years in which I was actively engaged in the retail business here after coming to Portage la Prairie, I considered "The Canadian Grocer" and "The Dry Goods Review" among the most valuable newspapers that we received, and always looked forward to the weekly numbers with the greatest interest. The information furnished was a distinct help in the conduct of our business, and I certainly think that every retailer in Canada should be a subscriber.

During the last five years my attention has been devoted more particularly to financial matters, and in so far as "The Post" is concerned I cannot speak of it in terms too eulogistic. It covers a particular field of its own, and should be of immense value to anyone who is attempting to study at close range the financial situation. I feel assured that the views presented are of a disinterested character, and so long as its present policy is pursued of discussing in an independent way all matters bearing on the questions of finance, it will continue to be more and more appreciated by men who desire to get at the true inwardness of things.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) Edward Brown,
Mayor.

GIVE THE BOY ANOTHER CHANCE

Don't fire the boy. Keep him and make a better boy of him. If you do he will be a better man. Boys are all right if you understand them. In every one of them rightly handled there is a germ of manhood and possibilities of mighty success in the future. Grown up under kindly influences the excess energy that made them enjoy their boyish escapades will be directed to the accomplishment of great things. So don't fire the boy. Talk to him. Get him interested in the work. Tell him of the things before him in life. Teach him thrift and industry. Remember he is just a little raw material, out of which you can fashion a better man than you are, no matter how good you are.—Exchange.

The Traveler and the Grocer

A CONSIDERATION OF MUTUAL RELATIONS FROM BOTH STANDPOINTS.

The question as to the relations which should exist between the traveler and the retailer is one which is exceedingly interesting. To provide for a satisfactory treatment of the subject, the ideas of practical men, authorities in their line, in both departments of trade, have been secured, and are presented herewith. It should be interesting for members of both professions to read what the man on the other side thinks about it.

A MODEL GROCERY FRONT—STORE OF BRUCE & SANDERSON, TORONTO.

THE TRAVELER'S STANDPOINT.

By One of Ontario's Most Successful City Salesmen.

It is commonly known and generally understood as a privilege among the knights of the grip, that the temperament, characteristics, habits and manners of men upon whom they call to sell their goods, are topics for discussion among them, and that a definite knowledge of the peculiarities of every individual customer is considered by them as good and valuable information. And, on the other hand, merchants are not slow to make known to each other their likes and dislikes of the representatives of business houses who call upon them. While these conditions exist it is a well known fact that many of both classes consider some of their best friends among those of the other class.

The question as to how the merchant should receive the traveler, answered correctly, we believe, altogether depends upon the traveler. If he be not well received, first call, last call, and all the time, he has not made himself the master of his profession, and while we have every sympathy for the novice, and all must be beginners some time, the business house that allows a representative to pass out of their doors to represent them before he is properly trained, no matter how much natural ability he may posess, is following a short-sighted policy and is risking a leakage of business which very materially affects the dividends of the annual balance sheet.

True, some salesmen have made for themselves and their house a measure of success in spite of their negative qualities and shortcomings, but it is a simple thing to realize that this same man, properly trained and equipped, with all his better (positive) faculties and qualities developed to a marked degree, would possess such a power in himself that approved business methods would be to him as tools in the hands of a giant, to build and make for himself and his house a business that assures success and makes him equally indispensable to his customers.

What Makes Up a Transaction.

Let the commercial traveler inquire a little into the factors, or elements that combine to make up a transaction, and he will find out, if he never knew it before, that the mere outward acts involved in selling, the signing of orders, delivering of goods and payment of money, do not constitute a transaction; that these are but evidences of business, the results of a business deal.

Let him look a little further and he will discover that this business deal has a beginning. That it has its various stages of growth and development, and that it has a finishing, if successful, just as any other performance has. Here is where the question of the attitude of the customer, or merchant, is of the most importance.

The beginning of the transaction is the basis upon which we must depend, and from which point we must build. This "beginning" is of greatest possible importance, and unless the start is rightly made the ending is guaranteed a failure. There are so many epigrammatic statements that stand in men's pathway and prevent success. For instance: "A bad beginning makes a good ending." If this is true, and some men act as if it were, then let us by all means be systematically poor beginners. Begin at the wrong end with deliberation, for of course we desire "a good ending."

Let us begin every transaction rightly and, studying the matter from the standpoint of the traveler himself, we will find that while conditions vary, the traveler who fails to realize this to the degree of fitting up in a way to meet and sail with the varying winds—the mental winds of the customer and those of his environment—deserves all he gets in the way so-called of "unfair" treatment at the hands of merchants.

But let us look at the question of courtesy on the part of "the man who buys" toward "the man who sells" in another light, and let us lift the dealer out of the "nickel in the slot machine" class, where from the head of the establishment down throughout all departments there is a humble submitting to the clamor of the public for this, that, and the other popular article, regardless of what profit is being made, but simply to hand out what is asked for, being satisfied with small or no profits and poorly paid employes.

Credit a Necessary Factor.

No factor is so necessary in building up business as credit, and no factor is so necessary in building up credit as truth. It is comparatively easy to start credit, but the art is to keep credit. The young business man who says: "I want no credit, I buy and sell for cash" makes a mistake. It is all right to pay promptly, but do not establish a spot cash payment basis, for later on, when you ask credit, your creditors will think something is wrong. Establish a credit, whether you need it or not. It is a good advertisement and a frequent help, and the man on the road is the one who can very materially help to establish that credit, and he is the man who trades for this purchasing power the goods the dealer wants to buy. Therefore it is quite clear to every thinking man that the dealer should meet this "purchaser of his power to buy" with the glad hand, and make him very welcome.

To Be "Put Next" the "Good Things"

There is only one right way and the sooner the dealer appreciates the force of this the sooner will he advance the value of his purchasing power and be "put next" many "good things" kept for the "good fellows" who appreciate what a traveler can do for him by way of "specials."

This salesman of his money or influence or power to purchase in the world of trade should not forget that the man who has the goods is just as susceptible to a kind word, a hearty reception and a pleasant smile, as he himself, and as prices are not always fixed, and pointers are continuously on tap, he may prove as good a persuader to sell his cash for higher value than the traveler to sell his goods at higher prices. It is just as much the dealer's duty to himself as to the traveler to be amiable to the man who is before him representing his firm and offering his goods, which doubtless the dealer needs, as it is the place of the traveler to overlook occasional discourtesy and lack of business etiquette which it is sometimes their lot to encounter.

THE GROCER'S VIEWPOINT.

By a Successful Western Ontario Retailer.

Grocery travelers, as a class, are as fine a collection of gentlemen as you will meet in any walk of life, and the treatment accorded their customers, in most cases, is all that could be desired. Yet there are always exceptions, and as a practical grocer, I feel that I could give a few suggestions as to how the grocer likes to be treated by his friends, "the knights of the grip."

No merchant likes to feel that if a traveler comes into his store when he is out that he will lose half an hour of his clerk's time on account of a traveler's gossip and stories, nor does he care to have much of his own time wasted. Modern life has not a great deal of use for extended sociability in business hours. Beyond the hearty hand clasp and the expression of friendship that is felt rather than spoken.

Loyalty to Good Accounts.

A traveler should be loyal to his good accounts in advising them as to the likelihood of the market rising or declining, and in giving them the preference when he has a bargain to offer.

Business relations should be considered strictly private, and the traveler who talks freely of his sales in your city is apt to lose the chance of "closing" with you unless it is to your special advantage to buy from him. No merchant likes his business proclaimed from the housetops.

Something About Order Taking.

It is particularly annoying to have a traveler take an order and then not be able to fill it. A traveler should know his firm's stock thoroughly. Sometimes orders are taken for articles which cannot be secured simply to get the other items on the list. Then you rely on their arrival, perhaps advertise them, but they never arrive.

Although "increasing" sales, that is, enlarging an order, from say five to ten cases, without the merchant's consent, is a rare occurrence, yet it has happened too often to be pleasant. The writer had a tea traveler attempt it and you may be sure never had confidence in him again.

Travelers should be careful not to urge storekeepers to overstock or buy heavily of new goods for which there is not a created demand. A copy of every order taken should be given the merchant and signed by both parties. It prevents future disputes. When a traveler promises to give a merchant complete control of an article in his city, he should live up to it. Selling other merchants, no matter under what pretext, is positively dishonorable.

Small Editions of "Ginger Talks."

A traveler who is thoroughly up to his business would scarcely indulge in the luxury of smoking in business hours. Most merchants object as it is annoying to ladies. Even if times are a little dull in other places the grocer doesn't want to hear of it. He has "troubles of his own." He prefers the bright, optimistic fellow, who cheers him up, inspires him with courage and hope, and finally sells him a nice fat order of seasonable trade-bringing goods.

And that's just what the vast majority of our traveling friends do. They are small editions of "Ginger Talks" and always smiling.

Come to think of it—the disadvantages, the rebuffs a traveler meets—the way he always manages to keep cheerful stands for a good deal in his favor.

It's easy enough to be pleasant
When life glides by like a song,
But the man worth while,
Is the man who can smile,
When everything goes dead wrong.

Good Profits from a Meat Table

By OUR GUELPH CORRESPONDENT

The question as to whether a meat counter is a profitable department in the general grocery of to-day is one which has been much discussed. Numbers of the grocers say. "We handle meat only as an accommodation to our best trade, because we really do not get our own out of it."

You know yourself that you cannot cut up a ham and give So and So the front end and someone else the shank end and show a profit. Now, for a long time it has been quite fashionable to have a meat counter or meat table and the majority of first-class grocery stores are right in line and some claim a profitable business can be done, while just as many claim the opposite. Your correspondent, having been given an opportunity to examine the books and sales records of two entirely different stores in different neighborhoods for the purpose of getting at least a rough estimate of what business was done in this line, took off-hand the two months of July and February and set to work to find out the posibilities or rather what these two stores had done in these two months in their meat department.

You will admit that those two months are considered to be two of the quietest in the year. In one of these stores they have the reputation of doing a first-class trade in this line and the other claimed there was no money in selling meat. Instead of giving each one the credit of their own sales and for the purpose of getting at or somewhere near the facts. I added the two together and divided up even and found the following results:

February Sales.

	Profit per lb.	Waste.	Net profit.
Cooked ham, 150 lbs...	.10	$1.50	$13.50
Raw ham, 140 lbs.....	.4	.80	4.80
Bacon, 270 lbs.	.3	1.00	7.10
Sausage, 210 lbs.	.2	1.00	3.20
Bologna, 70 lbs.	.3	.50	1.60
Pork chops, 225 lbs...	.2	1.00	3.50
Pickled pork, 25 lbs...	.2½	...	.63

Showing after good allowance for waste, net profit for month $34.33

As will be noticed, some of the meats, such as cooked ham, runs away up in the warm weather, while sausage and pork chops drop back. Then in the cold weather some of the others vary a good deal, so I think in taking those two months you have a good fair average.

July Sales.

	Profit per lb.	Waste.	Net profit.
Cooked ham, 400 lbs...	.10	$4.00	$36.00
Raw ham, 250 lbs. ...	.4	2.80	12.20
Bacon, 380 lbs.	.3	2.00	8.40
Sausage, 70 lbs.	.2	...	1.40
Bologna, 140 lbs.	.3	1.00	3.20
Pickled pork, 80 lbs...	.2½	...	2.00
Pork chops, 50 lbs. ...	.2	...	1.00

Showing net profit for July.. $64.20
And for the two months $98.53

One might safely calculate $50 per month after a very large allowance for waste, etc., which there is not the slightest need of doing. Say, 12 months at $50 or $600 a year. This, indeed, would pay a handsome salary for one clerk, even if he did not sell any groceries for you at all and when you consider the fact that it is only at or near meal time that this department requires the services of one man those grocers who cannot see any money in it must have missed something.

The Equipment Needed.

To do a business of this kind in connection with a grocery store you need first, if you feel you can afford it, a neat, marble-top table or counter to suit the size of space there is to spare in the store. You can manage without it if necessary. This will cost you according to size, from $15 to $25, but to be what I will call extravagant, we will say:

Table	$20.00
Two good knives, say $1 each ...	2.00
One good steel	1.50
Two maple boards, about 1 foot long, 25 cents each	.50
One saw	1.50
Total cost for equipment of, say	$25.50

The scales you use for groceries will answer for meat as well. If you can not afford a marble-top table use marble oilcloth, which makes a good clean substitute.

Plates or platters come in handy for displaying your meat and these are generally found around an up-to-date store. After cutting up your meat for display a little garnishing of parsley or mint very often helps the sale. The above is about all the equipment that is necessary but more can be added if you feel inclined. A good refrigerator is a nice thing to have but most grocery stores are already supplied and the meats, if properly looked after, will not interfere with the other articles in it. A small meat chopper for cutting up the odd pieces of cooked ham, which costs about $2, will soon pay for itself and please many customers.

A Few Hints.

There are a few facts to remember in connection with a meat table:

First: Buy your meat from a first-class, reliable firm who will protect your interests and exchange anything that comes into stock not up to the standard.

Second: Keep your knives, table, boards and platters always exceptionally clean.

Third: Put your meat all in the refrigerator at nights, even in winter.

Fourth: Sell the ends of ham quickly. Don't stick for price.

Fifth: Don't get into the habit of cutting up for display purposes more than you can conveniently sell.

Sixth: Always cut up the ends of bacon or other ends early in the morning or when your customers are not watching you.

A few other lines of meat that can be added to those already mentioned which are good sellers and show a good profit are headcheese, pressed beef, tongue, spare ribs and tenderloin in season. You will be astonished how many people will come into your store for just a half-pound of cooked ham for tea or lunch and will very often buy from $1 to $5 of groceries that never thought of such a thing as groceries when leaving home. The grocers all handle lard and this really belongs to the meat department and shows an excellent profit and is easily handled. Above all things get the best of everything when buying as no grocer can expect to build up a trade by buying inferior goods just because they are cheap and this applies more noticeably to this department than to any other in the store. Cleanliness is next to goodliness it is said, and cleanliness should be the watchword in a grocer's meat department. I have noticed in several stores a large box under the table for scraps etc., and would not advise any good grocer to provide any such means of doing away with odds and ends as it only gets employes into the habit of needlessly throwing away a lot of good profit. The bits of fat and also the skins from cooked hams can be sold for soap grease It also pays to have the bone taken out of the hams, which you desire to slice up and save time.

This article would not be complete without a special reference to the latest device and money-saver in this department which has come into popular favor recently; namely, a meat slicer. There have been and are still a variety to choose from. The slicer that will cut up the ends of cooked ham, bacon, etc., is a most profitable article for a grocer to buy and while the first expense looks large they soon pay for themselves.

The meat department is all the year round a money-maker and especially at Easter is a great drawing card for any grocer and makes the Saturday before Easter Sunday almost as good as a Christmas eve.

"WHEN THE WELL RUNS DRY."

You fellows whose wives help you in your business may think you fully appreciate 'em, but you don't.

It's a harder thing than you think to properly size up a good wife, particularly if she helps you in the business.

Until you lose her.

You can't lose some wives. You try, but—well, never mind.

I know a grocer out in the Western part of Pennsylvania who's up against a lot of trouble.

It comes from appreciating his wife too much. And too late.

He had a dandy wife! I always said she was the real head of his business. They had no children, and they lived in nice rooms over the store. She had nothing much to hinder her, and so she was able to be in the store the most of the time.

That wife was one of the best business partners a fellow could have. She kept all the books and did some of the buying. As a matter of fact she could have done it all as well if not better than her husband.

She helped wait on trade, too. She was all right, and I told her husband when she died about three years ago that he'd never in the world be able to replace her. He pretty soon found it out, too.

Yes, that woman was all right. But she worked a lot harder than she had a right to. What's more, her husband let her.

As I say, she died. It hit her husband fearfully hard. They had been practically one person in everything, and when she dropped out of the business it meant a whole lot more work for him.

Just how much he had no idea of until he had to do it.

A couple of years ago he married again. The second could give the first cards and spades on a lot of things She was a better looking woman and a good deal younger, and she liked to fling her hoof.

Liked to go and have a good time. With the other one the store was all the good time she ever asked for or got.

The grocer knew his second wife was pretty skittish, but thought to himself she'll settle down and help some a little later. The little later's never come. She's hotter after a good time to-day than she's ever been before, and as for helping in the store—not guilty!

She simply won't do it. Her argument is that she can't do it—has no knack that way—and I believe she's right.

What would you do if you were up against a contrast like that? The first wife was faithful, hardworking, interested in the business, able to run it and indispensable in it, and the second no good at all? At least no good in that way.

I guess you'd do just as he does. You'd tell her. And you'd keep on telling her. And you'd tell her again.

And she'd have scraps and things would all go to hen.

That's exactly what things have done there. That grocer is trying to change a leopard's spots. He's trying to compel his wife to take an interest and do some work in something that she has no interest in and don't know how to work for.

Will he succeed? He will not.

But maybe the poor devil don't appreciate his dead wife now! Didn't he appreciate her while she lived? Not half. But if the poor dead soul has a jealous disposition she's getting her revenge now, all right, for her memory and her reminiscences are making the life of her successor a regular bear-garden.

The other day I stood looking at the cashier in another grocery store not very far away from the other one. She was a woman of about thirty-five and a hard worker, as I know from periodical visits to the store.

The night I was there she looked tired. It was a sweaty night and there was perspiration all over her forehead.

I didn't say, did I, that she was the wife of the proprietor?

"Your husband certainly ought to appreciate you," I said as I looked down at her sweaty little face.

She laughed a little.

"I hope he does," she said, "but I don't feel sure. I think he takes it as a matter of course.

"We've been married five years," she went on, "and in the beginning I had nothing much to do in the daytime—we board—so I thought I'd like to be in the store. John liked the idea, so I came. Sometimes I think I work harder than anyone else in it. I don't mind it, though."

The grocer just then came back—I've known him for years—and I said:

"See here, old man, you're working this little woman to death."

He thought it was a joke.

"Pretty healthy looking corpse, ain't you, Jen?" he said with a laugh, and that was all the good it did.

Some of these days Jen may die. These overworked women have a way of doing that.

Will John realize then that she was overworked?

He sure will.—The Stroller in the Grocery World.

DON'T LET OLD GOODS ACCUMULATE.

One of the greatest sources of loss in retail stores is the accumulation of old stock which through age has become unsalable, or, at least, has lost a portion of its value. Look over your stock this month and if you find you have still on hand part of a lot of goods received, say, last October, it is time to make extraordinary efforts to get rid of them. If necessary, make a job lot of such goods and offer them at a price that will move them. It is better to stand a partial loss than a total loss. This rule of keeping goods as short a time as possible will work to your advantage greatly in keeping your stock clean and fresh, and will insure the minimum of profit on a given amount of invested capital.

A great many sales are lost and a great deal of dead stock is carried by stores which are in the habit of having places behind or under the counters in which to place goods. These are probably never overhauled except at stock-taking times, and these drawers and hiding places are an excellent catch-basin for "stickers," which ought to be on the counters where they can be pushed more than ordinarily.

Do not have any place in your store where goods can be stuck away out of sight. If you have plenty of room it is better to have all the goods above the counters, on the shelving. Have no shelves below, so that there will be no opportunity to put things away out of sight. Many stores, however, cannot do this, as they are crowded for room, and it is, therefore, necessary that a part of the goods should be kept below the counter board.

If this is necessary, see that all goods not in easy access are looked over and examined and brought to the light at least once a week. If the goods are kept out where they can be seen they are very much more apt to sell than if hidden away. Assistants are usually careless about goods which are not easy to reach, and they very seldom take pains to look into any of these old drawers or under the shelves to find the goods to sell.—The Storekeeper.

The Story of Smyrna Figs

J. M. P. MAINETTY, OF SMYRNA, IN THE PREMIER ENQUIRER.

The fig tree grows almost wild, and requires very little cultivation. Although certain varieties are grown in various parts of the world, those of Asiatic Turkey, commonly called Smyrna figs, for the reason that they are packed and shipped from Smyrna, are the best. The growing district is in the Province (Vilayet) of Aidin, the plantations extending from Ayassoluk to Ortakchi, a valley over one hundred miles long, spreading far on both sides of the line of the Ottoman Railway, which runs through it, affording direct transportation from the interior.

The nature of the tree and the quality of the fruit is not the same throughout the growing district. In fact, the varieties are extremely numerous, but the following are the four principal classifications, that is: Ayassoluk, Inovassi, Aidin and Tchaili, bearing the names of the districts where they grow.

The Inovassi fruit is the best, being of light color, rich and juicy, of thin skin and very fine flavor. The principal varieties growing in the Inovassi district are: Balagik, Deirmendgik, Erbeily, Naipli, Carabounar, etc.

The Erbeily and Deirmendgik fruit is the finest in every respect. The Balagik, while of a fine quality, is small, and the Carabounar, Naipli, etc., is large but not as thin-skinned.

The Ayassoluk variety grows in a low, damp country, and this quality is very fine when the season is dry. If, however, rains prevail during the growing, the fruit is not sound.

The principal varieties of the district of Aidin are: Aidin, Omurlu, Kiosk-Dere, Sultan Hissar, Nazli, Ortaxi, etc. The Sultan Hissar and Omurlu are the best, but as a whole this district's fruit is not very juicy and is of a yellowish color and rather of thick skin.

The varieties known as Odemish, Thyra, Payamboly, Bosdoghan, Boudemia, Kaymaxi, etc., come from the Tchaili district. Some of these varieties are good, but, barring a few exceptions, the fruit dries up and loses its richness after it is packed in boxes. All these denominations are the names of the different villages around which the fruit is grown.

The Inovassi district, giving the best fruit, and the reproduction of the fig tree being done by cuttings, one should think that the Inovassi varieties should be introduced in the other districts. This has been tried for years; cuttings from the Inovassi district have been planted in other districts, sometimes only eight or ten miles away. The best of care has been given to the young trees, which bear fruit in the fifth year. The first yield resembles a little the variety of the cuttings; each following crop, however, for the next three years looks more and more like the fruit of the district the tree grows in, and on the tenth year, which is the period of the largest production, the fruit becomes identically the same as the fig of that special district. If these fine varieties cannot be successfully planted ten miles outside of the districts where they naturally grow, it is not likely that the attempts of the California planters to produce a fig similar to the Smyrna varieties will ever be a success. Enormous quantities of cuttings of the finest Turkish varieties have been imported and planted in California, and although the tree thrives in that country, it degenerates and gives a fruit totally different from the Turkish fig.

The fig tree grows to a height of eighteen to twenty feet and spreads its branches like an apple tree. The best fruit is obtained the first three or four years, both in size and quality. Its life is quite long, some trees bearing after they are forty years old.

There are two kinds of trees, the male (Eilek) and the female, the latter producing the commercial fig (yemish.) The female fig does not mature unless a certain quantity of male figs are hung on the female tree between the tenth and fifteenth of June, as the caprification takes place at that season. This is very interesting, and let us mention here that the male fig (Eilek) has its male itself (Boghas).

The Eilek, after having matured its fruit, loses its leaves, and before losing all its sap, towards the end of October sprouts a certain quantity of small figs (Boghas), which resist the coldest weather and which remain at a standstill until the beginning of May. Then they begin to grow at the same time that the real male fig (Eilek) begins to sprout on the same tree. By the time the Eilek grows enough to be fertilized the Boghas is ripe, and from its orifice come certain hymenopterous insects of the genera blastophaga and sycophaga, which enter the minute orifice of the receptacle at the end of the male fig (Eilek), apparently to deposit their eggs, thus conveying the pollen to the stigmas, and ensuring the fertilization and consequent ripening of the Eilek. When the Eileks are ripe between the tenth and fifteenth of June, they are gathered, strung, and a string of them hung on the branches of every female tree. Here occurs the same process of fertilization as between the Boghas and Eilek. From the Eileks come myriads of blastophagas, which enter the commercial fig and fertilize it, the process known as caprification.

This is really one of the most dangerous periods of the growing crop, as frosts, heavy rains, etc., occurring at that time, kill the insects and only such figs as have been caprified ripen, the balance dropping before maturity, and going to waste. The commercial figs, thus fertilized, ripen by the beginning of August. They are not picked, but when they reach a certain maturity, they begin to dry, and consequently drop on the ground.

THE STORY OF SMYRNA FIGS—ONE OF THE PACKING ROOMS.

SMYRNA FIGS—GRADING.

In the morning everybody on the plantations goes around with baskets, gathering the fruit, which they carry to a certain place where the ground is covered with dry leaves and straw (Serghi), and on which they spread the fruit, exposing it to the sun, and allowing it to remain there from two or three days. It takes about three days to dry the fig if north winds prevail, as the atmosphere is then very dry. If, however, westerly winds are blowing, which means heavy dew at night, the fruit must remain exposed to the sun from five to seven days. This is another dangerous period, as rain, or even a shower, might ruin hundreds of tons of fruit lying on the ground. Heavy dews sometimes are just as detrimental. The proper atmospheric conditions to insure a crop of large, sound, rich figs, are west winds in June and July, followed by north winds in August, and from then on an occasional west wind every five or six days.

When the figs are dry enough, they are packed in camel hair bags of two Turkish kintals each (about 250 lbs.) and carried to the railroad stations on camel back. This is why the crop is reported by camel loads, each load representing two bags or about 500 lbs. The railroad carries the bags to the Caravan Bridge station, just outside of Smyrna, and from there they are again loaded on camels and brought to the fig market (Ingir Ysharsi), where they are examined and bought by the packers. Mixtures of the different varieties are made in the packing places to insure uniformity in the appearance of the fruit. Women do the first selection. They sit around large quantities of fruit, selecting four sizes, which they put in separate baskets. While selecting the fruit, they pull it by the stem through the palm of their hand, thus giving it a long shape, called Macaroni, which demonstrates the size and makes the fig easier for the packer to handle. From the selection rooms, boys carry the baskets to the packing rooms and place the proper sizes before the packers, according to the quality they are packing.

SMYRNA FIGS—MARKET IN THE BAZAARS.

There are five kinds of packing: Layers, Locums, Pulled, Macaroni or Colonna and Natural.

The packing in Layers is the most popular. The fig is split open underneath, flattened and given a certain shape before being placed in the box. One layer of figs is put on top of another until the box is filled. Layer figs measure in width from one and a half to two and three-quarter inches—according to grades.

The Locum is practically the same packing, only done more carefully. The fig is given a kind of die shape instead of cushion, and the idea is to fill the box perfectly, leaving no space whatever between the fruit, which makes this packing the hardest and most expensive.

The Natural packing means figs packed in their ordinary shape in bulk, either in quarter or half-cwt. bags. Generally, the common grades and also the refuse, which means the figs that cannot be used for packing, are put in bags in their natural state, and are bought by grinders for baking and confectionery. Since a few years, however, large quantities of fine grades are imported as Naturals in fifty-pound boxes, and are repacked here, either in baskets or jars. Some also are imported in Macaroni or Colonna for the same purpose. This packing consists of putting the fig in the boxes, as prepared by the women, one by the side of the other, and all the stem ends one way.

All fig packing is done by hand, and there is no process or machinery used. The packers wash their hands in brine while packing, but this is only done to prevent their hands from getting sticky —salt water being used, as fresh water would injure the fruit. The sugar generally noticed on the figs comes through the skin of the fruit from the saccharine matter, after the natural fermentation which occurs after the fig is packed.

Fig packing is one of the principal industries of Smyrna. Thousands of people find employment during the end of August and the months of September, October and part of November, more than half a million dollars being paid in wages during that time. Packers are paid on an average of from 30 to 50 Piastres (which means from 75c. to $1.25) per day, and on an average, it takes four to five men one day to pack a skeleton case, weighing about four hundred pounds net. To this must be added the expense of selecters, carriers, porters, weighers, carpenters, etc. Figs to be exported to this country are generally packed in boxes weighing half, one, eight, ten, twelve, fourteen, twenty and fifty pounds; some weighing as high as one hundred pounds are used for show window purposes. They are sold on a Cost and Freight basis per cwt., prices being quoted in shillings, and in accordance with the proportions of sizes and grades.

The demand for figs has increased considerably during the past two years. Some years ago a crop of seventy-five to eighty thousand camel loads was considered large, and difficulty was found in disposing of the goods. With the increasing demand, new plantations have been started, and the crops of the last two seasons have been enormous, in 1906 reaching one hundred and twenty thousand loads. Notwithstanding this, the goods find a ready market, and, with the exception of very short crops, at higher prices than were ever realized before.

Two Hours on a Delivery Wagon

By A GROCERY TRAVELER

Did you ever take a ride with a grocer's delivery clerk in a real live town? I did once and it will suffice for a lifetime. It happened in an eastern town where business dines with its hat on and goes to bed with its boots on. I was walking up Cherry Street when I met the delivery wagon. The driver, being an acquaintance, invited me to take a ride with him and I accepted and seated myself beside him.

"Now there's a mare that knows 'er business," said the clerk as he hit her a crack with the whip that sent my feet skyward and my head into a basket of potatoes. After regaining my equilibrium and pushing the "dints" out of my hat, I told the scoundrel that it was quite evident that the beast did know her business a confounded sight better than her fool of a driver knew his, and that if he would be kind enough to slow up a little I would jump out and go with him some time in the future when I felt more able-bodied.

"Yes, sir, you bet that mare knows her biz," said the lad, utterly ignoring my request. "She'd start right from the store without a line and make the round trip without missing a customer's house or making a wrong turn; and, throwing the lines over the dashboard, she'll make a turn the shortest possible way if she has to skin a telegraph pole or jump a gutter to do it."

"Gewillikens, boy! What——"

I was interrupted in my remark by a sudden collision between the pit of my stomach and the bulled-head of the grocer's boy. The front wheel on the side of the aforesaid boy slewed around when it struck the curb, and the hind wheel ran over the corner and nipped the bark off a maple tree. When I caught my breath I reminded the grocery slinger that a cabbagehead had fallen overboard and been cut in two, and out of respect for the vegetable family I advised him to stop and gather up the remains. But who ever heard of a delivery clerk showing respect for anything. He said the old mare knew her business and would have to make the trip before twelve o'clock and couldn't stop for busted cabbages or death.

It was at a little house on a back street down in Oakdale Park where we made our first stop. A peck of peaches and a half-dozen eggs were fished out and, after blowing off the dust, it was discovered that five of the eggs had collapsed and their contents, mingled with the dust of the earth, had given the peaches a veneering which was ghastly to look upon. We turned around, ran over the wheelbarrow, and started on the home stretch. We had driven a mile and a half with that peck of peaches and six eggs and delivered them within a few rods of two grocery stores. I supposed that our customer was either at loggerheads with her neighbor grocers or else a mother-in-law to the distant grocer, and I asked my light-headed companion to explain matters. He said the lady had formerly lived near the store; that "once a customer, always a customer," was a law among grocers, and, consequently, a groceryman followed his customers all over the city, and while soliciting these orders they often picked up new trade in strange territory. I asked the commercial teamster if he could cypher in subtraction and division. Giving the mare a cut with the whip that upset a basket of potatoes and put the third kink into my back, he said he had no time to fool away with such things and wondered why I asked such a dumb-foolish question. I said I was going to ask him how long it would take a grocer, with fifty customers like the one at Oakdale, to get rid of a fifteen-hundred dollar capital; but as he was a stranger to figures and was in a fair way of becoming a grocer himself I would let the matter drop.

Our next stop was at a house on Thomas Street. This time it was a peck of potatoes, a bar of soap and a gallon of kerosene oil. I waited fully ten minutes for the embryo groceryman to pop his head out of that back door, and when he did pop I saw a change had come over him—a change for the worse. He had a barbarous look on his face and was covered from head to foot with soot. My impression was that he had undergone an altercation with the hired girl and that during the melee the range had bursted.

Springing on the seat he struck the mare an angry blow which nearly broke my neck. He said the "old gal" asked him to help move the cooking stove and he had been on the road long enough to know better than refuse. He said that in spring and fall during house-cleaning times, he was frequently asked to help move stoves, cupboards etc.; help take up and shake carpets, split kindling wood and help the girl lift the boiler on and off the stove. He had never been asked to rock the baby while its mother called on a neighbor, but he was subject to such things all the time. I looked at my young soot-begrimed friend, aged beyond his years with the cares and petty annoyances of his profession, and secretly resolved that I would not again inaudibly consign him to the bottomless pit if he filled every available inch of my vertebral column with kinks and unhinged every joint in my anatomy.

At a fashionable place on Henry Street the poor fellow really got mad. It was a market basket full of small packages, among which had been a sack of eggs. When the basket was lifted from the wagon a yellow stream af albumen exuded from the bottom. Before the clerk discovered it he succeeded in ornamenting himself with yellow daubs and stripes. Dropping the basket on the cobble-stone pavement he drew his handkerchief and began to rub and swear—that is, if he had not been a grocer's delivery clerk he would certainly have used profane language. The more he rubbed the more he sweat and decorated his pantaloons. It had at last come my turn to enjoy the fun and I revelled in it. He was in a white heat of rage and made a desperate attempt to remove the egg liquid from those packages, but the more he scraped the dirtier they looked. He said he wouldn't care a blankity-blank-blank if it had happened anywhere else but right there at Mrs. Van Goldberg's—but I will spare this young man's feelings, although he showed no disposition to spare my feelings when the fun was on his side.

Our next halt was at a house on Union Street, where what was left of a bushel of potatoes was delivered. At a house within a half-block of three or four East Bridge Street grocery stores the mare halted, and the egg-bedaubed, soot-besmeared and dust-covered clerk jumped out, but the ten pounds of beans had broken out of their paper house and danced all over the bottom of the wagon until they had become so thickly coated with egg paste that they lost their identity and could not be delivered.

Our next call was at a house on College Avenue where a half-bushel of potatoes, a peck of apples and a cabbage head had been anxiously looked for since eleven-thirty a.m. (it was now twelve-fifteen p.m.), but not having arrived in time for dinner, the lady of the house was in a proper frame of mind to bite off the head of the first delivery clerk that came in sight. May my head be bitten off seventeen times rather than receive one such curtain lecture as that unfortunate clerk received on that occasion. When we turned the next corner she was still shaking her fists at us. I was truly repentant by this time and freely forgave my unlucky friend for all injuries received at his hands.

When I reached home my wife took me into the back yard and swept me. She asked me if I had been tied behind some wagon and dragged home. I told her never to speak unkindly to a grocer's delivery boy or ask him to rock the cradle, turn the grindstone or carry in the night wood. I advised her never to call at a grocery on her way home and order a yeast cake and a lamp wick and then make things unpleasant at home because she got there ahead of the goods. I assured her that her reputation would not suffer if she carried a half-pound package of tea in her arms, and that it was always safer to carry home a package of eggs than order it delivered by wagon. In fact, I was so impressed with the worries and vexations of the delivery clerk that I actually advised her to occasionally kiss him for his mother.

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT.

Many, many times I see this sign conspicuously displayed on some retail business house, not as often on a grocery store as on a saloon or restaurant.

Advertising that "here some man has made a failure—but come in now and see how much better I will be."

This sign makes food for thought.

It almost always means a history of failure, I think. Somebody has gone in there as owner or manager, put in his best licks, but failed to make good.

His successor, unwilling to shoulder the other man's failure, seeks to remove the stigma of it by loudly announcing the change.

Is there anything to business management besides buying right, finding buyers and then selling right? I've heard men contend that that was all and that anybody who gave proper attention to those things would succeed; and I've heard others contend that there was something more.

I believe I agree with the latter. If there is nothing more than those three fundamental elements, why do some men get so much more out of their business than others?

I am inclined to believe that the real manager is born and not made.

Like the real farmer. Some farmers are careful enough, and apparently thorough. Their results are moderately good. Others, with poorer soil and poorer facilities, get twice as much.

They simply seem to coax the stuff through the soil.

As a business manager the Jew is everybody's model. You can give him a poor little business, rocky and rough to the last degree, and the results he will get from it will astound you. Other men may make it go, but the Jew will squeeze from it every drop of success it contains.

You can say what you please about the Jew, he may not even be able to write his name—but he knows business

What is his secret? What is the secret of any born manager, Jew or Gentile? I verily believe it lies in watching the little things. The things that a lot of us think too trifling for any use.

With a Jew nothing is too trifling for any use. Everything that concerns his business is important. I've heard Jews argue an hour to avoid the payment of interest amounting to $1.50. Meanness you say? They don't think so—it's business. Business to save every cent they can—business to turn every piece of string to account—business to stop every pinpoint loophole—business to make every item of their business give a good account of itself.

So far as I know every large Hebrew fortune which exists to-day had its foundation laid that way.

To be sure, a business run that way becomes a great deal heavier burden than a business where one isn't straining after the little things. But, other things being equal, it is almost sure to yield more money.

Of course, to the merchant who puts money last, this argument will not be impressive. Nevertheless, thousands of men who failed could find the main cause of their failure right there.—E. J. B. in Grocery World.

SPEAK WELL OF YOUR EMPLOYER

If you work for a man, in heaven's name work for him. If he pays you wages which supply you your bread and butter, work for him, speak well of him think well of him stand by him, and stand by the institution he represents.

I think if I worked for a man I would work for him. I would not work for him part of his time, but all of his time, I would give undivided service or none.

If put to a pinch an ounce of loyalty is worth a pound of cleverness.

If you must vilify, condemn and eternally discourage, why resign your position, and when you are outside damn to your heart's content. But I pray you, so long as you are part of an institution, do not condemn it. Not that you will injure the institution, not that, but when you disparage the concern of which you are a part you disparage yourself.

Think it over.—Fra Elbertus, in the Philistine.

THE BOY ON THE DELIVERY WAGON.

The one who drives the delivery wagon may think that his work is not of very much importance to the business, but in this he is mistaken. While he may not realize it, or hear much said about it, he is of as much value to a business as almost any other employe, especially if it is a grocery business.

If he is kind to his team, sees that his harness and wagon are properly cared for, he is doing his employer a good service. If he is neat in his dress, courteous and polite to customers, handles his goods properly, he will make and retain friends for the business,

It is true that some people to whom goods are delivered seem to show very little appreciation of courtesy or kindness, and if allowed will impose on the deliveryman, but this class are not in the majority.

A dirty, careless, disrespectful delivery boy can do a business considerable injury. The leaving of gates unfastened and doors opened when they should have been shut; the entering a room with muddy feet; the careless handling of packages, are things that customers will not long put up with, and there will be either a change in delivery boys or a change of places to trade.

Some of the most successful business men got their start on the delivery wagon. It is a hard job, but it is a splendid educator. The knowledge obtained in this part of the work may be turned to a decided advantage when promoted to a clerkship in the store and taken off the delivery wagon entirely.

We have known of some young men starting in this way in order that they might become acquainted with their customers, and the most successful salesmen are those who know and understand the wants and needs of their trade.

In one certain Texas town a young man worked for several years on a delivery wagon, and as he was a thorough business man he made it a point to cultivate the acquaintance and good will of all his customers and especially the ladies. Promotion followed promotion until he became a head salesman, and during this time was growing older and wiser, and at a city election decided to offer himself as a candidate for city secretary.

His good will of the ladies stood him in good place in this, for they remembered how courteous and attentive he was when a delivery boy on a grocery wagon, and how he had maintained this same character all along, and they used their influence with their husbands, and the result was that he was elected by a good majority.

Dominion Government Tea Tester

By OUR SPECIAL OTTAWA CORRESPONDENT

From the standpoint of the grocery trade no more interesting place can be visited, by anyone in the business, than the tea-testing room of the Department of Customs, at Ottawa. Formerly it was located in the basement of the western block, but within the past few months the establishment has been moved to the top floor of the custom house, on Wellington Street, in the building next to the Rideau Club. R. C. Allan, who for over ten years has tested all the teas for the department coming into Canada until a few months ago, when testers were appointed for Hamilton, St. John and Halifax, is an unique personality. He knows the grocery business from the ground up and probably has not his equal in the Dominion as an authority on teas. He was born in the little town of Lachute on the 27th day of May, 1836, but has lived the greater portion of his life in the Province of Ontario.

A Lifetime in the Trade.

After a few months spent, when quite a young lad, in a general store at St. Andrews, P.Q., Mr. Allan secured a situation in the grocery business in Prescott, but moved to Dundas at the time the Asiatic cholera was prevalent in the little town on the St. Lawrence. Several years were spent in Dundas, Brantford and Galt, during which time the future tea expert was lying up a store of commercial knowledge which has stood him in good stead in subsequent years. The determination to make the tea trade a life study came after he had secured a position as traveler for Cramp, Torrance & Co., of Toronto. It was with some hesitancy that the firm gave the young grocery man, without any knowledge of the road, an opportunity of proving his metal, but so successful was he in his chosen occupation as a tea traveler that he remained an honored representative of the firm until Cramp, Torrance & Co. went out of business.

First Experience in Tea Testing.

A somewhat curious incident was the beginning of Mr. Allan's knowledge of tea-testing. He had gone into a new territory with his samples and had tackled the big grocery man of the town for an order. "I want a special tea," said the merchant, at the same time handing a sample to Mr. Allan. "I got only one chest of it and have been trying for months to secure more, but without success." "You shall have it," replied the traveler, and in a few weeks' time Mr. Allan, when he called upon the merchant again, said he was prepared to furnish him with any number of chests of the tea the grocery man required. A large order was the result.

"How did you find the tea that you wanted?" asked the representative of The Canadian Grocer of Mr. Allan. "Well, when I returned to the warehouse in Toronto I showed our buyer, Mr. Lamb, the sample I had brought with me. At that time there were only three importing houses in Canada, all of which kept in stock every known variety of tea. Mr. Lamb examined the sample which I had brought with me, and in a few minutes had selected one which he thought was its equivalent. He asked me to draw both samples, the firm's and the merchant's, and they turned out to be the same. They were Ping Sueys, and from that day on I never forgot what a Ping Suey was. That was my first experience in tea testing, and from that day I added to my knowledge of teas, and the districts in which they are grown."

How Testing is Done.

Mr. Allan's office is not an elaborate affair. The principal feature of it is a circular table which revolves on a pivot. Piled up on this table, and on others in the room, are scores of small tin boxes in which are the samples which reach Mr. Allan from the Customs Department. These samples have come in from all parts of Canada. Each sample is numbered consecutively the departmental officials knowing the name of the importer, but this information is withheld from Mr. Allan. All the tea-tester receives is the report sheet from the department, numbered in the first column with the equivalent numbers of the samples accompanying. These may run 4,200, 4,201, 4,202 and so on. The remainder of the columns on the sheet are blank, and in these Mr. Allan has to embody the result of his researches.

When the samples are received in the tea-testing branch, and the tester is ready to commence business, the gas is turned on and the kettle put on the bracket to boil. Thirty to forty plain white wedgewood cups without handles are placed on the circular table, and behind each one is the little tin from which the sample is to be taken and tested. First of all, there is a careful examination of the teas by the olfactory process. A small quantity, the weight of a five-cent piece, out of each tin is balanced on a tiny pair of scales, and placed in a cup. Then the boiling water is poured upon the tea, and after a lapse of from three to five minutes, and you ask the question, "Where is that sample from?" Mr. Allan sips the decoction and immediately you get your answer, "That is from Ceylon," or India or Ningchow, as the case may be.

J. J. ALLAN, GOVERNMENT TEA TESTER AT WORK IN HIS OFFICE.

For an infusion of green tea Mr. Allan always uses these cups, but for drawing black tea small pots are used, the quantity in this latter case being equal to the weight of a ten-cent piece.

"The best way to make tea," said Mr. Allan, in conversation, "is to have the water fresh and boil it thoroughly. The vessel in which the tea is to be made should also be hot. Pour the boiling water on and let it stand for five minutes. Some people prefer three minutes, but all the tea will be extracted from the leaf in five. A longer time than that draws out the tannin, which is most injurious to the stomach."

A Summary of Canadian Imports.

"What kind of teas are consumed in Canada?"

"In the east green tea is still the favorite. Considerable green tea was formerly used, but now it has given place in many parts of Canada very largely to the black teas of India and Ceylon, and even the greens of China and Japan are being attacked by the planters of the British East Indies, who are sending to Canada excellent green teas. To show what persistent advertising will do I may call your attention to the figures of last year. The table is of striking significance when contrasted with the figures of ten years before.

Thus last year there were imported into Canada 15,570,046 pounds of black tea and 6,377,835 pounds of green tea. Now contrast this with a decade ago. In the year 1897 the total importation of black tea amounted to 11,256,437 pounds, of a value of $1,712,641. Of this total quantity 5,102,444 pounds came from Great Britain. These may have been either China, Japan or India teas. The tables show that of black tea coming direct from India or Ceylon in 1897, the total was 1,487,883 pounds, and even assuming that all the British importations from Great Britain came from India or Ceylon, which is hardly likely to be the case. There has been an increase in the consumption of India and Ceylon teas in Canada in the ten years to the amount of in round figures, 10,000,000 pounds. Correspondingly the consumption of green tea has fallen off. The importations ten years ago of green tea totalled 11,152,202 pounds of a value of $1,502,616. Ten years ago China sent us 1,119,824 pounds of green tea. Last year China sent, as will be seen by the above table, 538,679 pounds, a decrease of over 50 per cent. Japan, on the other hand, ten years ago, sent us 9,624,375 pounds, and last year only 3,952 001 pounds.

"How do you account for this extraordinary turnover?" Mr. Allan was asked. "Well, principally to persistent advertising. You know the old saying is, "Judicious advertising is the keystone of success." The men who are handling the India and Ceylon teas have made full use of the columns of representative trade papers like The Canadian Grocer, as well as of the daily press. In addition the public demonstrations of the Indian teas at great public exhibitions like Toronto, Ottawa, London, Hamilton and other places, which draw the attention of the public to the quality of the British product have been very effective. I know many instances in which people who were accustomed to drinking green tea have changed to the Indian blacks through the cup presented to them at public exhibitions. Of course, in some sections of Canada it would be difficult to effect any change. The Province of Quebec is the greatest green tea drinking province of the Dominion. Different sections of the country have their preferences. For instance, west of Kingston the people use a much finer quality of tea than they do east of that city. Most of the low grades are Nagasaki teas. The green tea from Yamashira is probably the finest flavored that is grown. We also get good qualities from Yokohama. China now sends us no green tea to speak of. Japan captured the trade, and now Ceylon and India are cutting out Japan. The black tea from China has been pushed almost entirely out of the market by India and Ceylon tea. The China teas are very desirable in quality, but the people here do not drink them on account of the price. The fancy China teas are, however, very popular in Britain, where quality more than cost is studied.

Some Pointers on Tea.

"The finest green tea in China is probably Moyune. Fychow supplies a fine green, but not as good as the other. The black tea from Kneemum is very fine. Ningchow and Moning teas are also very good. My favorite is Ningchow which possesses a sort of smoky flavor. Pekoe-Shushing is an admirable tea.

Black teas are fermented with the object of giving them a certain flavor. Green teas are not fermented. Gypsum and soapstone are used by the Japanese to give their late teas the color and appearance of the early picked varieties, which are the best. There is a great difference between China and Ceylon teas, as much difference in fact as between beer and whiskey. Ceylon tea, when it cools, will cloud. China tea, if sound, will never cloud. Age injures tea, and tea from Japan will lose in quality on this account as much as 25 per cent. in one year. China black tea will keep better than any other variety, but I do not suppose there is 10 per cent. consumed in this country. As I have already said, we get most of our teas from India and Ceylon. They are more liable to must on account of the climate of the countries of production and do not nearly possess the keeping qualities of China black."

The Modern Retail Grocer

By John A. Green, President National Retail Grocers' Association of the United States, in the New York Journal of Commerce.

In treating the subject, "The Retail Grocer," it is my object to point out his desires and aims; the problems which confront him; his social position, and his position in the political and commercial world.

Anyone embarking in the grocery business to-day must be a master of detail and have a thorough knowledge of the business, if not, an unlimited supply of capital with which he may buy his experience, before beginning to be what is commonly known as a "successful merchant." The demands on the retail grocer to-day are greatly in excess of that of former years. That the expense of doing business has materially increased is well known. The demands on his resources for up-to-date fixtures, telephone service, better delivery outfits and prompt delivery of goods eat up his profit to such an extent that unless he be thoroughly posted in his business and keeps accurate accounts as well as seeing that collections are prompt and losses kept at a minimum he will suddenly find himself not prosperous, but in an adverse position.

Control Neighborhood Business.

Everyone in the business should aim to control the business in his neighborhood. In every town and city there is one retail store that holds the best position, and the aim of each is for that position. This position is achieved by giving close attention to every detail; by polite and courteous treatment, which treatment, coming from the head of the business, cannot help but influence those associated with him. This high position can be attained by keeping the best goods, serving customers with the best quality rather than the lowest price. I have seen grocers urging goods on customers other than that which they wanted simply because there is a little more profit in it sometimes losing the sale, and if not losing that particular sale, driving the patronage of those customers away from the store. While it is always compulsory to wait on each in turn, a merchant should never be so busy that he cannot give a cheerful word to those in waiting and a promise to serve them at the earliest moment.

Should Know Human Nature.

The problems of the retailer are many The temperament of the trade, the satisfying of the different tastes, the gauging of his purchases to meet requirements and the collection of accounts are all problems which are difficult to solve to a greater or lesser degree. A man to understand different temperaments must be a good judge of human nature. This is one of the greatest problems and close attention to it will mean more to him than any other thing, for through this means he will be able to satisfy his customers on every point. If he is a shrewd judge of human nature he can see how to provide for their wants and how to approach them in the matter of collection.

A Factor in Political World.

The retail grocer can be a large factor in the political world. In fact, there is no business man who has access to every family in the same relation as the retail grocer. Every door is open to him with a cordial welcome. He holds in his hand a powerful influence if used with diplomacy and in the right direction. If a successful merchant he has the entire confidence of every person with whom he has trade dealings. If the influence that he can possess is turned in the right direction, it will spread out through the entire neighborhood and place him in an enviable position from a political standpoint. The politicans will seek his assistance; great men will trust him implicitly, and the advice given by him will be heeded. He can wield this influence in many directions, civic, religious or commercial. But first of all, and more than all, he must have within himself the essentials of "character."

This part in the commercial life played by the retail grocer is too often looked upon as one of drudgery. I say that the retail grocery business is one of the pleasantest and most lucrative that anyone might engage in The constant going and coming of the trade, the different characters with whom he comes in contact the many lines of goods that are continually changing and many other things that might be referred to, keep him fully alive and abreast of the times.

The condition of the retail grocer has improved to a very great extent over that of former years, brought about mainly through his organization. The coming together in the meetings, discussing methods of conducting business has, through an interchange of opinion brought about an improvement both in conducting business affairs from a stand point of selling goods, the cost of doing business, the percentage which must be realized to conduct a successful business, and the collection of accounts. It is positive proof of their improved condition that we find that the best class of citizens are now turning to it for occupation and investment.

An Esteemed Class.

While the rise to a prominent place in the commercial world may be slow for the retail grocer, yet it is nevertheless sure. Hundreds of grocers can be pointed out who, after a business career of twenty years, are looked upon as the mainstay of the community and prosperous to a degree of independence. I know of no class of business men who so generally hold the friendship and esteem of their fellow citizens as the retail grocers. It is the retail grocer who meets his fellow citizen every day in a close relation which is essentially domestic. It has always been the "corner grocery" where political campaigns have been fostered and national destinies fought out. In fact, the retail grocer is a sort of pivot in the community around whom revolves much of the social and political life of his town, ward and city. Given the public confidence and friendship it lies entirely within the making of the grocer himself what shall be his distinction as a citizen.

Necessity of Taking a Holiday.

One of the greatest mistakes in the career of the retail grocer is that he thinks it impossible to leave his business for a few days of recreation. How many men with every essential embodied in their make-up for a successful career have failed because of their neglect to take the needed rest and recreation at the proper time!

It is true that "worry shortens many lives." It impairs energy. Too many of us get the idea that business would go to the bad if we should withdraw our hand for a week or month. This is a very great mistake. A good clerk is worthy of confidence, and it would pay well sometimes to try him. Get out into the open, under the blue sky. Nature will suggest something that can be carried back to the store and thoughts will spring from a rested mind, open up new avenues which will help on to success.

The Greatest Essential in Business.

The greatest essential for a successful business life as a retail grocer must be individuality. To originate, to think to do. He is prone to follow in other people's footsteps. To think what other grocers are doing.

A leading retail grocer once said to a clerk in the hearing of the writer, in answer to an assertion that certain prices were quoted at another store, that he should bear in mind there were no stores in the city other than the one in which he worked. While this may be a broad assertion, it covers the ground entirely. We must have a thorough knowledge of detail, cost of goods, the expense attached to the sale thereof and an individuality that will impress itself on the customers, that will gain their confidence and make them feel that you are dispensing your products at the lowest possible cost. Individuality, in fact, is the root of success and many prosperous retail grocers would never have attained the position they hold today were it not for their individuality It is through a combination of such individuality that the retail grocers' associations have been able to bring about reforms which will be of lasting benefit to the retail trade.

POINTS TO REMEMBER.

Better sell a customer too little than too much. The man who buys too little will come back for more. The man you oversell may never come back.

Just remember that people may think of the price while they are making the purchase, but they think of the quality when they are using the goods. Sell the highest possible quality every time.

It doesn't pay to recommend goods a bit higher than they will stand. A customer fooled that way once won't give you a second chance.

Greet every customer as soon as he comes in. If you cannot wait on him at once, at least find out if possible what he wants so as not to keep him waiting needlessly.

Misrepresenting goods is taking chances with your reputation. There may be ways in which it is worth while to take chances, but never with your reputation.

Tropical Fruits for the Grocer

By A NATIVE WEST INDIAN

Almost every grocer throughout the country will be found handling tropical fruits. In noticing this one is inclined to ask: Is there any money to be made by so doing? Whether it is found profitable to a great or lesser extent to sell these tropical fruits, than it is to handle the fruit which is grown in Canada, must depend on the following: How the grocer purchased the fruit, in what condition they reached him, and the scarcity or abundance of the supply which obtained at the time he made his deal.

Purchasing tropical fruit in Canada is attended with as much risk as in purchasing Canadian fruit in the tropics. Apples, which the Canadian grocer buys and sells to his customers at, say, one cent each, would, if exported, bring five times that amount. Nor does this apply only to apples. It is equally applicable to several other fruits which are grown in temperate climates, and which cannot be grown profitably, and in some cases not at all in the regions of the Equator. The percentage of profit which is gained by the Canadian grocer in handling tropical fruit; namely, bananas, oranges, pineapples, etc., is equal to that obtained by the West Indian grocer or fruit dealer in handling fruit grown in Canada and other countries producing the same species. The irregular transportation of fruit and other cargoes to and from the West Indies—irregular—in that goods are in transit for as long as four weeks—causes an enormous loss to such cargoes, particularly those consisting of delicate fruit. It is, therefore, to be hoped in behalf of both sides of the trade that better transportation facilities will be brought in to use and the sooner the better.

How Bananas Grow.

While on the economics of the subject it may be interesting to learn how bananas and pineapples are grown:

Bananas like a rich clayey soil, moist but well drained. The tree is produced from a sucker, which in turn is obtained from another tree. This sucker is buried in the earth about two feet deep, after this is done, the earth is plowed about it, and provided rains fall in due season, nine months from the time of planting, a full grown tree will produce a bunch of fruit. The size of the bunch depends on the fertility of the soil, the care and cultivation which is given the tree during its growth, and the number of other trees which are allowed to spring up around the parent tree. Nine hands is reckoned the maximum bunch, but they produce bunches as low as only four hands which are of no value for export.

TROPICAL FRUITS FOR THE GROC ER—BANANAS GROWING ON AN EAST INDIAN PLANTATION.

Pineapples Require More Attention.

Unlike the banana, the pineapple will not produce in a clayey soil. This delightful table delicacy, the best of which is the Ripley, does best in a friable, sandy loam, easily drained and containing a certain amount of pebbles. When the plant has borne its fruit a number of small suckers are thrown out around the parent stock. Each of these form a separate bearing plant, so that the profitable reproductive aspect of this is at once seen. Unlike the banana in every particular, this plant has to be very carefully looked after if the best results are to be obtained. The specimens seen in Canada are of the poorest, in fact, the Ripley is not known. The class that seem to get here are of the turnipy or what is known in the islands where they grow, as the "Cowboy" kind, which name they have probably derived from the fact that they grow uncultivated in open lands where cattle are pastured, and are reaped by the cowboys. Foreign and English writers have described this fruit as being the finest known, the flavor of which is at once acquired.

TROPICAL FRUITS FOR THE GROCER—NATIVES LOADING BANANAS ON STEAMER.

How to Handle Citrous Fruits.

A temperature of about 40 degrees will be found ideal for the preservation of citrous fruit, such as oranges, limes, lemons, and grape fruit. During the summer months when the demand for these is greater than at other times, the grocer generally has to stock more than when the thermometer registers a low temperature, and he is then exposed to greater danger of loss from the summer heat. As a remedy for this damaging effect of the high temperature on the fruit, it would be advisable for him to purchase frequently from his dealer, and in small quantities according to immediate requirements. In any case, he should place this portion of his stock in the coolest and best ventilated portion of his store-house. The fact may be observed from the Italian fruit dealer who carries a large percentage of his stock outside where the air can get at them also and protects them with an awning which keeps off the sun.

Give Bananas Fresh Air.

The banana, being of a more hardy nature, is perhaps one of the most profitable lines to handle, but even this fruit should have care and attention. The best way to stock this fruit is to hang it up by the stalk or stem so that a pure current of air may reach it. Excessive heat or excessive cold will have a damaging effect on this fruit but the average temperature of the store will not do much harm to it. The consumers of bananas are of the opinion that the bright golden fruit is the best, and will pay 5 or 10 cents a dozen extra for this; whereas, the fruit is in its most wholesome state just when it begins to get a little black, provided the blackness is not caused from any damage which it has sustained in handling. This may be a good point to impress on customers, who are not familiar with it, and at the same time will often save money.

The banana, in its stage of decay, makes one of the strongest and purest vinegars known, and the process is very simple. By placing about fifty or a hundred "fingers" of the fruit—as each one is called—into a cask for about 14 days after they have started to decay, they will soon melt to a watery state, which is itself, pure vinegar.

Keeping Pineapples.

A few suggestions as to the best way to preserve pineapples from decay will be helpful. The fruit should always be carefully covered with paper to exclude as much as possible any action of wind or air. A fairly warm temperature suits them best. They cannot stand rough handling, as the slightest damage done to any one part of the fruit—except the swordlike leaves on the top—will penetrate the entire fruit. Cuba and Florida supply the bulk of the pineapples to the Canadian market, but it is regrettable that better transportation and other facilities do not allow Jamaica, B.W.I., to offer some of her "Ripley," which is the best of pineapples.

SUGAR CRISIS IN RUSSIA.

Industry in Serious Position Through Operation of Peculiar Local Conditions.

A correspondent writing from St. Petersburg to an English paper recently says: "A serious crisis has developed in the Russian sugar market, and already several small manufacturers are bankrupt. I hear that a prominent member of the Right party of the Duma is very deeply involved. The causes of the trouble are unconnected with natural economic laws, and are those which have always operated in Russia. The sugar industry as it has always been entirely in the hands of the native Russian, has suffered more from Government interference than any other industry. The country would gladly take six to ten times more than the amount of sugar allowed by Government to be produced every year, but it assists the operations of the Russian excise to keep down the production and artificially raise prices thereby. This prevents small cultivators from competing, and the history of sugar production in Russia shows the rapid rise to fabulous wealth of one "sugar king" after another, each in turn falling with a suddenness that is even more marked than his rise. The situation in Kieff, the great centre of the sugar industry is on of panic; banks have stopped credit, and the extent of the mischief cannot yet be appreciated, as it is not known how far banks are themselves involved in the all-round collapse. In Kieff alone business in sugar amounts to the annual sum of over nine millions sterling, a very appreciable item in the commercial balance sheet of Russia."

The Rival Grocers

THE STORY OF A WAR IN CUTTINC PRICES AND ITS RESULT.

Said Mrs. Miller to Mrs. Scott. "Do you know, my dear, I am just reveling in the fact that a new grocery store has opened across the street from our old reliable Simpson's."

"Why?" said Mrs. Scott. "We've traded with Simpson for twelve years and have always got the best of treatment, haven't you?"

"Surely, but the new store is going to cut prices, and Simpson told me yesterday that he guessed he could meet anybody's prices, and that we should keep our eyes open for bargains."

"Is that so? Isn't it great? I've always traded with Simpson, although he has never offered bargains, because he was so reliable and kept such good things, but now, if he is really going to give us some low prices, it will be simply grand." The two friends parted in sweet anticipation of the slaughter to come and their own prospects of loot.

The war was on. Jenkins, the new man, had newly made signs in front of his store every day giving lists of tremendous bargains. Simpson felt a little too high-toned for that, but did have beautifully arranged piles of goods in his show windows with neatly lettered cards telling what opportunities there were for low prices.

Women would go to Simpson's, order what bargains attracted them there, and then across the street to Jenkins' to gobble the bait there. Business hummed in both stores. For a while all was well; both men simply shaded prices a bit with the idea of recouping their profits in a larger business; but, strange to say, after a few days, almost all the sales seemed to be of the articles offered as special bargains at a ruinously small margin of profits. Simpson noticed the absence of many familiar faces—those people who cared more for reliable goods than for bargains; the quiet, well-to-do women who liked to shop in peace and know what they were getting. When Simpson's store became a battleground, these women, his best customers, began to leave and purchase elsewhere. Still, Simpson was apparently doing a hundred per cent. more business than ever before when the salesman of the Blank Canning and Packing Company came to sell him his annual bill of goods. The Blank Company put up a very fine class of goods and they had been favorites with Simpson's high-class trade.

Seeing the apparent prosperity of Simpson, he felt that he ought to land an order about twice as large as usual, and was greatly surprised when Simpson said that he wanted only twenty-five per cent. as many cans as he had the year before. "Why, how is that?" said the salesman. "You seem to have at least twice as much trade as you had a year ago, and yet you order only one-quarter as much from me."

"It's this way," said Simpson, "I'm in the midst of a war with the man across the street and I must have canned goods which I can cut prices on. Your goods are too good and cost too much for that, so I have just ordered a big lot from Smith, Brown & Jones under a special label. These goods are very cheap and I can sell them for just half of what I must get for goods with your label. I need some of your goods for the people who ask for them and will take nothing else." "But," said the salesman, "Smith, Brown & Jones isn't a first-class house, and you know it." "Of course I know it, but I can't help it. I must offer bargains, tremendous bargains, and when women are on a bargain hunt quality doesn't cut so much ice."

"Better cut it out now while you can," said the salesman. "Let the other fellow catch the bargain-hunters and you keep after your reliable trade." "Can't do it," said Simpson; "I'm in this fight and I'm going to fight it to a finish."

And so the merry war went on. On one side of the street, "Six cans of tomatoes for 18c," and they were real tomatoes, too; on the other side of the street, "Two pounds of best Java Mocha coffee for 35c. with a coffeepot thrown in," and it was real coffee—at least part of it was.

Prices went down and quality went down—down. The traveling salesman with a job lot of goods so poor that the ordinary reliable grocer wouldn't have them on his shelf could be sure of selling on one side of the street or the other. Standard brands of canned and package goods remained on the shelves and cheap substitutes filled the counters, show cases and windows, bearing price labels of wonderful cheapness. The crash came finally. Jenkins advertised a slaughter sale at prices less than cost, and when the sale was over Jenkins was down and out.

Simpson survived the wreck because his years of steady, reliable business had given him a fairly good bank account. Simpson won his fight, but about this time Mrs. Miller met Mrs. Scott in a grocery store some little distance from the scene of our war. "What," said Mrs. Miller, "do you trade here? I thought you were a customer of Simpson's." "I thought you were, too." "I was, but it got so awful there that I couldn't stand it. The clerks were always trying to shove off some cheap bargain on me, and I had to fight my way to the counter to get anything." "Yes, and when I thought I was getting some tremendous bargain Mr. Scott would say, 'What in the dickens is the matter with this coffee?' or 'These canned peas are rotten—where do you buy this junk anyway? Don't you have enough money to get decent things to eat? If Simpson doesn't sell them any more go to someone who does.'"

Such is the story of the war of the grocers. One general was slain and the other grievously wounded. Many followers of both leaders were more or less injured, and many more deserted.

Simpson is still running his store, and a model store it is now. He has got back most of his old trade and a good deal of new trade. He is prosperous again but it was a long hard struggle to get back where he was when the war began. I should hate to be the drummer to offer him a bargain lot of second-rate substitute goods. He has been bitten by that flea once.

HINTS ON SALESMANSHIP.

The cultivation of a good memory is necessary to good salesmanship.

A good memory means remembering what we should at the right time.

The first requirement to have a good memory is concentration—attention—on what we desire to remember.

The most useful book for a grocery salesman to concentrate his attention upon is his price list.

A real, earnest endeavor to become familiar with costs, prices and qualities brings the best reward. It gives the salesman confidence in himself and confidence in his merchandise.

It pays to be thorough, to take a real live interest every day in the line you are selling.

Thinking out new plans, keeping posted on advances, declines and new goods varies the pleasure of selling goods. It is the salesman who enjoys his work who beats the man who works because he is obliged to—who takes work just as it happens and who always has to be told how.—J. C. Rahning in Inland Grocer.

What to Do Next Month

June represents in a grocer's routine the period of many actual changes and alterations, which is due to the fact that the city folk are leaving for the country in large numbers and the grocer in the country must make preparation for the additional influx of trade which this invasion of their rural domain brings with it. In the city the problem presents itself chiefly in the form of how to get more business to make up for the loss which he sustains by his customers transferring their trade to the grocers at the watering places and resorts.

Get Hold of New Customers.

There are various ways of accomplishing this end, but it must be remembered that to achieve the best result special effort must be put forth. Sometimes where it is customary to take orders the salesman can substitute a new family on his list which may be remaining in the city for those whom he has lost by their withdrawal to the country, in other words, if it is customary for the order-taker to call, say, upon twenty customers in a day, let him keep up this number, where possible, calling on a new family in place of each one of the old ones which he loses.

It is always a difficult matter to get new business, but sometimes the business can be started in your direction by a few specially good lines at a price which renders them attractive, and once you get them started it is not so difficult to hold them and then you have a new customer.

With these special personal efforts a small advertising campaign could be indulged in, which is always sure to bring its good results, and the publicity thus gained will remain an asset to the grocer.

Get Ready for the Fruit Season.

June is essentially a fruit month, and especially a strawberry month. The ability to buy this fruit or any other fruit at an advantageous price remains with the grocer, and if he can make a particularly good deal and get into the market first he will find his receipts will amply repay him for his efforts. It is not necessary to comment upon the usefulness of window displays which always are without speculation insofar as the beneficial results accruing therefrom are concerned.

Some grocers in the city have a country delivery, and in this way they retain the trade which they would otherwise lose if this enterprising feature of their business was absent and in these watering places there is always an opportunity of getting new customers, as many of the people may be going there for their first season, and have had to discontinue their connection with their grocer in town if he has no out-of-town delivery, and if they can be approached

MODERN STORE INTERIORS—ONE OF THE DEPARTMENTS OF R. HIGGINS & SON.

Whilst the grocer cannot in many cases hope to retain the same volume of business he can greatly augment his income if he puts forth a little effort to reach new customers and in this way the new business which he finds if he knows how to retain it, will continue with him during the whole season, and in this way the total volume of his business for the year will be greatly enlarged.

when they first arrive, the chances are good for the first one who solicits them. Certainly the problem which presents itself to the city grocer is much graver than that which confronts his country confrere, although he also may feel a slight depression during the months of July and August, owing to a certain amount of holiday tripping, but generally the losses which he sustains in this way are compensated by the advent of the city folk, who, as a rule, are a source of no small revenue in most country towns.

For the Country Grocer.

In the month of June the country grocer should have his store cleaned and brightened up, generally, and should be alive to the change in the character of foodstuffs and the grocer should always remember that it is better to anticipate these changes sufficiently early rather than have his customers come in and call for them and then have to dig them up from beneath a pile of unseasonable goods.

Nowadays, when the country stores are daily increasing the variety of their stocks, owing to the more complex character of their customers' wants and requirements, many things which might have been formerly thought incompatible or inharmonious with their business, are eagerly grasped as they may present a means of enhancing their revenue.

How About Refreshments?

In many places a very paying adjunct to a grocery may be established by opening a soft drink and ice cream parlor. The margin of profit in this line of business is very good, and if properly managed the results of the venture will be found to be highly gratifying.

As may be done by their city brethren, the preparation of specially appetizing picnic hampers are sure to find ready customers. In many ways it is possible to cater to this tourist trade, which generally is more lucrative than the ordinary, as people are always more liable to buy things when they are holiday making.

It sometimes occurs that a special community may produce a particular product and the wise grocer will take advantage of this fact to load up the city folk well with it before they return, generally effecting the sale at a good profit. As an example, I might mention those parts of the Eastern Townships where specially fine maple sugar is produced. The fame of this locality for the excellence of its maple sugar is so great that numberless people who visit it in the summer months take home with them some of this toothsome product.

Look After the Wedding Business.

The fact must not be lost sight of that June is designated by arbitrary custom as the month of matrimonial adventures and that the bride at the head of her own household is a good prospect for future revenue if her favor can be cultivated.

The festivities incidental upon these events are sure to result in the additional expenditure of money in the home, and any special attention which may be paid to their wants will be appreciated by the customers. Last, but not least, perhaps, it is the month of the year which brings with it so many bright things that the appearance of the store should be assiduously attended to and everything made to look bright and clean.

A WELL-ARRANGED EQUIPMENT.

The engraving on the opposite page gives a good idea of the up-to-date equipment and arrangement of the store of R. Higgins & Son, Toronto. Unfortunately it was impossible to photograph the whole store. This view shows practically only half of it, the department at the other side of the partition on the right being almost as large and just as tastefully fitted up as the section of the store shown. Mr. Higgins carries a large stock of potted and cut flowers, and has lately begun to supply floral designs for weddings and funerals. The store is always bright, is as clean as a grocery well could be, and attracts a high class of trade.

GIVING ADVICE.

"I know how to run my store. I don't want to be told what to do," said a merchant, referring to the advice given by trade papers.

A great engineer was constructing a bridge. He was confronted by a difficult problem, and he had worried over it day and night, without reaching a satisfactory solution. One day a small boy, watching the engineer puzzling over his plans, suggested that he do so and so. It was a simple suggestion from a humble source, but instantly the engineer saw its practicability and adopted it, with necessary modifications.

A noted landscape painter used to make it a custom to invite criticisms from the unlearned. He said he frequently got valuable points from people who knew nothing of painting.

A great manufacturing concern in the east offers cash prizes for suggestions from its employes, and many of the thousands of suggestions which are made every year have proved of value.

No one man is omniscient. No one man knows everything. No one man can afford to slight suggestions and advice. What if he does know how to conduct his business? Is there absolutely no room for improvement? We think the best conducted business in the world might be improved somewhere. No two minds work exactly in the same channels. Two men of equal ability, struggling with the same problem, will reach conclusions which involve different methods. If they compare they discover that both have decided on advantageous things, and the two may combine to benefit the plans.

When we suggest our advice, we do not mean to hint that the readers are deficient in knowledge or understanding or experience. On the other hand they may be successful and prosperous and wise and skilful. But is it not possible that they have overlooked some particular point which would prove beneficial to try? We think so.

Then, it must be borne in mind that the trade papers' advice is prepared for a large number of people and that its readers are not all alike. What may be good for one man may not fit the case of another. Do not refuse the good simply because something in it is not advantageous for you. And, supposing there is a merchant who understands his business so thoroughly that no advice obtainable through the columns of his trade paper can benefit him.

That is not all the trade paper contains. There are other departments where he may graze to advantage There are news items of interest, gleaned from all sorts of sources. He learns there what experience can not give him —what the state of the market is, what output may be, what conditions are in trade centres.

With every deference to the skilled and able merchant, we believe that advice is a good thing for all. If it does not suit your particular conditions, you are under no obligations to adopt it. If it might do you good, it will do you no harm to try, and much of it is prepared by men who have experienced the fortunes of merchandising and know the trials, the difficulties and the dangers. The trade paper is prepared with a special desire to cheer, to benefit, to assist and to widen the scope of the merchant.—Oregon Tradesman.

HOW TO KEEP POTATOES.

An experienced grocer, who has had considerable trouble in keeping potatoes from rotting as a result of dampness, hit upon the following method, which he declares to be successful:

Place a soap box in each corner of the cellar half full of lump slacked lime. This absorbs the moisture which would otherwise settle on the potatoes and cause them to rot.

A trial of the foregoing plan would do no harm and might result in the saving of considerable money.

HELP THE RETAILER.

A revision of Goldsmith's "Deserted Village," to suit the needs of the twentieth century community, appears herewith, reproduced through the courtesy of the Iron Age of New York Read this story and laugh if you like, but remember that there is a big substratum of truth beneath it all. The mail order houses in the big cities are undermining the business of local retailers in a serious way.

The press must in its own interest take up the battle for the retailers. Its prosperity depends directly on the prosperity of its own business community. Reduce the profits of the local trade and you reduce the available support for the local newspaper proportionately.

Education is the remedy. Use your columns to prove to the public that buying at home is more profitable than spending money in a distant city. The public doesn't see this fact now. Its eyes are blinded by the glittering array of fancy prices in the mail order catalogues. But show that in the long run the home price, though it may appear higher, is in reality lower than the mail order price and the public will begin to see things differently.

In this educative campaign a reproduction of "The Deserted Village" will do good. Write in to The Canadian Grocer for an electro at cost price, and run it in your paper. It will be read by every reader of your paper and will set them thinking. It will please the retail trade in your town and strengthen your hold on your advertisers. In fact it will be a profitable move for you.

Send your reporter out among the trade to look up facts and figures. Secure copies of mail order catalogues, compare prices and tabulate results, and we are much mistaken if you do not discover that in the end, you will be able to make out a strong case for the local merchant. Several papers have done this. Some give space to a discussion of the problem every week and these are the papers that are making good in the advertising department.

It is the ignorant salesman who is timid, who does not remember what to say at the right time, or, if he does, is afraid to mention the article because he is not posted.

The man who is posted on his line has the feeling that he has something that will benefit others, and he goes after his customer with an enthusiasm that wins.

Tom Plowman lived on a section farm
Not far from a prosperous village;
He worked late and early and calloused his palm,
But thrived by industrious tillage.

He saved up some money and stood very well,
His luck would have lasted for all we can tell
If he never had heard of Chicago.

One day a big catalogue came through the mail
That told of a wonderful heater;
The figures were tempting, Tom swallowed the tale.
Says he, "Mr. Merchant's a cheater.

His profit must be near a hundred per cent.,
I'll just call his bluff and unless he'll relent
I'll order a stove from Chicago."

So he drove to the village and entered the store
With an air that was lofty and knowing.
Says he, "Mr. Merchant, please tell me once more
The price of that stove you were showing."

"Thirty-five, cash or credit, the best one in town."
Tom turned on his heel and went out with a frown,
And sent off a check to Chicago.

He bragged to his neighbors and they in a trice
Sent away for whatever they needed;
They often were stuck, but they got a low price,
Which, of course, was the one thing they heeded.

The merchant soon failed and sold out his store,
And this was the notice he left on his door:
"Gone to look for a job in Chicago."

Tom's mail order stove didn't work very long,
But no one in town could repair it;
At last he was forced to admit he was wrong,
His neighbors weren't slow to declare it.

With no stores there was no one to buy or to sell,
The drummers stopped coming, they closed the hotel,
'Twas surprising how quickly the town went to—well
A very long way from Chicago.

The lawyer, the doctor, the editor, too,
They all got cold feet very quickly;
The parson soon noticed the way the wind blew,
He left, for his children were sickly.

At last Tom decided to sell his old farm,
But no one, he found with the greatest alarm,
Would buy one so far from Chicago
When blank desolation stared Tom in the face

His courage grew weaker and weaker,
Till he made up his mind to get out of the place
And go on a jaunt as home seeker.
So he put on his overcoat, packed up his grip,
Says he, "I'll be giving my neighbors the slip,
For I must be off to Chicago."

When he got to the station to Tom's great surprise
He found it deserted and dusty,
Inhabited only by spiders and flies,
And the siding was crooked and rusty.

The trains flew by whizzing, Tom waited in vain,—
Says he "Neither merchant nor doctor nor train
Will stop any place but Chicago."

A Modern Grocery Warehouse

By HARRY FRANKLIN PORTER, C.F.

The largest grocer's warehouse in America has recently been erected in Philadelphia, and in addition to being noteworthy for its size, it stands forth as the embodiment of high engineering skill, in design, construction and equipment.

This model building which is shown herewith in process of construction, is for the Acme Tea Company, of Philadelphia, and is to be used as the receiving and distributing centre, and executive offices for their vast system of retail grocery stores, about 175 in number, located in every part of the city. It is eight stories above ground and one below, fronting on N. Fourth Street, Willow Street, York Avenue and Noble Street, covers 30,000 square feet and has a total floor area exceeding six acres.

THE ACME TEA CO.'S NEW WAREHOUSE IN PHILADELPHIA.

Concrete-Steel Construction.

It is of concrete-steel throughout—columns, beams and floors, with panel walls of brick carried on concrete beams. Windows have metal frames and sashes, glazed with wire glass; doors are metal clad and all openings of the loading platforms and driveways are guarded by rolling steel curtains. The body of the building is thus as fireproof and decay-proof as modern engineering skill can devise. To further protect the building, and more especially its contents, and to secure the absolute minimum insurance rate, there is provided a complete overhead, automatic sprinkler system, fed by a 45,000 gallon tank on the roof. Connected with this tank by powerful fire pumps, is a 100,000 gallon reservoir in the basement, which is fed from the city mains. Each floor is also equipped with fire hose throughout, and a complete fire-fighting outfit is provided on the roof for the purpose of extinguishing possible fires on adjoining properties. Protected thus, both building and contents are practically impregnable to fire, and the concrete-steel being the most durable material available to the builder to-day there will be practically no outlay required for maintenance or repairs, and no depreciation. The meaning of these facts in dollars and cents may well be appreciated.

The Machinery Equipment.

The building is equipped with a complete power and lighting plant, located in the basement, the floor of which, being eight feet below water level, necessitated special measures to make thoroughly water tight.

There are also complete refrigerating and coffee roasting plants. To handle the goods both in receiving and distributing, the building is equipped with fifteen fast running elevators, operated electrically. These elevators are arranged in groups of three each, enclosed in fireproof towers and guarded by steel doors of the Jackknife type, folding upwards, thus requiring minimum room.

Shipping Facilities.

Throughout the York Avenue side of the building on the ground level, is a stone-paved driveway, 30 feet in width by 200 feet in length, unobstructed by columns, protected with rolling steel shutters between the exterior columns, which may be closed in stormy or wintry weather, thus giving a warm dry space for loading and unloading wagons. The main portion of the first floor is 3½ feet above the driveway level and thus forms a platform for the wagons.

To receive shipments, a siding from the Philadelphia and Reading R.R., Willow Street branch, extends right through the Willow Street end of the building, on the level of the driveway, but at right angles to it. This is carried on the reinforced concrete floor. Throughout the length of this side of the building, door openings extend from column to column, provided with steel rolling shutters. This enables almost a train of cars to be unloaded at one time.

The goods, as received, are carefully inspected and sorted on the first floor, being distributed for storage throughout the various floors.

The building is equipped with two spacious fireproof tower stairways, and ample sanitary toilet rooms for male and female employes on all floors and spacious locker rooms.

A passenger elevator runs to the 8th floor, on which is located the executive offices, made especially light by a series of saw-tooth skylights. On this floor, also, are two large fireproof vaults, for safe-keeping of the records, etc., and a large well-appointed lunch room where all employes are served at noon hour.

For the engravings and information concerning this building we are indebted to William Steele & Sons Company, of Philadelphia, who were the architects, engineers and constructors.

THE WORLD'S MATCH DEMAND.

The civilized nations of the world strike 3,000,000 matches every minute of the 24 hours. Nearly one-half of these are ignited in this country. Americans use up the enormous total of 700,000,000,000 a year and have a larger match bill than any nation in the world.

Hundreds of factories over the country are engaged in this industry. Some of the plants are very large, one on the Pacific coast covering 240 acres, with 32 miles of railroad which supplies the match machines with 200,000 feet of sugar pine and yellow pine logs a day.

A statement of the number of cubic feet of wood which actually is converted into matches each year would convey only an inadequate idea of the number of trees required for the industry.

For the manufacture of the match the best grade of wood is necessary. Sapwood, knotty or cross-grained timber will not do. This makes it necessary to search the best forests and pick out the choice tree only, and nothing but the choice portions of the choice trees go to the match machines. It may be seen that the lumberman sweeps over a wide area in search of suitable timber to feed into the match machines.

Seldom is the little splinter tipped with sulphur, or some other substance to be ignited by friction, given even scant mention in the consideration of the depletion of the world's finest forests, yet the manufacturers of these little fire sticks are as much concerned over the timber supply question as any other class of men engaged in an industry whose welfare depends on the use of forest products.

It might be supposed that because matches are small the makers of them would utilize scraps and left-overs. This is never the case; matches are not by-products. The match machine takes the finest timber and what it rejects goes to the by-product yard and the by-product end of the match business becomes the largest end, so far as bulk is concerned. Among the by-products turned out by the large Pacific coast factory just mentioned are 1,000 doors and 800 sashes daily.

As a matter of fact, it would be impossible to carry on the match business at all at present prices if the rejected lumber were not worked into something else. The room where the matches are made is frequently the smallest department of a match factory. The larger portions contain the sawmills.

Matches are manufactured in many ways and with numerous kinds of machines, and for that reason a description of an operation in one factory would not apply to another. Nearly every manufacturing company has machinery made specially for its use and covered by patents and it also employs processes discovered or devised by its own chemists and mechanics, and kept secret to prevent rivals from obtaining and profiting by them. A single machine has been known to turn out 177,926,400 matches in one day—boxed and labeled ready for shipment.

Some matches are shaved with the grain from sawed blocks, some are cut both ways by saws. In some factories the blocks are boiled to make them cut easily. By some machines a boiled or steamed log is revolved on its own axis and a shaving—the thickness of a match—is cut round and round. This shaving is at the same time cut into lengths and split into match sticks. There is hardly a limit to the varieties of methods employed.—Commercial Bulletin.

A Delphic response. "It's hard," said the sentimental landlady at the dinner table, "to think that this poor little lamb should be destroyed in its youth just to cater to our appetites." "Yes," replied the smart boarder, struggling with his portion, "it is tough."—Congregationalist.

Some Advertising Problems

Suggestions for the Grocer in Country and Suburbs—Further Chats on Some Specimens—Conducted by W. F. Ralph.

It is conceded by most advertisers that the newspaper is, by long odds, the best medium in which a retailer may effectively talk to his public. But what of the retailer who has no newspaper at hand in which to advertise?

This is a problem which is faced by a considerable number of Canadian Grocer readers.

A store may draw its trade from a large, but scattered, population. There are many such stores in Canada, which form the nucleus of a small hamlet—almost large enough, in some cases, to be termed a village, yet not large enough to support a local newspaper.

Advertise they must, if such stores are to prevent a good deal of their trade from escaping to stores farther afield in larger places.

The newspaper published in a town several miles away may circulate among a certain number of such a store-keeper's customers, but probably not by any means the greater part of them. Perhaps the greater part of them read only a weekly paper published in one of the larger cities.

In the first case, were our storekeeper to take space in the paper taken by a minority of his possible customers he would be paying rates for a great deal of circulation which is of no use to him. In the case of the greater part of his possible customers who take only the large city weekly the same objection arises in an infinitely larger degree.

The Country Merchant's Dilemma.

What must he do? This was the question put to The Canadian Grocer a little while ago by a subscriber whose case was similar to that of the storekeeper above mentioned.

I have in mind at the present time a small village of two or three hundred population situated in the midst of a fine agricultural district. About twelve miles east of this village is a city of ten thousand people, where two daily and weekly newspapers are published. And about twelve miles south is a town of four thousand people where two weeklies are published.

Here are four papers which have more or less of a circulation among the natural storekeepers of the village, carrying the store news of other stores more or less completely among them. But if the merchants of that village—and there are six or seven stores there—were to advertise in all four of these papers, they would not, even then, properly cover their natural field. The cost of so doing would be prohibitive anyway. The trade of the village merchants is more or less casual at the present time because even the farmers within a half-mile of it save all their larger purchases for one or other of the larger towns to which they make a regular trip for selling, as well as buying, purposes.

Although it is hardly to be expected that the village merchants would, in any event, receive all the trade of farmers within two or three miles, it is reasonable enough to suppose that they could get considerably more of it than they actually do, were they to advertise for it.

But how to advertise?

Two Solutions Suggested.

There are two solutions. One is, that the merchants of a hamlet where no paper is published, persuade the publisher of the nearest or otherwise most available newspaper, to issue a special edition containing news of the locality and local advertising, and endeavor to work up a circulation for it among the population contiguous to that hamlet. The other solution is, informative circulars issued and distributed periodically.

The first plan is a very good one if it could be carried out. But unless the expense of drumming up a fair circulation for the special edition was considerably less than the advertising and subscription revenue from that special edition, it would be impossible. But the scheme is, nevertheless, quite feasible in many cases.

Periodically issued circulars seem to be a very good plan for the hamlet unserved by the press. If the circular is carefully gotten up, contains trade-inducing descriptions and prices, is well printed and gets into the right hands, it ought to bring business.

In a circular plan, the problem of a good delivery looms fairly large. A trustworthy boy on a bicycle seems a feasible, as well as an economical plan of delivery.

For the Man in the Suburbs.

A grocer who carries on business in a suburb of a large city is somewhat similarly situated with regard to advertising as his brother of the small village.

The suburban grocer has to cope with the large down-town department stores who can afford to use expensive space in the city daily, because they draw trade from all parts of the city instead of one corner of it.

Few suburban stores can afford daily newspaper space because their operations are necessarily restricted to their own suburb. An ad in the daily would, doubtless, reach many of their customers, but the rate charged would be for the entire circulation of the paper, most of which would be quite useless to them.

Therefore, in the suburbs of large cities, circulars are frequently resorted to by grocers with considerable success.

An Attractive Circular.

One of the best of these suburban circulars that has yet reached the Canadian Grocer is from J. Skelton's "Maple Leaf Grocery," 2012 Queen St. East, Toronto.

It is a neat four-page pamphlet. The cover contains the title: "The Maple Leaf Cash Grocery. J. Skelton," and the address, a half-tone of the store front, with delivery sleigh drawn up to the curb, all of which occupies the top half of the cover. The bottom half is occupied by the following captions, neatly arranged:

Not "How Cheap," but "How Good."

Quality the first consideration. Nothing too good for our customers.

Prices as Low as Any Regular Prices Anywhere in the City.

Full Weight, Full Count, Full Measure.

Satisfaction Guaranteed. Prompt and Attentive Service

Orders Called For and Delivered Promptly.

A Trial Order Solicited.

The second page enumerates a few specialties. The third page is headed with this caption: "Next after quality comes price economy. Do these prices interest you?" Then follows a number of staples with prices attached. The back page gives a crisp talk on the store's history and policy. All the way through, this circular is a model production, well calculated to pull business.

L. B. Cochran, of Medicine Hat, Alberta, has sent in a circular which he says brought him direct results from people who were not regular customers. As it thus performed the main function of advertising it must possess merit. It is printed on a sheet of blank note paper, headed, "New Goods Just Placed Into Stock at Cochran's." It then goes on to state that Mr. Cochran has just received a large consignment of fresh vegetables, etc. There is only one priced item on the page.

This circular strikes us as being a trifle uninteresting. The subject of it could have been made much more of with ease. There seems to be very little "ginger" in it. We fancy that three or four more priced items accompanied by appetite-creating descriptive paragraphs about the newly arrived dainties, would have brought in better results. The matter on the circular is of almost too general a nature to produce the maximum of result.

It is a well known fact that the mere recital of the arrival of a list of goods doesn't make so great an impression on the human mind as will a few specific items, each dealt with separately. It stands to reason that the more interestingly a fact is stated the more people can appreciate its importance.

Mr. Cochran tells us that his advertising in the newspapers has not been a success, while his circular brought in results. May we venture the opinion that perhaps his newspaper ads were of too general a nature? A newspaper ad designed to sell groceries must interest the reader personally. There must be something in it to appeal to his desire. A generality on quality and right prices can hardly be expected to pull very hard. The ad must deal with specific offers at specific prices for specific reasons. That's the only kind of an ad which really pulls hard.

What About Quoting Prices.

C. T. Farmer, of Perth, Ont., doesn't believe in quoting prices in every ad. He mentions the fact that in many of the smaller places farmers come into town peddling apples, potatoes, etc. If you are advertising these articles at a certain price, the farmer can cut under it, telling the people that his goods are the equal of yours, although the price is lower. Whereas if you are not advertising prices on these goods the people are not so easily persuaded that they are getting a bargain from the peddling farmer.

This seems to be a point well taken. But the price-quoting rule is none the less sound for an occasional exception, as Mr. Farmer readily agrees.

Some Ads From Perth.

We have several times had occasion to commend Mr. Farmer's excellent ads, and the batch just received is no exception. Mr. Farmer invariably uses small space and makes the best possible use of it. In fact, some of his ads—the one headed "California Celery," for instance—is worthy of larger space, if by so doing it would be seen by more people. This ad is really excellently worded. It has a "swing and a ring" to it which convinces. The set up on Mr. Farmer's ads is about as good as could be expected in such limited space (3 inches).

Some Helpful Hints.

A. Girard, jr., of the Co-operative Grocery Co., Montreal, sends in an ad which suffers considerably from overcrowding. It is an extremely well conceived and well-worded ad, but the space

> CALIFORNIA CELERY
>
> We have been fortunate in securing another crate of California Celery. It is much superior to Florida celery and the price, 2 bunches for 25c., is no higher.
> LILY WHITE LARD
> Lily White Lard has been our first quality lard for the past 5 years. In that time we have not had one complaint as to its quality. Try a pound at 15c.
> POTATOES
>
> Regular supplies of potatoes are now coming to hand. The quality is good, the price 75c. a bushel.
> We sell the famous California Seedless Lemons and Oranges.

occupied is much too small. The special proposition to sell butter at 31c per pound to purchasers of tea over 30c is worthy of more space. We fancy it would have attracted many more people if it had been given more prominence. But considering the fact that the general price of butter at the time this ad appeared was 35c, the reduced price in itself would probably be attractive, however crowded in with other things.

The layout on this ad is rather confusing, owing to the multiplicity of long lines of small print set solid. The ad would have been much more readable if set in single column style, thus shortening the length of the lines, with headings set across both columns. Three and a quarter inches is long enough for any line of body type; these lines are four inches, set in agate.

The legibility of an ad has a considerable effect on its success. People don't like to read eye-confusing masses, but something which can be run over with the least effort, which makes it incumbent on the grocer who would have a well set ad to get his copy into the printer's hands in lots of time to receive a proof and correct it to his liking.

ADVERTISING BUTTER.

Started the Career of One of America's Best-known Ad. Writers.

In a recent issue of Profitable Advertising Manley M. Gillam, advertising manager of John Wanamaker's department store, Philadelphia, tells how he became an ad.-writer. At the same time he enunciates what he has discovered by experience to be the best way of preparing copy. In essence Mr. Gillam's method is just about what has always been advocated as the most effective one in The Canadian Grocer.

Mr. Gillam says:

Here is my method of working. It requires neither genius nor midnight oil. It comes as naturally as a river flows, or it cannot be first best.

I do not believe in mosiac advertising—painfully built up with polished bits and tediously worked into a thing of cold beauty.

I prefer hot homeliness.

The mission of most advertising is to sell something. The advertiser is in effect a salesman. Not having tone variations and subject to changes to play with, not being able to help the development of that psychological moment and watch for the instant when conditions favor, he must arrest attention and bring conviction without help other than that he puts in the dressing of his subject.

It is now nearly thirty years since I wrote my first advertisement. That story has been told in one form or another at various times, and as I hark back across this generation of effort I see nowhere in my experience an instance that more clearly demonstrates what I consider the right thing in copy-making. If the same problem were before me to-day I would not alter the plan, nor could I improve on the work.

The Story of the Holsteins.

It is the story of the Holstein cattle—the Holstein butter. Mr. William M. Singerly, the owner of the Philadelphia Record, of which I was managing editor, had a prize-winning herd of a hundred or more Holsteins. They were stabled better than most human families are housed—scrupulously clean, fed on ensilage, their milk cooled in spring houses, the cream taken out by centrifugal separators, butter made from it in the most approved way.

That butter was put on sale twice a week in Twelfth Street market—at market price—and it didn't sell well. Those who got it might come again, but it simply ranked as "good butter."

"Don't you think you could advertise that butter and make it sell?" asked Mr. Singerly, and I said, "I'll try."

Here was the novice facing a problem. I knew how excellent, how sanitary, the butter was, but I dug deeper. There's a vital point—go to the very bottom of your subject. "What are Holsteins?" I asked myself. Then I read and read. And I found it was the oldest variety of cattle in the world that for more than a thousand years the Holstein had been a clearly defined breed—that the Dutch farmers had housed them in their homes and blanketed them on their dyke-bordered pastures for five hundred years before America was discovered. I found a wealth of other things about them, and I quickly decided on three advertisements to be used in the Record alone. "Antiquity of the Holsteins," "Holsteins in Europe," "Holsteins in America," to be set single column width, in old style pica, and, for an eye-catcher in the middle of each advertisement, an outline cut of a prize-winning Holstein cow.

The first advertisement was about half a column long, and not a single scale of an advertising snake appeared in it—nothing but snappy, newsy words of the Holsteins and how they began to cut a figure in the darkest of dark ages—and had been cutting it deeper and cleaner ever since. At the end of the story an agate paragraph said "Butter from a herd of Holsteins will be on sale at Stall No. — in Twelfth Street market at 10 o'clock this morning.

Surprising Results.

At noon not a pound of butter remained. The other two advertisements were written as planned—each about one-half column long. But there was no need for them.

Some time later Mr. John Wanamaker came to the Record office to get "the man who wrote that Holstein advertising." He got him.

I repeat, that nothing emphasizes my ideas on copy-making beyond what a careful weighing of this Holstein episode will suggest. First of all, I tried to master the subject to see why this Holstein butter ought to get favor. Then I tried to use a type and a picture that would arrest attention. My handling of the subject must do the rest.

No matter what the advertising problem, the same process applies to it.

If a business proposition has a right to succeed, there is something of novelty, of peculiarity, somewhere in the background; some feature of special interest that can be used as a peg on which to hang the spirit of the advertisement. That is the point to develop. If there are several of these points, so much the better—if you are doing a series. But for a single advertisement I would prefer a single point. Thrust it forward as you would speak of it to a friend.

I am called upon surely once a week, on the average, by graduates of advertising schools who want advice and help. The glibness with which these visitors name type faces and sizes, and the confident manner in which most of them say what shape and display an advertisement should have, carries a sad moral to my mind. Such knowledge presents only the shell, the husk, of the advertising question—a part that is practically valueless without the kernel of interest that must form the heart of any winning announcement. These visitors are, as a rule, hopeless failures as advertisers—will always be so—and yet a majority of them can talk more knowingly of the mechanics of an advertisement that I can.

The "Clothing" of an Ad.

Mind you, I am not meaning to say one word in disparagement of artistic set up and type harmony. I believe in both—pictures, too, very often. But they are the apparel. There must be something worth the clothing before there is excuse for putting it on. That something is the real advertisement. It is the steam in the engine, the life in the body. It is the vital spark, and it is just what the imitators miss. They mistake the form for the fact.

There is a fearful lot of soulless advertising in sight all the time. It is in the trail of such advertising that the wrecks and skeletons of business are found.

No Belief in Patching.

When I speak of imitators I do not intend to argue for a copyright on expression. Hundreds, maybe thousands, of phrases that I have set going are still on the wing, and I am flattered by the fact. What I do shy at, however, is the work of the mental or physical scissors man who snatches bits of brightness from here and there and tries to patch them together as an original. It is like bedecking a beggar with a hodgepodge of finery; it hurts his alms-getting, and makes him more conspicuously than ever a tramp. On the other hand, a happy turn of thought minted by one mind, if it strikes congenial soil, inspires other pretty word plays, and may even be itself put into a new fabric with credit to all concerned.

The mission of advertising copy is to inspire interest.

"Ho fellows, here's a snake!"

Every boy within hearing is headed for the cry. Strike the right string and it matters little how you strike it—the music will be fetching. Head an advertisement of solid agate with one conspicuous word "Rheumatism" and every sufferer of that sort who sees the page will notice the advertisement and read it.

Belief and Enthusiasm.

Back of all really successful advertising copy is belief and enthusiasm.

I used to hear now and then a preacher who droned on of eternal fires and sizzling souls—with his audience half asleep. Let the weakest sister in a congregation shout "Fire!" because there is a fire, or she thinks there is fire, and something will happen. No odds what the sister wears, or if her voice be full or cracked, her word stirs just the same.

I do not believe in big copy or little copy. I would avoid anything like a monotony of copy. I would no more assign an arbitrary amount of space to the protean interests of a department store than I would to the news of a city. Everyone connected with a newspaper knows how news values fluctuate. Half a dozen pages for "locals" may be too few one day, two pages may be too many another day. It is best to err on the side of condensation in advertising as well as in news.

NEWSPAPERS AND MERCHANTS.

If it is true—and it certainly is true—that the modern newspaper would find it hard to exist without the advertising of merchants, it is no less true that the modern merchant can not get along without the newspaper. The merchants of any locality and the newspaper publishers of that locality certainly have mutual interests.

This fact is becoming recognized more and more every day. Consequently it is only natural that the newspapers should spend some considerable thought on how the advertising copy of their patrons can be improved and made more resultful.

The following article, entitled "How to Write Retail Advertising Copy" is one of a series which has been published in the columns of the Toronto World. It is well worth reading.

HOW TO WRITE RETAIL ADVERTISING.

By Herbert Kauffman, in the Toronto World.

A skilled layer of mosaics works with small fragments of stone—they fit into more places than the larger chunks.

The skilled advertiser works with small words—they fit into more minds than big phrases.

The simpler the language the greater certainty that it will be understood by the least intelligent reader.

The construction engineer plans his roadbed where there is a minimum of grade—he works along the lines of least resistance.

The advertisement which runs into mountainous style is badly surveyed—all minds are not built for high level thinking.

Advertising must be simple. When it is tricked out with the jewelry and silks of literary expression it looks as much out of place as a ball dress at the breakfast table!

The buying public is only interested in facts. People read advertisements to find out what you have to sell.

The advertiser who can fire the most facts in the shortest time gets the most returns. Blank cartridges make noise, but they do not hit—blank talk, however clever, is only wasted space.

You force your salesmen to keep to solid facts—you don't allow them to sell muslin with quotations from Omar or trousers with excerpts from Marie Corelli. You must not tolerate in your printed selling talk anything that you are not willing to countenance in personal salesmanship.

Cut out clever phrases if they are inserted to the sacrifice of clear explanations—write copy as you talk.

Sketch in your ad to the stenographer. Then you will be so busy "saying it" that you will not have time to bother about the gewgaws of writing. Afterwards take the typewritten manuscript and cut out every word and every line that can be erased without omitting an important detail. What remains in the end is all that really counted in the beginning.

Cultivate Brevity and Simplicity.

"Savon Francais" may look smarter, but more people will understand "French Soap." Sir Isaac Newton's explanation of gravitation covers six pages but the schoolboy's terse and homely "What goes up must come down" clinches the whole thing in six words.

The reader must be searched out by the copy. Big space is cheapest because it doesn't waste a single eye. Publicity must be on the offensive. There are far too many advertisers who keep their lights on top of their bushel—the average citizen hasn't time to overturn your bushel.

Small space is expensive. Like a one-flake snowstorm, there is not enough of it to lay.

Space a Comparative Matter.

Space is a comparative matter after all. It is not a case of how much is used as how it is used. The passengers on the limited express may realize that Jones has tacked a twelve-inch shingle on every post and fence for a stretch of five miles, but they are going too fast to make out what the shingles say, yet the two-feet letters of Brown's big bulletin board on top of the hill leap at them before they have a chance to dodge it. And at that it doesn't cost nearly so much as the sum total of Jones' dinky display.

Just so one ad, well written and attractively displayed continuously every day or every other day, for a year in one good newspaper, will find the eye of every reader, no matter how rapidly they may be "going" through the advertising pages.

ADVERTISING.

It is impossible to place a marked dollar in advertising, trace all its evolutions in the business world and finally sum up its effect upon the income side of the ledger. That's why, it requires nerve for some inexperienced advertisers to invest money without being able to see the day when the money will be returned with profit.

With the experienced advertiser it is different. He knows that advertising pays, although it may not pay every Saturday night. By consistent and persistent advertising he continues to roll up business with a steadily increasing velocity. The only uncertain part about his advertising profits is the ultimate limit to which profit may pile up. But that's the one uncertainty that pleases because of its uncertainty.—Trade.

DON'T BOTHER HIM.

Some local merchants—no, call them storekeepers, because they keep store—merchants advertise, do business, are wide awake—are like the fellow who was dozing in his store one day when a little girl with a pitcher appeared in the doorway and asked for a quart of molasses. The storekeeper yawned, stretched himself, half opened his eyes, and then, in an injured tone, said: "Ain't there nobody in town that sells molasses but me?" Cobwebs, ancient goods—say you'll never find that fellow's name in a newspaper only in an insolvent notice or a sheriff's sale. He wouldn't be missed if he were buried. Don't bother him!

A. Shamass & Son, grocers, Blind River, Ont., are erecting a fine new store building. It will be 52 feet deep and 2 stories high, with a 46-foot frontage.

Grocery Window Dressing

EXAMPLES OF ATTRACTIVE DISPLAYS FROM DIFFERENT SECTIONS.

The ability to dress attractive grocery windows is certainly not confined to any district in Canada as the photographs reproduced herewith are an evidence. The importance of this branch of the grocer's business is coming more and more to be recognized and with this an improvement is taking place in the artistic and trade-drawing features of the Canadian grocery window.

The four specimens here reproduced are pretty good specimens of what may be done with different classes of goods under different circumstances.

A Window From Fernie, B.C.

Window No. 1 comes from Fernie, B.C., and is one which came nearly winning a prize in The Grocer's Christmas competition. It was shown in the grocery department of the Fink Mercantile Co., of Fernie some time last year and no doubt proved very attractive. This window, in a good many points, brings out the principles adopted as authoritative by those who know how in wondow-dressing. In the first place, it shows only one or two lines of goods and there is no confusion. Again, there is not too much in the window. The pails of jam and bottled goods are remarkably well arranged with no suggestion of overcrowding. One of the best points of all is that everything is scrupulously clean, the white covering on the floor lending a touch of daintiness to the whole window.

The tissue paper napkins as they are arranged on the glass plates and the table in the centre help to take away a touch of stiffness which might otherwise be present. The row of china along the window front was another good idea.

A Fruit Window From Guelph.

Window No. 2 comes to us from Guelph, where it helped to sell a few extra orders of goods for Wesley Fielding during Easter week. The window was dressed by Wm. McRae. As will be noticed, it is a display of fruit and flowers with a few vegetables thrown in as an incidental suggestion. In this case the dresser has followed the "mass" plan and filled the window with the goods he wished to display. In some cases this may be advisable but in our opinion it tends to make the window look overcrowded and take away the tasty effect which could be obtained by using fewer goods. Mr. McRae tells us, however that this window did the work in bringing people in and inducing them to buy, so it must be alright.

A Montreal Cereal Window.

While the early summer isn't perhaps the best time to display cereals, window No. 3, which graced the store of P. Campbell & Co., Montreal, last fall, gives an excellent suggestion regarding this kind of work.

The business of Campbell & Co. has since the photo was taken, been taken over by Kingsley Harrison, who is doing some good work with the windows himself. A correspondent writes regarding this window: The front of this window was composed entirely of ferns, and behind on a higher level were arranged boxes of orange meat. The main centre piece of the window was also its chief attraction, being a huge fancy basket laden with fruit. The back of the window was made up entirely of bags of Ogilvie's flour. The sides and back of the whole display were enlivened by flowers and sheaves of grain. The top of the window was made of white and red ribbons arranged on a light wooden framework and electric lights greatly added to the beauty of the evening scene.

The doorway entering beside the display window was extended by plants and grain into a very attractive archway.

The business returns were of such a nature as to leave Campbell & Co. amply repaid for their work and convinced that tasteful window-dressing can not be neglected by the grocer who seeks the highest success.

AN ATTRACTIVE WINDOW FROM FERNIE, B.C.

AN EASTER FRUIT WINDOW FROM GUELPH.

Another From Moose Jaw.

While window No. 4 can scarcely be called an example of window-dressing, it gives a good idea of what an effective display may be made with fruit in baskets and is particularly seasonable with the summer fruit season coming on. It shows also something of how much Ontario fruit goes to the West, coming as it does, from Moose Jaw, from the store of T. J. McCammon. In explanation of the photograph Mr. McCammon writes as follows:

"One afternoon last summer we were busy unloading a car of Ontario grapes and as our display was being arranged a gentleman came along, just off the train, and he was attracted by the very magnificent, he called it, display of fruit. In his remarks he said he had been all over Ontario pretty much and he did not think that he had ever seen a finer display of fruit, adding that he would like to have a photo of this display to take back to Ontario to show the people that while we do not grow fruit out here we have it for sale in abundance. This is why we had it photographed.

"I might say that a display of this kind is nothing unusual with us. Had it been we would have had it photographed long ago. Eastern people are under the impression that fruit is almost a luxury in this western country but it is not. Any kind and all kinds of fruit can be had here that can be had in any other country and the same might be said of vegetables. We have them in abundance, but we grow these ourselves."

MORAL EFFECT OF GOOD WINDOW DISPLAY.

Once there was a boy whose distinguishing characteristic was the fact that he would never keep his hands clean. In despair his mother showed him a pretty ring which she promised him as a reward for carefully washing his hands three times a day for a month. At the end of one week of religious observance of his promise to do so the allurements of the old life claimed him for a victim and he fell from grace with a great crash to the extent that soap and water seemed put out of his life forever.

Whether or not this brilliant scheme of the mother was the demonstration of the faculty which philosophers (and women) are pleased to call woman's "sixth sense," it failed, as demonstrations of the sixth sense usually do. The father then came to the rescue with a little common sense and gave the boy the ring. Thereupon he became so proud of his hands that they have never been known to be dirty in company from that day until this.

It is a well-known fact that in manufacturing concerns clean surroundings tend to a higher standard of workmanship among the employes. If this is true of a factory which is usually hidden away from the public gaze, what must be the moral effect of clean surroundings in a retail business which has to depend upon the public for its welfare? If neatness in the store and display window is attractive, elegance must be decidedly alluring. That this latter is a fact is proven by the elegant stores of many twentieth century dealers who have taken advantage of the popular demand for cheerful surroundings to incorporate into their places of business a tone of elegance which would have been the wonder of tradesmen of thirty years ago, the majority of whom believed that a store should consist of a few counters and shelves and a stock of goods (there are many of them still in business).

The growing tendency of the times, especially in the cities, is one that demands modern methods. And in adopting these methods it is but natural that the window should receive the first share of attention, as it is a magnet, having power to convert the indifferent public into interested customers.

Starting with the display window, many a merchant has discovered that the interior of the store has gradually taken on a more modern aspect, until in course of time the entire store has undergone a radical change from the result of a small beginning. For a good window display has a greater effect than the direct sales which it will be seen to accomplish from day to day. It influences clerks in the store, encouraging them in habits of neatness and in keeping the stock clean and in systematic order to correspond with the window. The public looks upon the store having tasty window displays as one in which a complete and well arranged stock, polite and well-dressed clerks and other attractive features, will be found.

But they do not look for these things behind unclean and disorderly windows.

The effects of these things on trade is so enormous as to defy reasonable estimate. The merchant who wishes to prove this will not have far to seek, as examples of such stores abound on every hand.—Bent Twigley, in Hardware.

A HARVEST SALE WINDOW.

Window display is advertising of the best kind, and should always be classified as such. The window setting should never be so elaborate as to be confusing, or to detract from the goods on display, yet a window that simply shows a selfish desire to sell goods does not make the best impression. In the best trimmed windows the color scheme season and general effect are in true harmony. There must be changes in your decorative scheme, as the public soon tire of sameness, and then your windows will lose a great deal of their true value.

Just a touch of flowers, fruit, foliage, etc., suggestive of the season or sale makes the best possible guide for your setting. Next, one must take into consideration, simplicity and practicability.

With very little effort, a trim can be placed in a number of graceful positions. To still further carry out the harvest effect, a row of wheat can be placed at the front of the window against the glass, and vases or sheaves of wheat can be placed artistically throughout the trim.

Corn, oats, pumpkins and cornucopias of vegetables or fruit can be effectively used, instead of wheat, or in conjunction. This decorative scheme can also be used as an interior decoration, especially along the side walls above the shelving. The sheaves of wheat in connection with the yellow and tan ribbons make a very pretty color effect.

In getting the wheat, be sure to select well-formed and clear-colored stalks, as they will add much to the beauty of the design. Poor, scraggy-looking sheaves of grain will be anything but effective.—Winnipeg Commercial.

A SHOE POLISH WINDOW.

A seasonable window at present is one of shoe polishes.

Cover the floor and back with crepe paper. Cover an ordinary soap box with crepe paper and lay in the back of the window at the centre.

Lean a board covered with crepe paper against this box; on this box put two shoes, one dusty and dirty and the other polished.

Draw a couple of hands and print "before" on one and 'after" on the other. Tack these on the front of the box.

Run a number of streamers from the box to the top of the window.

Stand several boxes of blacking and a blacking brush on top.

Pile several kinds of blacking, whitening and tan polish around the floor of the window with the prices on.—Grocery World.

A BALLAD OF VEGETABLES.

A potato went out on a mash
  And sought an onion bed;
"That's pie for me!" observed the squash,
  And all the beets turned red.
"Go 'way!" the onion, weeping, cried;
  "Your love I cannot be;
The pumpkin be your lawful bride,
  You cantaloupe with me."

But onward still the tuber came,
  And lay down at her feet;
"You cauliflower by any name
  And it will smell as wheat;
And I, too, am an early rose,
And you I've come to see;
So don't turnip your lovely nose,
  But spinachat with me."

"I do not carrot all to wed,
  So go, sir, if you please!"
The modest onion meekly said,
  "And lettuce, pray, have peas!
Go, think that you have never seen
  Myself, or smelled my sigh;
Too long a maiden I have been
  For favors in your rye!"

"Ah, spare a cuss!" the tuber prayed;
  "My cherryshed bride you'll be;
You are the only weeping maid
  That's current now with me!"
And as the wily tuber spoke
  He caught her by surprise,
And, giving her an artichoke,
  Devoured her with his eyes.

Successful Canadian Retailers

Life Stories of Grocers in Various Parts of the Country who have Fought and Won Success.

What qualities spell success in the grocery business? With a view to answering this question, the life stories of several leading Canadian retailers have been secured and are given herewith. A study of these will be of interest, as well as profitable to every aspirant for honors in the grocery business.

FORTY YEARS IN THE SAME STORE

Forty years continuously in the grocery business at the same stand is the somewhat unique record of Robert McConnell, 603-609 Main Street, St. John N.B.

Starting out in a small way on May 1, 1868, Mr. McConnell by untiring energy and close attention to business has built up his present trade and he now has one of the most important grocery stands in the north end of the city.

Naturally in forty years a merchant sees many changes in the methods of doing business and in the class of goods offered for sale, so a representative of The Grocer called on Mr. McConnell to hear from him something of his experiences.

Previous to starting in the grocery business Mr. McConnell was employed in the timber ponds at St. John, for in those days wooden shipbuilding was one of the big industries in the Maritime Provinces and especially St. John and what is now being utilized fo wharves, warehouses, railway tracks and streets, etc., was 40 years ago a series of timber ponds and shipbuilding yards. Now big steel ships come up to the wharves and tie up where the big wooden vessels were formerly constructed.

The store in which Mr. McConnell started out is now used for meats and provisions in front and storage purposes in the rear while a larger store adjoining secured twenty-two years ago by reason of increasing business, is utilized for general groceries. Both buildings are owned by Mr. McConnell and he is also the owner of several nearby properties.

"It was pretty hard, uphill work for the first few years," said Mr. McConnell. "but I stuck to it and worked night and day, often starting out at 5 o'clock in the morning and working until midnight.

"There was no delivery system those days. If a man wanted a bushel of potatoes or apples or something of that sort he carried them home on his back, now we have to keep two or three horses and the team out with half a pound of tea. In those days we could make a fair living profit, now it is so cut up, there is practically no money in it.

"Forty years ago if we had a couple of cases of canned goods we thought we were well fixed, now everything nearly is in cans or packages. When I started in business I had the first plate glass windows that were placed in the north end."

Mr. McConnell is probably older in the grocery business in St. John than any of the other dealers, as he can remember when nearly all of them opened up. He can look back over a succession of heavy losses through bad debts, and feels that he has been extremely lucky to come through as well as he has. He would like to see business conducted on a cash basis, but cannot see how this can come about under present conditions and can only profit by past experiences to exercise caution in not getting too much on his books.

He attributes his success to honesty and fair dealing; giving the people what they want, careful attention to all orders and selling good goods at the lowest possible price, keeping a fair profit.

He is assisted in his stores by a son, Robert, a lady book-keeper, two clerks and a teamster, while several other sons assist in the Saturday night rushes.

Mr. McConnell is now in his 67th year. He has six sons and two daughters living. One son, George, is traveler for Jones & Schofield, wholesale grocers, St. John and another, Robert, works with his father.

Mr. McConnell is still vigorous and will no doubt continue for some years yet to supply the wants of his many customers in Canada's winter port.

A MONTREAL GROCER'S SUCCESS.

The subject of this sketch was born in Montreal May 10, 1842, and is therefore sixty-six years of age. His parents were sturdy Scotch pioneers, who settled in Montreal at the beginning of the last century. Mr. Robertson has always resided in Montreal, with the exception of a few years, during which he lived in Ottawa and Picton and about a year, which he spent in and around the city of Memphis during the stirring times of the American civil war. Mr. Robertson engaged in the grocery business at a very early age, and has remained in it ever since. His first experience was gained in the store of a Mr. McCready, who kept a grocery on St. Antoine Street, and for his services there he received the sum of two dollars per month, board and lodging, and it was here that he laid the foundation of that knowledge which has contributed towards his splendid success as a grocer. Subsequently he engaged in business for himself, having a store on Phillips Square, ocupying a central position on the ground now covered by the Birks Building.

The transaction by which the Birks firm acquired this property to complete their extension took place nine years ago and then Mr. Robertson moved his business to its present location on St. Catherine St. west. Mr. Robertson was married in 1864 and by this union has two sons, both of whom are associated with him in business. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church and of St. Andrew's Society.

Consistently adhering to the traditions of his race in his pleasures, as his creed, Mr. Robertson is a member of the Caledonia Curling Club, a sport which he has participated in for a great number of years, in fact, all his life, and he has many times curled for the Governor-General's prize.

Mr. Robertson is no exception to the general rule of successful men as regards his personality. That magnetism which seems highly necessary to success in those who are forced to meet the public and conform to their ever-varying and vacillating moods is not an absent quality in this man with a face and a bearing which corresponds exactly to what our minds might con-jure up on the mention of the adjective venerable. He possesses, as an efficient adjunct, a perfect modesty in all matters except his health, which seems to be a vulnerable point in the character of their reminiscences with most men of comparatively advanced ages. That oft-repeated little boast, "I could make many a young man hustle even at my age;" is an excusable little conceit because we know in the large majority of cases the ability to make this boast is the fruit of a life of right living and observation of the laws of common sense.

When questioned about the elements of his success there was no flowery dessertation on original or striking methods, but a simple adherence to the good old rules of perseverance and dogged determination to make the most of what he had at hand and perhaps the best example of this would be the attractive window displays which have always caused a lingering in the passing mob in front of his store. He is steadfast in his faith in this means of advertising, and then, what is better than all, his store of things to eat always looks delectable, because that quality next to godliness pervades everything.

A philosopher has said if a man wants success there are two ways of obtaining it. One is, "To do the ordinary extraordinarily well" and the other is "To do the extraordinary" and there seems to be not many better examples of those who have won success by the former means than Mr. Robertson.

Once in a reminiscent mood he told of the stirring times in the Southern States during the Civil War, of his experiences in Memphis, Tenn., and the difficulties which beset their movements and the obstacles to be overcome when they wished to leave Memphis, which in times of war, was a dangerous undertaking. However, finally he and his comrade succeeded in passing beyond the war zone. With these experiences there passed from him the promptings of the wander lust and he returned to his native land and resumed his labors as a grocer, which has been his own particular sphere of activity ever since. It seemed almost superfluous to ask how he occupied his moments of relaxation from business, knowing his religion to be Presbyterian, his nationality Scotch and his vocation business.

The query elicited a delightful resume of the various contests for the Governor-General's trophy and many other keenly-contested encounters in the curling world. Mr. Robertson has been an ardent admirer of this good old Scotch sport since his young days and for many years has been a member of the Caledonia Club. In view of his life-long residence in Montreal with a few short absences he has watched the development of this city from an inconspicuou position among the great cities of the world to the metropolis of a country which has already taken its place among the great nations of the world and here it may be said that this progress has been due in a large measure to men who have possessed those sturdy qualities which ultimately win and which insure steadiness of advancement to a young nation.

A SASKATCHEWAN PIONEER.

Saskatchewan's history is a short one, it being only a comparatively few years since the first settlement was made in that part of the west, but its development has been rapid and already it is of interest to discover the pioneer merchants of that province. J. B. Preston, of Carnduff, whose photograph appears herewith, claims the distinction of being the pioneer merchant of Southern Saskatchewan and it is a distinction of which he has every right to be proud. The proprietor now of one of the best stores in the west, he can regard with complacency the early struggles against the disadvantages that belong to a new and thinly-settled country. He can feel that he is rightfully entitled to the rewards that come to the enterprising merchant who grows up with a new town in a new country.

We have in our possession, which unfortunately will not permit of photographic reproduction, the first invoice of goods shipped to Southern Saskatchewan, and the original is highly prized by Mr. Preston. He was one of the early settlers in the west, having been in the milling business in Pilot Mound, Man., as early as 1879. Having lost his plant by fire and having had the misfortune to lose an arm in a sawmill accident, he gave up the milling business in 1882 and moving farther west, settled near the site of the town of Carnduff, which has since come into existence.

While here, he conceived the idea of starting a small store, and the first invoice of goods, amounting in all to $105.30, was bought July 18, 1884 from Baird Bros., who conducted a "wholesale and retail" business in Pilot Mound. With this stock was started the first store in Southern Saskatchewan, and it was carted by ox team several hundred miles over almost trackless prairie.

From this small beginning Mr. Preston has built up a prosperous business, which has grown and developed as the Southern Saskatchewan district has grown. He has reaped the reward which is the just due of the pioneer.

Always a public spirited citizen, Mr. Preston has held many positions of honor and trust in his community. On Sept. 13, 1905, he was elected the first mayor of the newly-incorporated town of Carnduff and at each succeeding election he has been returned by acclamation.

"She seemed to be very particular about those goods she bought," remarked the merchant.

"Yes," replied the salesman, "she said she wanted to be sure they were the real thing; she didn't want any cheap imitation."

"But they were a cheap imitation."

"Oh, no; I raised the price."—Philadelphia Press.

CHAPTER II.

He who sleeps beneath the fruit tree must be contented with windfalls. The one who climbs the ladder plucks the choicest fruit.

Pure grit constitutes one of the most essential elements of successful salesmanship. It is the best there is in a man; it is that fine quality that whispers in our ear in moments of discouragement, "Never lie down." When exhausted and sinking in the mire of Despond, it calls cheerily from the banks of Hope along the shore: "Don't give up! I'll pull you out."

It does not fall to the lot of the average man to have more hard knocks than he can stand. If he has Pure Grit and a sound heart, there is always open to him an avenue of escape, by which he can avoid the knock-out blow that would put him down and out for good. If he does lie down, there is a lack of manliness in him.

Pure Grit Required.

The journey over the flinty pathway of the business life is not unlike a ride on a lumber wagon over a roadway strewn with boulders in a mountainous country. There is a constant jolting and danger of being thrown from the seat; axles creak and groan as you rattle on over bogs and rocks; now and then a precipitous plunge into one of Nature's ditches causes a shiver to run through your stanch vehicle from stem to stern, but all goes well until a sharp turn in the road brings you face to face with a large boulder square in your path. Before you can rein up and put on brakes, snap goes the axle. You climb out to examine the break, and with an exclamation of dismay you wonder what you are going to do next; then, looking about in your perplexity, your see a blacksmith coming toward you in the form of a good genie, Pure Grit. You failed to notice him, his little shop having been hidden from view by the turn in the road. The damage repaired, with a smile of encouragement the good genie sends you on your way rejoicing, cautioning you to drive more carefully. Everything goes all right for a time, but the journey grows tiresome and you relapse into carelessness, with a light grip on the rein; or, seeing a smooth strip ahead of you, you whip up at a reckless pace, unmindful of the deep gully just beyond, until suddenly snap goes something else. This time the break is in all likelihood more serious. In despair, the realization is forced upon you that you are a long way from home, darkness is coming on, there is no shelter, nor any provisions for either man or beast. With many a misgiving you set about making repairs alone; it is hard work, and the experience is new and rough. You scarcely know how or where to begin; the task seems a hopeless one. Just as the last hope is giving way, you look up and perceive standing before you in the doorway of his little shop the good genie, Pure Grit. He is beckoning you to come in; you wonder why you had not noticed him before. Once more he comes to the rescue and repairs the break, cautioning you the meanwhile to drive more carefully. You mount the seat more confident than ever that the road can hold no more terrors, but the good genie knows the road better than you do, and, not trusting you to drive alone this time, he climbs up on the seat by your side and rides along until he is convinced that you are determined to keep a sharp outlook to the end of the journey.

Robert Collyer, in a famous lecture touching this subject, said:

"Clear grit is the power to say 'No' to what seem to be a multitude of angels, when they would counsel you away from a downright loyalty to your instant duty. . . Simply determine once for all that any torment for being a true man is to be preferred to any bliss for failing."

Mr. Collyer lived in Chicago when the population numbered about one hundred thousand. During his twenty years' residence there he became quite intimate with the life of that great city, and in the early times knew every man who had come to the front and was wielding a real power of any sort for good. He says:

"I do not remember one among them who did not begin his life as a poor man's son. They all came up, so far as I could trace them, without any good time at all, excepting as boys ought to have a good time in growing strong as a steel bar on plenty of wholesome work and what we should call hard fare; fighting their way to an education through a great deal of effort, and then, when they are ready, coming out west from the east with that half-dollar in their pocket, and that little lot of things done up in a valise that you will notice every young fellow is said to start with who ends up by making his mark or making a fortune."

Perhaps the first characteristic of Pure Grit lies in the power to do a good honest day's work, and this power to do a good honest day's work lies at the root of every true life.

And yet it is just what a great number of salesmen try not to do, as if they felt that the best thing is to get the most money possible for the least work possible, and very often for the poorest work possible too, and that the best success they can attain in this world is that which comes through what we call good luck. It seems as if young men began their life in this, the twentieth century, dazzled by "get-rich-quick" opportunities that seem open before them on every hand. A few, a very few, seem to strike it "lucky," but the great majority who coquette with the chances to get along easily, which seem as plentiful as flies in summer time, generally find themselves at last either in the penitentiary or the poorhouse.

They will try this and then that, and

THE EASIER PATH.

The traveler's path is generally easier to tread if his prospect already knows something about him or the firm he represents. It makes the retailer familiar with the traveler's house—when that house is an advertiser.

A wholesale house or manufacturing establishment which advertises well in the trade paper devoted to its branch of business activity, stands higher in the estimation of the retailer than the house which does not.

Stands to reason, doesn't it?

generally fail at everything they do try, if this is all they want to do; then they wait for something to turn up, instead of turning something up for themselves. The man who sat down on a log waiting to get warm enough to chop down a tree, froze to death.

Commercial achievement does not come to the drone, neither is it a product of luck or chance.

"The career of every successful business man is a ladder of effort and results, and the strength of the effort is the measure of the result."

Luck and chance do not enter the struggle at any stage.

Your present position may not be congenial; but all that can be changed, if you but set your goal post far out in the field of endeavor and strive with all your might to reach it.

The stock-boy that sets his mind on a general salesmanship position is bound to have his desire gratified. The general salesman that sets his mind on heading the list in the sales of his house will as surely realize his ambition as the morning's sun follows the deep shadows of night.

"Where there is a will there is a way," and that way is not the way of the thoughtless, the ignorant and the indolent, but is the way of the striving, the intelligent, and the ambitious.

How well I remember my first employer! He was the hardest taskmaster in the world, I thought, when I got my start in life; but now I know he was one of the best. I would prefer to write about your experiences, but not knowing them, I hope you will be interested in mine.

No experience of my lifetime has been so thoroughly and indelibly stamped upon my memory as was my first three years in the wholesale dry goods house of S. L. & Co., of Detroit, my boyhood home town. I began at three dollars per week, with a raise of one dollar in the second year, and two the third. I had the linen and white goods stock. The work was heavy and the hours were long. We had it drilled into us in those days that orderliness was—if not next to godliness—next to the next step in promotion. We were taught that a good stockkeeper was a logical candidate for a house salesmanship, after which, the road.

Idleness a Crime.

There was no standing around in cliques discussing the latest sporting edition, no prevailing idea, as now, that working when there was nothing to do was a mere pretence for work. Idleness amounted almost to a crime then; it does now, but plenty of young men do not realize this truth.

The covers removed from the piles of goods, the dusting finished, which took about an hour, for it had to be done thoroughly, bringing down the reserve stock was next in order. The tables rearranged, we set about repairing broken covers of boxes, or we re-wrapped goods which had been in stock a long time. Everything had to be spotless and in apple-pie order; so when this result was attained, we started in to dust all over again, even polishing the edges of tables and counters with a cloth. There was keen rivalry among the boys to see whose stock could be made to look the best. By the middle of the forenoon work began to get pretty scarce, but there was no getting away from it, for if one of us began to take an idle stroll in the next boy's stock, the floor manager would appear around the corner of an aisle to make his usual morning inspection. It used to bother us a great deal to know how he figured out to spot us right to a dot, which he did with unerring accuracy.

Having satisfied himself that there was really nothing more of importance to do, he would order an entire table of goods to be torn down and rearranged. We hated him for it, but it was good exercise and kept us out of mischief, the twin brother of idleness, besides teaching us the lesson of "everlastingly keeping at it," which was then, as it is now, one of the cardinal principles of success. But there is a vast difference now as to the modus operandi.

Not Afraid of Dirty Work.

There were no janitors or scrubwomen in those days. Twice a week each stock-boy was obliged to sprinkle and sweep the floor in his stock, and even wash the windows and clean the woodwork. We rather balked at this; it hurt our pride a little, but beyond that no harm was done.

Things have changed; whether for better or worse must be argued elsewhere. One thing is certain, the bright, industrious stock-boys of a decade or two ago are the successful merchants and salesmen of to-day. History repeats itself, and no doubt the future will take care of itself; but a grave danger confronts the merchant in the too rapid promotion of the boys in stock, the tendency being to "nip the flower in the bud." There is plenty of good raw material, but too rapid growth and not enough care in selection. The demand for high-grade men is ever on the increase; it behooves the boys in the ranks to keep their feet on the ground —which is the humble position the rest of us occupy—to have something to set them down on when they become tired.

My first desire to sell goods amounted to almost a longing. It attacked me early. I had been wrestling with dry goods boxes and feather dusters for about a year and a half, when all of a sudden the seed burst forth, unfolding the petals of a new life, the freedom and brilliancy of which fairly dazzled me, young as I was.

One day a handsome, finely attired chap, with a flow of English that sounded to me like a lesson in rhetoric, appeared in the store. He hailed from New York with a line of linens. When he encountered the buyer in my department there commenced at once a contest of wits that to this day I have never heard equalled.

Selling Germ Got Him.

Sheltered by a pile of friendly damask I eagerly listened to all that was said, making mental blueprints of the whole dialogue, even jotting down some of the good points. In the selling talk of that dapper salesman lurked the germs of a new life for me. I became inoculated with a burning desire to do something and be something; the determination to become a salesman seized me on the spot; my future was sealed; I knew it, felt it, breathed it, and was content to bask in the rays of its stimulating influence.

I was at the foot of the mountain, and the way up looked steep and strewn with boulders, but the strength of my determination made the pathway seem easy and gave me a glimpse of the glorious outlook at the top.

At last an opportunity came to make my first step. It was just a little one, so small that some would have passed it by, not realizing that it really was an opportunity. It happened that one of the house salesmen who looked after the German trade had a small customer from a side street in the house buying white goods. Having been called away to meet a more important buyer, he turned his little customer over to me with the joking side remark, "Sell him a good bill, my boy. He's good for it," and was gone. I was frightened half out of my wits at being left alone for the first time with a real customer. I had handled many in fancy since the great event of the New York salesman's visit. I stood for a moment helpless and undecided, but was promptly brought to by Hans, who, having noticed my backwardness, said with some spirit, "Vill you do me sometings?" The spark ignited the powder, and the way I lighted into that poor little side street merchant was worthy of better results than the amount of his bill afterwards showed. I had my notebook to prompt me with my New York friend's ideas, and many a furtive glance I stole at it when Hans was not looking. He must have thought I was suffering with St. Vitus' dance, for the contortions of salesmanship I went through in a vain effort to make him take two pieces of bird's-eye linen in place of one would, with a little more polish and experience, have landed a contract for a suspension bridge.

Goes on the Road.

Two years of waiting, and my dream became a reality when I secured a position on the road with a neighboring wholesale millinery house, and my cup of happiness was filled to overflowing at the thought of becoming a real salesman and closing the old life forever.

I was fortunate in securing a little business in my first town, and when I had finished writing and mailing the order to the house that night, I went up to my room and literally threw up my hat in giving vent to my feelings. I regarded my subsequent sales for weeks as corner stones in the superstructure of my building toward success, and the final results of each month whether large or small, as filling-in stones to its completion.

My salary contract for one year was at six hundred dollars. The salesman ahead of me was getting one thousand, and I said to myself I must have that much next year. It seemed a fortune, and the thought was ever with me that if I could earn one thousand dollars per year I would have reached the end of the rainbow. Having secured that, I wanted fifteen hundred, then eighteen hundred. Finally arriving at two thousand five hundred, I paused and looked back over the six preceding years in an effort to measure the future by the past. The thought occurred to me that but one-third of my life had been spent in climbing, figuring it from the usual estimate of "threescore years and ten," and why stop there? The mountain was high, and the distance to the top yet a long way up.

As a Man Thinketh.

That was years ago, and I expect to keep on climbing until I die. But I have not engaged to write a history of my life. In passing, I wish merely to emphasize the words of James Allen in his most excellent little book, "As a Man Thinketh:"

"Into your hands will be placed the exact results of your efforts. You will receive that which you earn—no more, no less. Whatever your present circumstances might be, you will fall, remain, or rise with your efforts, your visions, your aim.

"To desire is to obtain; to aspire is to achieve. The thoughtless, the ignorant, and the indolent, seeing only the apparent effect of things, and not the things themselves, talk of luck, of fortune, and of chance. Seeing a man grow rich, they say, 'How lucky he is!' Observing another becoming intelligent, they exclaim, 'How highly fortunate he is!'

"They do not see the trials, the failures, the struggles which these have encountered; have no knowledge of the sacrifices they have made, of the undaunted efforts they have put forth that they may overcome the apparently insurmountable, and realize the goal of their ambition. They do not know the darkness and the heartaches; only see the light and joy, and call it 'luck;' do not see the long and arduous journey, but only the pleasant goal, and call it 'good fortune;' do not understand the process, but only perceive the result, and call it 'chance.'"

Cannot Serve Two Masters.

Successful salesmanship is the product of intelligent, earnest effort. There is no serving two masters, Indolence and Industry. It is climb, climb, climb, all the way, exercising watchful care; but the summit of the mountain is your reward. The pleasure is not all in winning, by any means; the real exhilarating fun, or two-thirds of it, is in the climbing.

Self-deception is responsible for more than three-fourths of the so-called "unexplained failures" in salesmanship. Many salesmen in the race for success explain their shortcomings as they do in a game of tenpins. If they fail to win something is wrong with the alley, or the pins are not spotted, or their arm is out of whack. The trouble is never with themselves.

You cannot afford to fool yourself. Your success depends absolutely upon the amount of skill and energy you throw into your work.

If you are always on the anxious seat about your position, the fault is with yourself, not with your house, your territory, or your line. Just as the poor workman always finds fault with his tools, so does the poor salesman complain of his surroundings.

Your light will not be hid under a bushel, your capabilities will be recognized. The good salesman will succeed with a weak line and a poor territory, and then hunt around for something better with which to fit the growth of his expanding powers; but the poor salesman is a poor salesman still. The best line in the universe cannot supply the missing link in his negative make-up.

Don't imagine you are kept down by lack of your employer's appreciation. If you do, you fool yourself, and will remain a dwarf forever.

Of all the disgruntled failures, those who deserve the least sympathy are the ones who gather in foolish little cliques, praise each other, deceive each other, and fool themselves. It is a great thing to know yourself and acknowledge your mistakes.

Have Faith in Yourself.

Have faith in your own ability to win. Cut loose from the weakness that prompts you to say:

"I am not appreciated;" "I have had bad luck all my life;" "Others have had a better chance;" "I wish I could have the good fortune of Jones or Smith or Brown."

Remember that there may be undiscovered diamonds in your own back yard.

Determine that in your case you will not recognize failure, and that "explanation is damnation."

Success lies in your ability to discover and apply your own powers. Excuses and the admission of failure are the thieves that rob you of your strength, causing you to play against yourself and fool yourself in the bargain.

A salesman is what his spirit and his determination are. Nothing hurts except that which weakens our minds by weakening our courage.

The salesman should say, "I will stand what comes, I won't give in. No matter what the discouragements, I am going to climb this mountain Success, from the bottom up, just as well as I know how. No matter what happens, I am going to reach the top, if possible, with just as much Pure Grit as I had when I began the journey."

Don't Get Discouraged.

The "Chicago Examiner," in an editorial on courage, related the following story:

"In this street of Life, walking in the darkness of the shadow, hungry old Satan was out hunting with his dogs, the little imps of human weakness.

"A man came walking through Life's street.

"Satan said to the little devil, with a bitter face, 'Go, get him for me.'

"Quickly the imp crossed the street, silently and lightly hopped to the man's shoulder. Close in his ear he whispered:

"'You are discouraged.'

"'No,' said the man, 'I am not discouraged.'

"'You are discouraged.'

"The man replied this time, 'I do not think I am.'

"Louder and more decidedly the little imp said again: 'I tell you you are discouraged.'

"The man dropped his head and replied: 'Well, I suppose I am.'

"The imp hopped back to Satan and said proudly: 'I have got him, he is discouraged.'

Another man passed. Again old Satan said, 'Get him for me.'

"The proud little demon of discouragement repeated his tactics.

"The first time that he said, 'You are discouraged,' the man replied emphatically, 'No.'

"The second time the man replied, 'I tell you I am not discouraged.'

"The third time he said: 'I am not discouraged. You lie.'

"The man walked down the street, his head up, going toward the light.

"The imp of discouragement returned to his master crestfallen.

" 'I couldn't get him. Three times I told him he was discouraged. The third time he called me a liar, and that discouraged me.' "

Reverses Become Benefit.

Make up your mind, Mr. Salesman, that the little demon whispering discouragement in your ear shall always get from you the answer, "You lie."

Temporary reverses are good for the spirit, strengthening to the mind; not calamities, but real benefits, if we receive them in the proper spirit.

A certain business man told the following story of a clerk in his establishment. The clerk was asked why he remained in a poorly paid position, when, by working a little harder and taking a little more interest in the business, he might get into a place that would lead to a salary three or four times as large as he was receiving.

"Oh," he said, "there's no chance for a fellow to make a hit here; all the good positions are taken, and whenever there's a prospective vacancy there are three or four fellows waiting to step into it. No; it's a poor chance a fellow has here, so what's the use of killing yourself? I'm not such a fool; I'm just hanging on here until I get something better. I've got my lines out in two or three places, places where there are plenty of good chances for a fellow to start in and dig his way up. Just as soon as I get answers to my applications you'll see me get out of here so quickly that it'll make your head swim to watch me. When I get into a good job in one of these other places is when I'll begin to work. What's the use of killing yourself here? There's no chance for you."

Put Heart Into Your Work.

What a delusion! Poor dunce, playing against yourself and fooling yourself! Employers are not looking for professional floaters, and if you cannot succeed where you are, you will never succeed anywhere. The place you are in right now is just the place for you, if you mean business. If you don't, you will not be wanted long anywhere. From this very class of young men is recruited the vast army of ne'er-do-wells. You must first prove to your own satisfaction and that of your employer that you are a success at what you are doing, before you can hope for something better.

The salesmen who are traveling on limited trains, making large cities, living in first-class hotels, and drawing monthly pay-cheques beginning with the figure 3 and up and ending with two ciphers, started where you are and stuck to it.

Where are you on the mountain, reader? If you have climbed for all you are worth and feel tired and a trifle discouraged, look up; safety is there. Remember when on an eminence there is danger in looking down. If the way is more rugged than you thought, do not give up. You may still have reserve strength that you know not of. No man can tell what he can do until he tries. And it is a moral certainty that "the reason why most men do not accomplish more is because they do not attempt more."

Cast off the dead weight that is dragging you down; throw overboard every pound of unnecessary ballast; let yourself soar in the thought that you possess powers that are yet undiscovered. Make a draft on your reserve force. Exercise new faith in yourself and your surroundings. You cannot navigate far without faith, and some of the best of salesmen have gone down for lack of it. Cut away from the influences and the company that can do you no good. Seek only the approval of those above you in authority, and you will surely win success.

CANADIAN STORES—THE CHRISTMAS INTERIOR OF JOHN McCORVIE & SONS, CHATHAM.

TO REMOVE SCRATCHES FROM GLASS.

It may be interesting to our readers to know how to remove scratches from show cases, and the following is suggested as a practical method.

"Dissolve one ounce of white wax in a pint of pure turpentine. To dissolve the wax place the vessel containing the turpentine over a burner and warm, and apply with a soft cloth. This will in every case greatly improve the surface."

For cleaning glass, a good method is as follows:

"Mix one ounce of whiting, one ounce of alcohol and one ounce of water of ammonia in a pint of water. Apply with a soft cloth, allow to dry and then wipe off."

Numbers of glass cases are ruined yearly from lack of proper attention. Small cracks appear, caused by heat or contact with hard, heavy bodies, and if these cracks are not at once attended to they soon spread. An excellent method to prevent a crack from spreading is to draw a short scratch at right angles with a diamond or a glass cutter. This will prevent a crack from spreading in every case. Cases should be set perfectly level which, if this is not done, are certain to warp. If these methods on the care of show cases are followed out they will likely repay owners for the care taken by retaining a better appearance for some time.—Supply World.

*Grocery News From Coast to Coast

BRANTFORD.

May 18.—The co-operative movement, so familiar in Britain, is gradually making headway in Canada and at last has asserted itself strongly in Brantford in an enterprise that for scope and energy is of particular interest to the grocery trade and to merchants generally. While the movement is not new in Canada it may yet be said to be "in the making," for nowhere in this country has it attained the extent that has attended its spread in the old land. The growth here, nevertheless, is steady, in proof of which a few facts concerning the new "Brantford Co-operative Association, Limited," may be somewhat timely.

The association is operating under a provincial charter which empowers it to carry on business in various lines in this city, for which purpose a co-operative company has been organized, Geo. Keen being president, J. F. Van Lane, secretary-treasurer, and T. M. Chambers, manager. The prime features of the organization are: Members must hold at least one share of $5; not more than 5 per cent. interest is allowed on capital; profits are distributed by way of dividends on each member's purchases and half dividends to non-members; all members are equal, one man, one vote, and a strictly cash basis of business is maintained.

The operations in Brantford thus far are confined to a grocery business which has been opened by the association in well equipped and fully stocked premises on Dalhousie Street. The movement for the organization was launched about six months ago and the store has been open for about a month. About 150 members are stock holders. It is expected that this number will be largely increased.

The basis of the venture is cash sales and the distribution of profits to the members in the shape of dividends on purchases. Local prices prevail, there being no attempt to slaughter the market. Not only do the members patronize the firm, but practically all classes, according to the statement of the manager. Little opposition, it is claimed, has been encountered. The trade is brisk, the company conducts its own purchasing and does its own delivery, and prospects are bright for the future.

A novel feature in connection with the business is the publication each month of a neat pamphlet, "The Brantford Co-operative News," which gives valuable information about the movement, together with items of interest to the members of the association. This is an aid to business.

The association is now contemplating an extension of its operations and is asking for offers from merchants and others "for the supply direct to its members of articles of domestic or personal necessity or utility other than groceries and provisions." The terms offered are "That in consideration of a percentage to be agreed upon and paid to the association it will make arrangements with one firm only in each line, thus justifying the expectation of a large volume of trade warranting the concessions granted as the membership of the association is rapidly increasing and will assume large dimensions."

If this policy is successfully carried out the effect will be important on many lines of trade. Discussing their plans in this regard, the local directors say: "It is no part of our policy to antagonize private traders. All we claim is the right merchants have always exercised by buying in the cheapest market and, having paid for the goods, disposing of them in any way we please. If the trade rivalry introduced by co-operators permanently improves the merchant's service to the public, no one will be better pleased than the average co-operator. He is not in the business for profit-making purposes. The merchant has the advantage in every way and whatever competition exists will, on the part of the co-operators, be straightforward and aboveboard. Co-operators have no interest in misrepresenting the value of goods sold or in otherwise deceiving a customer. Co-operation will be to the merchant preferable to an unscrupulous private competitor. The economy in distribution effected by co-operation improves the purchasing value of a man's wages to the extent of the dividends he receives on his purchases. Co-operation will attract to the city the best class of workmen because the wages paid will purchase more here than elsewhere. The saving represented by the dividend will, when the movement becomes general throughout Canada, mean to that extent a greater demand for the manufacturers' goods and the farmers' produce, thus ensuring larger profits to both and more work for the artisan and laborer."

The Brantford correspondent writes of the new co-operative grocery recently established in that city.

Vancouver grocers have decided to curtail the period of credit.

Chatham may have a central automobile delivery system.

A Guelph grocer has purchased a book of baseball tickets for his clerks.

The grocers of the city have not yet decided what will be done this summer in the matter of the usual half holidays. In the past it has been customary to bbserve Wednesday afternoons during July and August. Some of the clerks this summer wanted June. This is considered too much by employers, but the July and August privileges will likely be granted.

* * *

Brantford has also experienced an advance in the price of meats for reasons similar to those reported in other centres. There is somewhat of a scarcity of meat here and that has the most to do with the prevailing prices. With the advent of warm weather the demand will be reduced and the stringency relieved as a result.

* * *

The demand for fresh fruits and vegetables here is very brisk. Strawberries and pineapples find a ready sale, while the early vegetables are also much sought. The prices are moderate for the season of the year.

* * *

The price of milk has been reduced by the retail milk men of the city from 7 to 6 cents per quart. The action is consequent upon a reduction to the retailers on the part of the supply men.

* * *

The formal opening of the new radial line between Brantford and Hamilton, known as the Brantford and Hamilton

*Contributions are invited from merchants, grocery travelers or clerks in places where there is not a regular correspondent of this paper.

Railway, takes place on Saturday, May 23. From the standpoint of the grocery and provision men, as well as of merchants generally, the inauguration of this road is of the greatest importance, for it will bring more trade within their reach and will also put them in more direct competition with Hamilton dealers. The effect of the road on the local market, by reason of the greater number who will likely bring produce here by radial, will also be considerable, although as yet it is too early to judge accurately along these lines. The run between the two cities, a distance of 25 miles, will be made in 45 or 50 minutes and the return fare will be a dollar.

The Brantford Horticultural Society has distributed two thousand packages of seed among the school children of the city. This seed is taken by the children and planted by them in their own plots, thus assisting in the beautification of the home surroundings. In the fall the society will hold an exhibition, when the flowers which the children have grown from the seed will be placed on view and prizes will be awarded for the best specimens. The scheme has resulted in a great deal of interest among the children.

CHATHAM.

May 18.—Retailers last week took a decided step toward following up their recent action with reference to double cartage charges. The matter was a leading theme of discussion at the regular meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association.

D. G. O'Keeffe, a local grocer, urged that Chatham seek the co-operation of the general board and that the matter be brought before that body at their forthcoming meeting. After some discussion, on his suggestion, the following resolution was unanimously passed.

"That the secretary be and is hereby instructed to formally bring the question of cartage charges before the provincial association and ask them for assistance and co-operation in abolishing the present system of paying cartage charges at both ends."

It should be steadily borne in mind that the opposition of the local retailers is solely to the cartage charges at the shippers' end of the line.

The proposed central delivery system has taken on a new phase. Though nothing further of a definite nature has been done toward investigating the various Michigan systems, a local man is making a proposition to a number of grocers. The gentleman in question, who was formerly associated with the local automobile factory, proposes to establish an automobile delivery. He intends to start with two or three autos, and will seek the co-operation and patronage of local retailers in working out a definite scheme. The proposition is, from all accounts, a little hazy as yet. There is at present only one auto delivery in Chatham, that established a year or more ago by H. W. Ball & Co., dry goods merchants. Mr. Ball states that it has been very successful.

The new railway bills of lading came up for discussion at a meeting of the railway committee of the Board of Trade last week. It was decided to recommend Secretary Landon to attend the Canadian Manufacturers' Association meeting in Toronto on May 20, when the subject will be discussed. Steamship bills of lading were also discussed, but action was deferred.

* * *

Now that housecleaning time is here, housecleaning windows are the order of the day among the grocers. Displays range all the way from mere soap pyramids to a comprehensive display of everything in the housecleaning line, from brooms to stove polish.

* * *

Geo. Kerby, who has been conducting a successful confectionery business in Petrolea for some time past, has sold out to Roy German, of London. The new proprietor has already taken possession. In addition to his confectionery lines he will also carry fresh vegetables and fruits in season.

* * *

R. Y. Anderson, Wyoming, is making extensive improvements in the Pye property before opening his ice cream and fruit store.

* * *

The new Wyoming cheese factory, under the management of Mr. Doane, has commenced operations. A public opening was held on Saturday.

GALT.

May 18.—Trade conditions in Galt continue unaltered although the volume of business transacted on Saturday was considerably in advance of previous Saturdays. The attendance at the market was large. Butter remained stationary at 30 cents per pound, while eggs were 15 cents per dozen. It is doubtful if the floral display on the Galt market is exceeded in any market in Ontario. The florists' section resembles a conservatory, and the demand for their products is always brisk.

Allan Deans, of the Red Front, has recently been confined to the house for several days suffering from a severe cold.

Alf. Radigan, the Main Street grocer, is a busy man these days. He is working hard for a testimonial fund for a local clergyman, is representing the council in the matter of interswitching, in addition to his own large business affairs.

* * *

The corner stone of the new Sunday school building of Knox Church will be laid on Monday next. Alex. Sloan, of Sloan Bros., has been an energetic worker in the interests of the new building.

* * *

There is a big demand for pineapples. Buy now when they are cheap, advise the grocers.

* * *

Local fruit dealers report an unusually large demand for oranges, which they state, are rapidly succeeding bananas as the popular fruit.

* * *

There will be a big Victoria Day celebration in Galt on May 25th. The feeding of 500 soldiers and possibly 5,000 visitors should be of some advantage to local grocers.

GUELPH.

May 18.—Thirty-five grocers have signed the petition agreeing to close on Thursday afternoons, whether the other stores do or not. There are yet five to come into the fold.

* * *

The many friends in the trade of the late I. J. Wilson, grocer, on the corner of Elizabeth and Queen Streets, will regret to hear of his death, which occurred on Tuesday, May 12. He formerly ran a grocery store on Waterloo Avenue, then went to Mitchell and conducted a grocery business there, but last fall returned to Guelph and bought out the present stand.

* * *

McLaren's Imperial cheese, peanut butter and jelly powder are being demonstrated this week at Benson Bros. by Mrs. McDermid.

* * *

Archie Benmallick, a clerk in Peter Anderson's grocery store, met with a painful accident this week. He had the top of his finger torn off by getting it caught in a bicycle.

* * *

One local grocer has set a good example by buying a season ticket, costing $10, for his clerks to take turns in attending the International baseball matches in the city. There will be about three games a week.

Saturday's market was a bumper one and trade was good all over the city Prices remained about the same except butter, which dropped from 28 to as low as 23 cents. The farmers around here are not through seeding yet, in fact, in some cases have not got started, but now the fine weather has come at last they will get busy.

* * *

Guelph City Council sprang a surprise, not only on the merchants, but also on the public generally last week by giving us a 14-mill rate of taxation this year. This is not only the lowest in the history of Guelph but is thought to be the lowest of any city in the Dominion. That is what running your own waterworks, gas and electric light works and railways does.

* * *

Mrs. E. Chick, demonstrator for Nestle's and Peter's goods, is in the city and for the past week has been at the Kandy Kitchen, but this week goes to Geo. Williams.

LONDON.

May 18.—Trade the past week showed a little improvement over the preceding week, both wholesale and retail. Brokers report sugar still very firm. Teas are advancing, very fine going up 1d. per lb. and mediums ½d. to ½d. Other staples remain firm.

* * *

A conference between representatives of the United Canners and the Wholesale Grocers' Guild was held at the office of Elliott, Marr & Co., on Saturday. The topic discussed is not made public but it is understood that the condition of the canned goods trade was under consideration. Owing to the fact that local retailers were pretty well stocked up at cut prices by the failure of Lind, Kerrigan & Co., other wholesalers find themselves with an unusually large stock on hand for this season. It is said the wholesale men ask a deduction either on last fall purchases or on goods for future delivery. What understanding was reached at the conference no one seems inclined to divulge.

* * *

There appears to be a good deal of adulterated maple syrup hereabouts at present and it is not improbable that at least one local grocery firm will be called to task for selling stuff which had been represented by the producer as pure. A sample was handed to the Medical Health Officer a few days ago. "There was no need to analyze it," said that official, "the smell of it was enough to convince anyone that it was vile stuff." The doctor added that although it was an easy matter to detect the presence of glucose in adulterated maple syrup there were certain points in the analysis which rendered the task a very difficult one. Adulterated maple syrup is becoming so very prevalent in all Canadian cities that it is felt by many that the health department should take hold of the question and put a stop to the adulteration which is so widespread.

The London Ice Cream Company, a concern which had been but a short time in business, has made an assignment to Butter took a decided drop on the local market on Saturday, best creamery declining 1 to 2 cents and dairy 2 to 3 cents per lb. With the splendid pasture there is throughout the country, there should be a further drop.

MONTREAL.

May 18.—Now that Montreal has emerged from its marine hibernation the state of trade has acted as a reflex of this welcome event. Already many businesses which did not feel like taking upon themselves fresh obligations until the opening of navigation, have now settled down to their usual even way. Although there is no speculation about Montreal being open to the sea within a variable length of time, there is always a certain tension among men in certain lines of business. Of course this is most noticeable among those who are direct exporters or importers, however, the accelerated life which is observable on the harbor front sends a sympathetic thrill throughout the entire city.

It is somewhat of a coincidence that two ships with Montreal for an objective point collided with other vessels on their voyage, one outward bound and the other inward. The Milwaukee, of the C.P.R line, with a mixed cargo, collided with a government steamer in Quebec harbor and reached Montreal with her starboard bow broken in. The other boat outward bound, to meet with an accident was the Dominion liner, Ottawa, which collided with the Thorold below Quebec, and had to put back to that port to undergo repairs.

The yield of maple products seems to be quite up to the average, and the quality is especially good this year.

This city is the recognized distributing point of this product for the world and every year the demand is becoming greater. Montreal's supremacy in this field is due to her close proximity to the Eastern Townships, which is the greatest maple sugar producing locality in the world.

The business men of the lower part of the city are anxiously awaiting the result of the deliberations of the city council on the recommendations submitted to them by the Board of Trade relating to the question of freighting by the street railway. At present there is a deplorable state of congestion in some quarters of the city and it is hoped that the provisions of this recommendation will obviate further trouble.

* * *

Some grocers report that the character of their business which is generally confined to the Easter season, is persisting this year wonderfully. This condition is due to a certain unusual combination of circumstances which rendered Easter delicacies preferable even out of season.

* * *

Kingsley Harrison, corner of Burnside and Victoria Streets, has had a very fine display of plants in his windows which have added greatly to the appearance of his store and which he states have been also a good investment.

Mr. Harrison has opened a branch store on St. Catherine Street west, where he is doing a good trade also.

* * *

Mr. Richer, manager of the grocery department of Scroggies, has developed an unusually good business in cooked ham and bacon, which he attributes to the up-to-date machinery that has been set up in this department and to the new methods of putting up the meat after it has been sliced.

* * *

Fraser, Viger & Co. are busy filling out of town orders, a phase of their business which they have developed to a remarkable degree. They cater to country club, resort and hotel trade.

This business keeps them busy at a time when other grocers may be experiencing dull times, as it sandwiches in very nicely at just a season when a dull time may be expected.

A special meeting of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association was held on Thursday evening, May 14. This meeting was called to receive the reports of the committees which were appointed t inquire into the relative merits of the two places which were suggested for a picnic at the last meeting; namely, Lachute and Lamoraie. The committee reported unfavorably regarding Lamoraie and it was found that certain transportation difficulties would have to be overcome if they went to Lachute and they would also be obliged to pay an exorbitant fee for the grounds. As a result of these investigations it was finally decided to go to St. Scholastique.

The picnic will take place on July 8. No other business was discussed. Among those present were: A. Laniel, A. Landreville, G. St. Denis, R. Bernard, A. Gabois, E. H. Therrieu, G. Hogue, H. Dube, J. Labonte, U. Gurnon, N. Charbrand, A. Dionne, J. Belisle, O. Noel, J. J. Lussier, E. P. Lalande, H. Laniel, A. Malo, J. Dore, J. Boileau, G. Girardin, V. Boileau, H. P. Dubuc, H. Desmarais, J. A. NEWS OF NEW BRUNSWICK.

At the monthly meeting of the St. John Board of Trade on May 8th sixty-five new members were enrolled as a result of the energy displayed by the recently appointed "Booster Committee." J. D. Rolland, president and G. M. Murray, secretary, of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, addressed the members.

William R. McMillan, Margaret E. McMillan, Irvin H. McNair, Mary Ellis, Robert E. McMillan and D. Evan McMillan, of Durham Centre, Restigouche county, have been incorporated as The McMillan Company, Limited, capital stock, $60,000, to carry on fishing and canning business.

Application is being made by Edgar W. Mair, Edgar R. Teed, A. Wilmot Hay, Arthur G. Bailey and C. Duncan Johnston, of Woodstock, for incorporation as Cold Storage, Limited, capital $20,000, to establish a cold storage plant in Woodstock.

Alderman J. W. Vanwart, the Charlotte Street grocer, with John Lipsett proprietor of the "Blue Store," Geo. W. Slocum, commission merchant and Don Hunt, clothier, went up to a lake back of Clarendon last week and returned home after a day on the lake, with 160 trout. Not a bad catch?

The official statement of the valuation of exports by the 114 steamships doing winter port business from this port, shows the total valuation to be $23,674404.

The following shows the value of Canadian and foreign goods, viz.:

Canadian goods	$16,122 520
Foreign goods	7,561,884
Grand total	$23,674,404
Grand total for 1906-7	$20,120,430
Gain for 1907-8	$ 3,553,974

The past season was the banner season in the history of the winter port to date. In the season of 1905-6, which was also a great wheat season, the value of exports amounted to $23,615,001, or $59,403 less than this season.

The five steamships to South Africa took away during the season the following goods, viz: 150,463 bags flour, 7,584 bags wheat, 18,830 cases Quaker Oats, 12,940 cases canned milk, 734 cases agricultural implements, 524,263 feet pitch pine lumber, 200 standard deals, 4,229 rolls paper, 666 cases furniture, 801 bundles doors, 105 cases roofing, 800 bundles handles, 96 cases organs, 10,195 cases meats, etc., 1,557 packages mining machinery, 1,428 packages poultry (in cold storage), also other general goods. Value, $815,012. Last season exports to South Africa were $1,026,424.

Business has been very good lately with wholesalers and retailers. Last week rolled oats advanced 35 cents and beans went up 25 to 30 cents a bushel American plate beef has touched the high-water mark and is now being sold at $20.50 a barrel. Cornmeal is up 15 cents a bag and is now worth $1.80. Molasses went one cent higher last week and another advance of a cent is looked for this week. The quotation is now 34 cents a gallon. There has been no change in the price of flour but the jobbers do not expect it to go any lower. Feed is very scarce and it is difficult now to obtain middlings or bran.

MARKETS OF NOVA SCOTIA.

Business here is very active in all lines, and the wholesalers are turning over large quantities of goods. Considering the high prices in most lines, business is considered to be remarkably good. Collections on the whole are quite up to expectations.

* * *

There is little change to note in the butter market as regards price or receipts. Dairy butter is scarce for this season. Most jobbers had expected that lots of dairy butter would be on the market now, but the receipts are very disappointing. Some of them say that early in the season many of the farmers killed off their cattle owing to the high price of feed, and that this fact in a large measure accounts for the present conditions. The present high prices however cannot hold much longer.

Eggs are in good demand and the price is very firm. Commission men early this week wired their representatives in the country to send in all the eggs available, but the receipts were far below expectations. Nova Scotia eggs are quoted at 19 cents and Prince Edward Island at 18 cents.

* * *

All seasonable fruits are in good supply, but prices are high. California seedless oranges are retailing at 60 to 70 cents per dozen. American strawberries of average quality are retailing at 30 to 35 cents per box. Bananas are in good demand. The stock is of fair quality and they are quoted at $2.50 per bunch for the best. Sugar at present is steady and no immediate change is looked for. Quotations here are cut loaf in barrels $5.75, extra granulated $4.90, bright yellow $4.80, No. 1 yellow $4.50.

* * *

Flour is very firm and a further advance on the present high prices would not surprise those in close touch with the markets, Scarcity of wheat is the cause attributed for the high prices. Hard wheat patents are quoted at $6.40 to $6.60, seventy per cent. at $5.50 to $5.60, and eighty per cent. at $5.30 to $5.40.

* * *

Jobbers complain of the high price of beef and the difficulty that they experience in having their orders filled promptly. This refers particularly to American beef. The best beef is quoted at $19.50 to $20.50. American pork, clear fat back, is quoted at $22 to $22.50, and P. E. Island mess at $21 to $21.50. Roll bacon is quoted at 12 cents, sides 15 to 16 cents, and hams 15 to 16 cents. Lard is firm, being quoted at 12¾ cents for pails and 13½ cents in cases.

VANCOUVER.

May 16.—Onions have been a feature on the local market of late, but with the advent of Californias, the prices will soon get down to normal. For the past month or two, the quotations have been high, climbing from the usual price of 2½ and 3 cents to four, and last week to five. Onions have been coming altogether from Australia, and have been of fine quality. This week, however, the first shipments are in from California, and there has been an immediate drop in the price to about 3 cents. The northern trade up to the present has kept the market tight.

California is a big supply point for the coast cities at this time of year. New potatoes, cucumbers, and general green stuff, and now cherries and strawberries are arriving. The last have dropped considerably with the last arrivals, and are now jobbed at about 16 cents. When they first came in they were as high as $3.25 for a crate of 15 boxes, but the drop is to $2.50. Cherries are in ten-pound boxes, which net about eight, and bring $2. The season in these lines will now come along rapidly.

* * *

There was a slight flurry in tomatoes this week. The early ones have been arriving from Florida, the prices being from 12½ to 15 cents per pound. A few days ago there happened to be none on the market, but a local firm secured some hothouse tomatoes from Victoria, and being the only ones in possession, jumped the price to about 25 cents. As there were none other available, the figure was obtained, and when more arrived from the south, back the price went.

* * *

Fruit growers are now taking up the question of express rates. They claim and give figures to support their contention, that the charges of American companies are so much lower than the companies in Canada, that the handicap is a serious one in the trade with the country east of the mountains. When it comes to distances of 200 or 300 miles the difference is about $1. Under such a tariff, the growers in British Columbia operate at a disadvantage in the home markets, and they see no present way out of the difficulty. The market for the smaller produce in the northwest is a large one, but retailers are apt to patronize the article which is the cheapest.

* * *

Grocery clerks in Victoria may not have a weekly half holiday on Thursday afternoons after all. Two of the leading firms take the position that it would be injurious to trade to close on Thursdays, and propose instead that there shall be a specified vacation period some time during the warm weather.

* * *

The Victoria Fruit Growers' Association and Exchange is getting its business down to a good working basis under the new manager, James Drummond. Fruit grown on Vancouver Island finds its way all over the west and is handled by retailers as far as Winnipeg, with shipments of apples, etc., to foreign points. Not only will the association find a market for all fruit produced, but its headquarters in Victoria will also be a bureau of information for all interested in the business of fruit raising.

* * *

The story that the New England Fish Company, which has for a number of years operated out of this city, will move to Ketchikan is borne out by the presence in the north of three of the directors of the company. Time was when halibut could be caught close to Vancouver, but as the lower grounds have become depleted the boats have had to go farther north, and since the fish are now secured in Hecate Straits, to make the base of operations in the north would at least be more convenient. Large quantities of fish are shipped, not only to the New England States, but to points in Western Canada. Not only is trade done in halibut, but with the development of the province other companies are gradually expanding, and other food fishes are dealt in. Cod and herring are the two which are receiving most attention, excepting, of course, the lordly salmon and the reliable halibut. The fisheries of British Columbia have more room for expansion perhaps than any other industry, and with an increasing market in the western portions of Canada, those companies now operating here, and those which will surely follow, will build up an industry greater than any on the Atlantic coast. The planting of lobsters, if successful, will also add another branch that at present does not exist. Oysters, too, are being experimented with. But with the other fishes, they are here, and with the market opening, they will be utilized.

* * *

Vancouver merchants have decided to curtail the period of credit, and at the meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association on Tuesday evening of this week, the action was taken that hereafter a settlement of accounts will be insisted upon at least once a month. The causes of this are that the wholesalers for a year past have been pressing for quicker settlements, and moreover people are inclined to let their accounts run into large amounts when allowed to go almost indefinitely. The retailer has now to settle every fifteen days with his supply houses, and in demanding payment of his accounts every thirty days he is only doing what is necessary to prevent financial embarrassment. In a great majority of the cases of failure, the book debts are often more than sufficient to meet the liabilities, yet assignments are forced by non-payment of those who have secured the goods and fail to realize that they are living on the small capital of the grocer.

LAVAL HONORS A GROCER.

P. M. Girard with Hudon, Hebert & Co., Montreal, has received from the University of Laval, his Diploma of Literature, having passed his examinations very creditably after pursuing an extra-mural course extending over a period of two years. Mr. Girard is one of those gentlemen possessed of business ability which has made him a success and who has at the same time cultivated his aesthetic qualities with the above gratifying results.

WINNIPEG PURE FOOD SHOW.

Promises to be Most Successful Event of the Kind Ever Held in the West.

Preparations are now practically completed for the opening in Winnipeg on June 8th of the most successful exhibition of groceries and foodstuffs ever held in the West. The management are advertising it extensively and public interest is being aroused. Last year's show was a big success but there is every reason to believe that the exhibition this year will be much superior in every respect.

Phelps & McCormick, general merchants, Minnedosa, Man., have dissolved partnership.

IMPORTANCE OF FOREIGN CUSTOMERS.

Canada's export trade is valued at about $280,000,000. This is about $35,000,000 more than the total foreign trade, imports as well as exports, in 1897. In the latter year the exports were $134,000,000.

An increase of over 100 per cent. in eleven years is remarkable. But remarkable as it is, no one acquainted with the resources of Canada believes that the export trade of the country is little beyond a fraction of what it will be.

Nature has endowed the Dominion with almost illimitable possibilities in all those things which are necessary to the material up-building of a nation.

Is it in products of the farm? Then we have land in quantity and quality sufficient to almost supply the requirements of the world; and but a fraction of this land is under cultivation.

Is it in manufacturing? Then we have iron and coal and timber in abundance, to say nothing of the magnificent water powers, whose utility we are only beginning to recognize.

But natural resources are not of much use without men. It is not natural resources that make nations great and useful. It is men, and chiefly business men—men who have enterprise and ideals.

There is always a possibility that those who are born or brought up amid the great natural resources which this country possesses may fail to recognize the possibilities of our possessions. Is it not a fact that outside capitalists have been the first to recognize and develop many of our natural resources?

The home market is undoubtedly the best market. It is more accessible than the foreign market and as a rule more profitable. But in our concern about the home market we must not neglect to give due attention to the requirements of the export market.

In times of prosperity such as we have recently been passing through there is a tendency to concentrate efforts on the home trade and let the foreign trade take care of itself. There is no doubt about this. The reports of the Canadian commercial agents scattered throughout many parts of the British Empire repeatedly refer to this.

The export market is a depository for the surplus products of the farm and factory. And unless we cultivate it with the same systematic and business intelligence that we do the home market the development of the natural resources of the country must be retarded.

But aside from the development of the natural resources of the country the importance of the export trade when business is quiet at home must not be overlooked.

The more numerous the countries with which we do business the more likely are we to keep our factories going and our farm products moving when trade lags at home. Great Britain found this out generations ago.

There are always some countries in which trade is good and fortunate are we when these nations are numbered among our customers. But if we want them when business is poor at home we must cultivate them when we are not so much concerned about our surplus merchandise.

The Germans are to-day probably the most aggressive of the nations in regard to the export trade. They are determined to master its every detail. Their young men study foreign languages and then settle down in importing countries the world over to learn their requirements and to ascertain their methods of doing business.

It does not pay to be self-contained in regard to foreign trade any more than in regard to home trade.

COMMERCIAL AGENTS' DUTIES.

There has been some criticism recently by Canadians resident in England, who are in a position to know whereof they speak, regarding the nature of the work some of the Canadian commercial agents in Great Britain are doing.

These agents are presumably working for the development of Canadian export trade and yet it is reported by authoritative parties in England, and a study of the weekly reports issued by the Government's Department of Trade and Commerce would seem to bear this out, that a goodly part of the time of some of the agents is spent in calling on British manufacturers and exporters, seemingly with a view to encouraging their business with Canada and thereby stimulating competition with our own industries.

The weekly Trade and Commerce reports contain a file of trade inquiries which one would naturally suppose would be devoted to the interests of Canadian business. A study of several of these reports the other day revealed the fact that out of 197 inquiries, 95 were from English firms who wished to get in touch with Canadian buyers with a view to disposing of their manufactured product.

A representative of a Canadian firm, at present in England, tells of several instances he met with where the commercial agents had gone to a good deal of trouble to procure lists of Canadian buyers for English firms. In some instances, the firms in Great Britain making good use of the agents, are not even manufacturers of the goods they propose to market in Canada.

Some years ago one of the agents on his appointment expressed a desire to visit a number of Canadian manufacturers who were anxious to develop their export trade, and was instructed by the Minister then in charge not to do so. He reported the matter to some manufacturers who advised him to see Sir Wilfrid Laurier. His visit put a new face on the incident, and, as a result, his instructions were immediately reversed.

It cannot be the desire of the Government that the Canadian commercial agents should pursue the policy a few of them seem to be doing. And the matter would seem to repay some attention being paid to it immediately.

THE QUEBEC TERCENTENARY.

The festivities in connection with the tercentenary celebration in Quebec this summer will draw thousands of people from the United States and other foreign countries to Canada, and in the coming of this multitude there is opportunity for the retailer to benefit.

The fame of historical Quebec is world wide, and while the majority of visitors will be attracted by the quaint character of the celebration, there will be hundreds, in fact, thousands, who will avail themselves of this opportunity to see something of Canada as a whole, and not alone as it is to be seen from Quebec.

This will result in their visiting the chief cities and towns, and the smaller places of interest. This influx of visitors will create a demand for groceries which will result in increased trade for he who begins to plan now.

When the visitors are actually here is not the time to get ready. Stock up right away. The higher priced staples and many fancy lines will sell freely, and they should be ordered early. Advertising space in the local papers can be used to advantage at the proper time telling visitors of your store and its contents, and reminding the housewives that you have just what they require for those visitors of theirs. But plan and order at once.

Naturally, the increase in trade will not be felt everywhere throughout the Dominion, but in Quebec City, Montreal, Sherbrooke, the smaller towns in Quebec Province, and in the larger centres of Ontario there will be an appreciable increase in demand, and grocers should prepare to meet and encourage it according as their location warrants.

ONE CENT DROP LETTER RATE.

In the House of Commons a few days ago a question was asked as to how much it was expected the postal revenue would be lessened by the proposal to give one cent drop letter rate to cities. The Postmaster-General in reply said that the department did not expect a decrease in the revenue. On the contrary they expected an increase.

It is a pity that previous postmasters-general since the one cent drop rate was done away with, twelve years ago, were not equally optimistic as Hon. Mr. Lemieux. In all experiences where there has been a decrease in the cost of postage there has been more than a corresponding increase in the revenue. The postal authorities in 1875, when they adopted the one cent drop rate, were wiser than those of 1897, who abolished it.

The post office revenue has certainly suffered from the doubling of the rate on drop letters in cities. With the one cent rate business men found it cheaper to use the mails than to have the letters delivered by other means. When the two cent rate went into force in 1897 a great many business men discarded the mails.

The increase in the rate was an unbusinesslike act and Mr. Lemieux is to be congratulated on his recognition of the fact.

The one cent drop letter rate will be a great convenience to business men and more so now than when it was formerly in vogue, because since then the local free delivery system has been extended to a large number of towns and cities in Canada.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK IN WESTERN CANADA.

On May 1st, 1907, seeding had not been started in the Western Provinces; on May 1st, of this year, it was practically completed, and the acreage showed an increase of at least 25 per cent. Last year the West would have reaped the largest crop in its history if only there had been 10 days' more ripening weather before the September frosts. This year, with seeding completed a month earlier, and with most favorable warm weather, there is every reason to believe that Western Canada will produce and save another "bumper" crop, the proceeds of which will be more than sufficient to place business once more on the substantial footing of prosperity to which Western business men have long been accustomed.

Undoubtedly the depression of 1907 hit Western Canada a hard blow, but she stood it well and is rapidly recovering from the effects. A good crop this year will ensure a year of good business. Immigration this spring is encouraging, and the immigrants are a better class than in previous years. The great bulk of the immigration this year is from Great Britain and the United States, and most of the incoming settlers are bringing some little capital with them.

It is not too early yet to sum up some of the effects of the late depression which was caused by the partial crop failure and the world wide financial stringency. The effects have not been wholly bad; in fact, so much good is resulting that many shrewd business men consider the recent "depression" a blessing, but very thinly disguised.

In the first place, it put a stop to the mania for land speculation which was unduly inflating values and diverting capital from its legitimate channels. There will be more money for regular business now that land speculation is no longer employing all the spare cash of the business men of the country. Moreover, there will now be a reduction in the cost of living, which should hasten the day when the West will do more of its own manufacturing.

But, perhaps, the greatest benefit resulting from a little touch of hard times has been the death blow given the credit system. For years the credit system has been the bane of business in the West. It was a necessary evil in the pioneer days, but it was continued long after the reason for it had ceased to exist. The farmers had learned the habit of settling their store bills only once a year, and it was hard to teach them any other habits. The merchants were disorganized, and, under stress of competition, permitted grave abuses of the credit system. They tried to shake off the system and for two or three years there had been a general tendency towards the establishment of a cash system of business. But it required some general compelling influence to induce the great majority of the dealers to join in the movement. That influence was supplied last fall when the financial stringency was most keenly felt. The dealers simply had to get their money in and could no longer afford to allow indiscriminate credit. As a result, in every part of the West there was at least a resolute and substantial curtailment of credit, and in at least a third of the Western stores there is now a cash system in operation. It is not likely that in many places the ground gained will ever be lost for the dealer who has once shaken off the chains of the credit system will not be anxious to assume them again. The ground gained will be retained and never again will the credit system hold undisputed sway in the West. The tendency towards the cash system has been given a great impetus by the experiences of the last year, and, as a result, the business of the West will henceforth be conducted upon a much sounder basis than ever before.

With the evils of the credit system greatly lessened and with every indication pointing to a big crop and a year of resulting prosperity, it is small wonder that the business men of the West are optimistic as to the immediate future. The experiences of the last year have taught the West conservatism that was before quite foreign to its spirit, but it is an optimistic conservatism.

During the last year buying has been light, as it has been restricted to the filling of immediate requirements, and, perhaps, for two or three months to come the buyers will be cautious. But once the crop is assured, the empty shelves in the country stores will be filled and there will be a demand for goods which it will keep the manufacturers and jobbers busy to supply.

STATE-REGULATED CLERKS' SALARIES.

Australia is a country of peculiarities. To the average business man in other parts of the world one of the most striking of these peculiarities is the Industrial Arbitration Court and its methods.

In that country if an employe of a retail store is not receiving the salary he or she deems adequate, recourse can be had to the Industrial Arbitration Court.

To read the pleas which are put forward at these industrial courts as to why higher salaries should be received is interesting. The fact is often revealed that many of the applicants who were trying to secure higher rates of wage through the court never received from any other employer what they deemed they were worth. And yet, in spite of this, the court in many instances ordered employers to pay considerable increases.

To us in Canada such a law seems absurd. At any rate it should be carried to a logical conclusion. Retailers ought to have the right to bring before the court customers who will not pay as high a price as they deem their goods are worth. Then the wholesaler should also have the right to bring up the retailer and the manufacturer the wholesaler, for the court to fix the price which their customers should pay for merchandise. Even if a law is silly it should be logical in its silliness.

KEEP TRACK OF NEW IDEAS.

A prominent wholesaler in discussing ways and means for making the best use of new ideas and new methods in the retail business said recently that he considered a scrap book for keeping a record of interesting items relative to the business, was one of the most valuable aids to the retail merchant that he knew of.

"Competition is growing keener every day in every line of business," he said, "and it is coming more and more to be a time when neither precedence nor capital count for business superiority. The conditions demand the survival of the fittest. The fact that yours is an old and well established firm has its weight; the fact that you have your own money to back your institution is much to your advantage; but neither of these conditions will secure your position against a competitor who has been thoroughly trained in the keenest kind of system. The man with business ability will soon find ample capital to back his enterprise, and his peer of strong and timely assertion will sooner or later, discount the reputation your firm has held in the past.

"The retailer of to-day finds many more details that require attention than the merchant of ten years ago and if your methods have not kept pace with progress, you may find that you are conducting your business at a far less profit to-day than you were with the same methods a few years back.

"Systems you may learn from others. They are developed from necessities that you with your established business do not feel until the other fellow has already evolved them and put them into practice. You must learn from him.

"If you are watching the trend of trade methods, you see something every day that strikes you as particularly to the point. Do not let these ideas go by. Get them, preserve them, put them away where you will see them again when you will have time to think them over.

"The old idea of keeping a scrap book is a good one, though in its modern form it has developed into a science, the result of which is the many compact filing systems of to-day. No matter how small your business may be some system of this kind is almost a necessity if you wish to succeed in the greatest possible degree. You can devise some method of filing away valuable helps that will be of great service to you if properly looked after. Classify your heads so that you can easily find what you want, and when you get hold of an idea that may apply file it in its proper place at once—it may get away. If it does you will forget it.

"'Newspaper Advertisements,' 'Methods of Special Sales,' 'Handling the Sales Force,' 'Show Window Displays,' 'Dull Season Sales,' 'Business Methods,' 'General Interest.' These are some of the heads under which you will find ideas coming in daily that can be filed away in a minute's time, where at a leisure hour you can look them over and study the way in which you can apply them to your own business. This is the way the other fellow pays the interest on his capital and the rent on his house, and still sells at the same profit as yourself."

BUSINESS MEN SHOULD NOT HYBERNATE.

Cut down expenses when necessity demands it, but don't hybernate. To hybernate when business is dull is to court the sleep that knows no waking. When a stringency exists in the money market and trade languishes in the factory, warehouse, or store, all the more reason is there for activity, resourcefulness and enterprise.

It is when the supply exceeds the demand that a business man's capabilities are put to the test. If he can keep things going and going well, he is made of the stuff that breeds success. But no business man is exhibiting these qualities when under stress of trade he runs away and hides himself.

It is storms, not fair weather, that put the finishing touches on a sailor and it is trade storms that put the finishing touches upon a business man.

Don't crowd on too much sail; but on the other hand do not try to make headway under bare poles. Keep sails up, flags flying and let your customers know that you are on deck. Advertise the fact in the mediums that reach your customers or prospective customers. Have confidence in yourself and your customers will have confidence in you. But don't get pessimistic and hide from the eyes of your customers by neglecting to use those mediums for keeping your factory, warehouse or store and the merchandise you sell in view.

Of course if hiding from one's customers is deemed wise, let it be done thoroughly. Do not stop at removing the advertisement. Take down the sign and obliterate from all business literature the name of the firm or reference to the goods it makes.

KEEP THEM BY ALL MEANS.

The Cannington Gleaner, a second time asks its readers to submit opinions as to whether the Woodward Biscuit Works should be allowed to remove to Lindsay without an effort being made to retain the works for Cannington. We should think that there could be only one opinion on this question, so far as Cannington's citizens and the Gleaner is concerned, and are surprised that the Gleaner has not yet taken the stand that the works should, by all reasonable means, be induced to remain.

The case as we see it, is simply this: Lindsay, a very progressive town, has made a proposition to G. H. Woodward & Co. to remove their biscuit works to Lindsay, and the Cannington Gleaner does not know whether the concern should be allowed to remove or not.

Unless there are some reasons, of which we are as yet not cognizant, we cannot for the life of us understand why the Gleaner does not put up a fight for the interests of its own town. It would have the support of all broad-minded persons, for it is in the best interests of the country that its industries be scattered over an expanse of territory rather than that ehey be hived in one or two localities.

QUALITY AS A FACTOR IN BUSINESS.

No one will ever be charged with not being sound in the faith who preaches quality. Quality is the very foundation of success in business. Capital, knowledge enterprise are important, but these will not stand when quality is absent.

It is quality that gives character, and character is as necessary to a business as it is to an individual.

Customers who have become converted to quality give in return their confidence; and this is the sheet anchor which holds business.

Goods sold on their reputation may not always earn a better profit than those that are sold on their price, but they do most of the time.

Quality is profitable unto all things in the business world.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Winnipeg Correspondent.

Another week of the most glorious growing weather has been added to the history of the West. There was 24 hours of gently light rain all over the country but the balance of the week has been fine and warm and the oats and barley are nearing completion in the matter of seeding in the more southern sections. Every fresh report coming in from the country is encouraging, so far as crop conditions are concerned. There is a section covering part of Southern Saskatchewan and Southern Alberta that needs more rain, but they got a little last Thursday enough to keep them going for the present and almost every other section reports sufficient moisture in the soil to carry the crop until June.

The wheat market has been an erratic one but the general opinion is that all the Winnipeg shorts were squeezed out on the last sharp advance when something like 250,000 to 300,000 bushels of wheat were bought in at prices ranging from $1.17 to $1.18. Since that time July has experienced a serious drop, selling on May 16th, at $1.13½. The highest point made by July was $1.19⅛.

The shipments out from Fort William have been very large and stocks in terminals are now very much below those of last year at the same period while inspections for the week have been of the most limited character. Grain dealers are anticipating the quietest June for the past five years, and already brokers are leaving on long vacations. From the standpoint of the big grain dealers the crop of 1907 is practically marketed, the remainder to come forward being too small to make any material difference in the world conditions.

There is a general complaint on the part of interior millers that business is bad and that a number of them must close for want of trade or rather that wheat prices are so high that flour cannot be sold on the present prices for that article at a profit. The big mills on the other hand claim an improving western demand and that trade in the east is very fair.

The West's second big industry—the cattle—has been extremely active for the week. Receipts for the week ending May 9th were more than four times those of the corresponding week of last year, and the stock offered, taken as a whole, was decidedly better. This week the receipts have been large and there have been several bunches of exceptionally well finished steers. A noticeable proof of what has been said in these columns from time to time on the value of winter feeding in the open, was exemplified this week when Donaldson, of Brandon, one of the best known feeders of the West and winner of the $200 prize for the best fed beef steer at the Winter Fat Stock Show, shipped in four cars of steers fed in the open on oat straw, a little meal and plenty of water and salt and received 5½ cents per pound, freight assumed by the purchaser. The steers averaged 1,350 pounds on the scales and were one of the thriftiest and smoothest bunches ever offered in the Winnipeg yards. The Nelson-Morris Packing Company shipped another long train of cattle through for Boston en route to Britain and there is a decided movement on the part of American buyers to purchase Canadian Western cattle. There have been eastern buyers on the market every day for the past three weeks and they are having a tight time of it holding their own against the resourceful western men who know every cattle man from Dan to Gath and think nothing of getting on the yards and buying by electric light, if a good-looking train comes in between two and three in the morning. Their presence, however, has given a very healthy and valuable stimulus to prices. The need of union stock yards and a regularly constituted market becomes more and more apparent every day, but certainly the man who still clings to the idea that there is a beef combine would have his belief rudely shaken if he struck the Winnipeg yards about a quarter to half-past five and found the various dealers trying to get in ahead of each other on the purchase of a choice bunch of steers. The market of this spring has proved what should have needed no proof, and that is, that well-finished cattle will have plenty of buyers and bring a good price, but scrubs are never wanted.

Sheep are among the most profitable of the lines of stock offering this season. Wool, of course, is very low, owing to the closing of many of the Eastern woollen mills but mutton is more than making up for it. Grant, of Moose Jaw, one of the first men to see the profit in feeding sheep on screenings, has sold 1,000 head to Gordon, Ironside & Fares at 7 cents a pound, Winnipeg. These sheep are being delivered in bunches of 200 to 300. A bunch of 300 the past week averaged 127 pounds off cars, Winnipeg. It is calculated that at the extreme outside these sheep did not cost Mr. Grant more than $5.50 to put on the market and as they averaged 127 pounds he had a clear profit of something over $3 per head. Not a bad turnover for the period it takes to raise a 2-year old sheep.

Figures like these should put it so strongly to farmers that it will soon be unnecessary to bring our mutton from Prince Edward Island as we have been doing in the past.

A matter of great importance to business men in small towns is the new "C" tariff of the Board of Fire Underwriters on which they have been working for months and which was announced during the past week, though as a matter of fact, it really came into force on May 1, for tariffs issued by the Fire Underwriters really govern to a great extent those of other companies. There is always a feeling on the part of the assured that rates are too high and there is equally a tendency on the part of companies to increase rates in small towns because of inadequate fire protection.

The tariff of minimum fire insurance rates for risks in class "C" applies t towns and villages in all three western provinces not specially rated by the Board. It was revised first in October of 1904 and again in March of the present year and the new "C" tariff now presented is supposed to be up-to-date in every particular. Its general trend is rather to lower than increase rates. Dwellings are unchanged. It is in the matter of "exposures" that the Board have seen fit to reduce the charges a little and though the decrease is small it will, nevertheless, be welcome.

People continue to talk hard times and tight money in Winnipeg but as a matter of fact people have bought as many automobiles this year as they did last and have paid more cash for them and autos hardly come under the head of necessities.

There are some lines in which collections are better than others. For example, wholesale grocers find it much easier to get in their accounts than do lumber merchants, just why, it is a little difficult to explain. One thing is sure, that from the districts of Saskatchewan, where crops were supposed to be almost a total failure last year, it is simply surprising how well money is coming in. Dry goods houses report the same good conditions as the grocers.

* * *

Everything considered, the outlook in the West is most encouraging and the splendid start the crop has received will put it in such strong and healthy condition that it will be in a position to withstand minor ills later in the season

Markets and Market Notes

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—

Butter—Further decline.
Cheese—Declined.
Fruits—Decline in pineapples.
Beans—Firmer.

Montreal, May 20, 1908.

There is not much to comment upon during the last week outside of some rather sharp declines in butter and cheese.

The dealers appear to be holding off for still lower prices in butter and cheese, buying just enough to satisfy immediate demands. The weather has improved the pasturage, with the result that supplies are arriving from the country in largely increasing amounts.

The fruit market has had a few declines, which is due to perfectly natural conditions, as this is the season when we can expect such things in fruits. Beans still show an upward tendency, which, as stated last week, is due to the manipulations of the market by some of the large operators. Receipts of maple products continue good, and the price has remained practically unchanged.

The very latest advices from Japan indicate a shortage in the high grade teas, but importers say that prices will be practically the same as last year, although there will be some indication of a stiffer tendency.

SUGAR—There is nothing of any importance to comment upon in the sugar market. The demand remains only fair and the market steady.

RICE AND TAPIOCA—London cables seem to indicate a slight stiffening up of the market in rice, although up to the present this has not affected this market, quotations remaining the same. No change has taken place in tapioca, and there appears to be no indication of any change. The demand for rice is still rather slow and tapioca decidedly so.

SPICES—The long quiet which has prevailed in this market remains unbroken, as nothing has occurred during the last week to disturb it. Prices have not shown any disposition to change during the week. Business, which has not been any too good, begins to show some slight brightening up.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—The demand for canned vegetables is very good. Fruits, also, are still on the increase. Fish is rather slow, except for sardines, at moderate values. There is a moderate demand for Canadian brands and the American product is not wholly neglected. New prices ought to soon be out. They are being awaited with much interest.

TORONTO—Demand is fair in all lines but there is no rush. Interest is centred now in the expected new prices, which, it is understood, will be issued on the first of June.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Steady.

Prunes—Scarce.

Beans—Firm.

Toronto, May 21, 1908.

The wholesale markets continue quiet this week with few changes or new features to report. This seems to be a sort of off season, and this quietness is not wholly unexpected. It is expected that business will pick up somewhat during June, with the orders for summer business coming in. The financial side of business is fair, collections being in some cases better than expected. It is true that all the wholesalers have exercised more than the usual care in placing accounts this year and as a result there, perhaps, is less trouble than usual. Some members of the trade think that this fact accounts to some extent for the present quietness in wholesale grocery circles. In a good many cases where accounts have proved more or less unsatisfactory in former years such accommodation has been cut off and less goods are sold as a result.

SUGAR—Business is quiet and the local market is a waiting one. Any change is certain to be an advance, but when that will come is rather problematical at present. The Canadian refined market is steady. Large cargoes of raws are on the way to the Canadian market from the West Indies, but this is scarcely expected to affect the situation.

The situation in raws for the past week is summarized by Willett & Gray as follows:

"Under a weakening European sugar market during the entire week carrying beet sugar quotations down from 11s 8¾d. to 11s. 5¼d. at the close, it is a little singular to find the quotation of Centriweek, 4.36c per lb. 96 degrees test, but we must add that this is a result of no actual we must add that is a result of no actual business in spot sugars having been put through and hence the present quotation is more or less nominal.

"During the same time sugars for shipment have sympathized with the European tendency and have sold down from 3 3-32c c. & f. (4.45c duty paid) for May shipment to 3c c. & f. (4.36c) for June clearance. The present uneasy feeling home and abroad about the sugar situation seems to be caused more by a sensation of nervousness which sometimes comes over people than by any real change in the statistical situation tending to lower values except temporarily, but when such tmidity comes it must run itself out before stability takes its place again.

"At the close of the week the markets were quiet without suggestion of any improvement for awhile at the basis already quoted, but rather, of some temporary weakness.

"Further business has been done in Philippine sugar bringing the total amount sold up to 40,000 tons of present crop, the last sales at current relative value with other sugars.

"The total production in Cuba to end of April, 824,449 tons, with total stock in the Island of 239,217 tons, proved larger than anticipated and assures a total crop of at least 925 000 tons as estimated by us."

DRIED FRUITS—Business continues fair. Prunes are reported short by some houses, notably in mediums and one or two of the other sizes. This is perhaps a reflex of the discouraging reports regarding the California crop. Currants are firm, with good business passing in Vostizzas. Advices from England recently regarding Valencia raisins report reduced stocks and a jump of 3s.

BEANS—There are very few beans to be had on Ontario markets at present. Hand-picked were quoted at $2 f.o.b. Chatham this week, which is something unusual, if not unprecedented. Under these conditions jobbers have been forced to advance again, and are now quoting prices at $2. Hand-picked are scarce. Hungarian beans have been brought into United States markets in large quantities recently and it is likely that local houses will attempt to sell some of these goods here. It can scarcely be estimated where prices will go before the new crop is available.

EVAPORATED APPLES — Stocks are held fairly firm at 7½ to 8½ cents.

TEAS—Local markets continue quiet with no new notable features. Thompson Bros.' weekly circular, dated, London, May 7, contains some significant news as follows:

"The announcement from the Chancellor of the Exchequer as regards the duty concerning tea has been anxiously awaited, and clearances meanwhile are being confined within the smallest possible compass, but nevertheless demand has shown further expansion and the movement which has hitherto been confined chiefly to the medium grades, has now spread to all descriptions; so that the general position of Indian tea promises well for the reception of the new crop, which may be expected in fair quantities about the beginning of August. Semi-final and final invoices are now more in evidence every week and it seems probable that after this month there will be less "old tea" to be offered than there has been for some seasons past. Telegrams from India report that up to the end of April the outturns in Upper, Central Assam and Darjeeling were normal in the other districts poor, while the outlook for the present month is but little better, being fair for Upper Assam, Darjeeling and Sylhet, but in Lower Assam, Cachar, Dooars and Terai, bad; all pointing to quite moderate supplies at the beginning of the season. From Ceylon, though the busy time is now on, no very heavy shipments are advised or even estimated."

In the budget speech on May 7, the First Lord of the Treasury announced that there would be no alteration in the duty on tea.

COFFEE—Local business continues fairly good, with demand fairly active.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 9 a.m. Thursday, May 21, 1908.)

ARRANGING FOR ANNUAL PICNIC

Toronto Retail Grocers Discuss Details of Summer Outing.

And now it's a picnic. Those socially-inclined fellows, the members of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association, are not happy unless organizing some function to give a lot of people a good time. Their annual picnic is always a highly enjoyable affair and it was chiefly the details of this that were discussed at their meeting on Monday evening of this week in their cosy rooms in the Temple Building.

The date had already been settled, as Wednesday, July 15, and the place of destination, as usual, is to be Buffalo. Secretary D. Bell reported that the contract with the Niagara Navigation Company and the International Railway Company was closed. The rates will be very moderate, tickets to the Falls being $1.25 and to Buffalo $2. The latter will include a trolley ride through some of the choice bits of Buffalo on the return trip.

You may guess these grocers will do everything to assure their guests a good time. Witness the following from the secretary's minutes: "On motion of Vice-President Clark, seconded by Frank Johnston, a committee of two was appointed to visit Buffalo and to make arrangements for the entertainment of the association's visitors there." President Thorne and Secretary Bell were appointed on this committee and they will take an early morning trip on the Chippewa some day before July and lay a few plans across the line.

The report of the committee in charge of the recent very successful "At Home" was presented. While a few tickets are still unredeemed, when all is considered a pretty fair surplus should be shown.

A printing committee—of course Ben Panter had to be on this—and B. Snow was appointed, to look after tickets and other details of the excursion. A souvenir committee, made up of Vice-President T. Clark, B. Snow and Frank Johnston, was also appointed. These committees are counting on doing big things for the picnic.

Later in the meeting the peddler's law was discussed with a good deal of interest, but no action was taken.

The presence of several new members was very encouraging and shows that the association is beginning to become valued among the city retailers.

MOVING TO NEW PREMISES.

The offices and warehouse at 11 Front Street east, Toronto, are being extensively refitted and will be occupied about July 1st by Dalton Bros., spice and grocery sundries manufacturers.

The firm will move their complete plant to the new premises with the exception of the soap department. At the same time a number of new machines will be installed, including one of the latest coffee machines and new spice machinery. The lines already manufactured will be extended and it is likely that several new lines will be added.

WANT UNIFORM BILL OF LADING.

Meeting of Shippers in Toronto on Wednesday.

At a meeting held on Wednesday, May 20, in the Board of Trade Building, Toronto representatives of shippers from all parts of Canada, unanimously passed a resolution expressing their desire for a more simple form of bills of lading along lines suggested by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and the Toronto Board of Trade. It was at the suggestion of Judge Mabee, Chairman of the Dominion Railway Commission, that the shippers of Canada should get together and express their opinion on the subject, that the meeting was called by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

The need of a less complicated system, it is claimed, has long been felt by shippers and suggestions were offered by which clean bills of lading could be made possible. Under this system the transportation companies would guarantee to carry the goods right through to their destination, according to the provisions laid down by law. A committee to go into the details of such a system is to be appointed and the results of their work to be sent to the Railway Commission. H. W. Rowley, of the E. B. Eddy Co., Hull, was appointed chairman, and Mr. J. E. Walsh, of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, secretary of the committee, the remaining members of which are being appointed as we go to press.

Geo. Bristol, of Lucas, Steel & Bristol, and Fred. T. Smye, Balfour, Smye & Co., Hamilton, and T. Kinnear, of T. Kinnear & Co., Toronto, attended the meeting as representatives of the Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Guild.

SUGAR SHIPMENTS FOR CANADA.

9,100 tons in Cargoes on the Way From West Indies.

A correspondent writing to The Grocer from Halifax on May 16, gives some very interesting information regarding heavy sugar cargoes which are coming from the West Indies for Canadian consumption. He says:

"Over eleven thousand tons of sugar are now on the way to Canada from the British West Indies. So heavy have the shipments become that the Halifax steamship agents have been obliged to charter two extra steamers, which are now en route to that city and before the importations are over, which will not be for two or three months, they will have six or seven extra sailings. Five sugar-laden steamers are now on their way to this port, their cargoes aggregating 9,100 tons. These steamers, which are sailing from various ports, are named, with the amount of cargo, as follows: The Talisman, from St. Kitts for Halifax, direct, with 2,500 tons; the Tanariva, which sailed from Trinidad yesterday, direct for Halifax, with 2,000 tons, and also has 2,000 tons for Montreal; Ocamo, now due at St. John, from Demerara and the West Indies, which will, after landing cargo at Montreal, come here to discharge 1,500 tons of sugar; the Boston, also on her way here, which has 600 tons of sugar to discharge; the Lobo, which sailed from Barbados yesterday for Halifax via Bermuda and St. John, with 2,500 tons, will discharge her cargo here. The importations of sugar have been fairly heavy for some time, but during the next two months the rush will be at its height. The crop this year is reported to be an average one, but was a little backward.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Reading notices under this heading will be accepted at 10 cents per agate line.

Laporte, Martin & Co., Montreal, are offering the trade, through their ad. in this issue, several excellent lines, to some of which they draw especial attention. They are the Canadian distributors of the ever-increasing in popularity brands of tea "Victoria" and "Princess Louise." These brands are excellent in quality and the prices are right, which render them justly favorite. They draw attention also to their Canadian and imported (Soleil Brand) canned goods, present stock of which is of the canning of 1907. At present they are booking orders for the canning of 1908 (Soliel Brand) Minerva olive oil is another line which they have ready for immediate shipment. The attention of the trade is also directed to their very fine stock of choice pastes from the firm of Blanc Fils, Valence sur Rhone. This stock includes macaroni, vermicelli, sphaghetti and other fancy pastes.

T. Macara, chief analyst for Thos. J. Lipton, of London, Eng., spent several days in Toronto during the week and with A. E. Carson, Canadian manager, visited several other cities. Mr. Macara is looking into the possibilities of the jam and pickle business in Canada.

W. J. Wilson, with S. H. Ewing & Sons, Montreal, has returned from a good trip through the Maritime Provinces.

DEATH OF WILLIAM KINLOCH.

Familiar Figure Among the Trade in Montreal.

Once more death has claimed its own in the person of William Kinloch, who passed away on Saturday, May 16. Mr. Kinloch was a native of Stonehaven, Scotland, and came to Canada when he was a lad of sixteen. Shortly after his arrival in Canada he entered the grocery business, and in 1843 became a member of the firm of Kingan & Kinloch, which he and his partner organized. He continued in the business until 1893, when he retired. Upon the death of Mr. Kingan, the firm was known as Kinloch, Lindsay & Co., under which style it continued until Mr. Kinloch's retirement. Mr. Kinloch was a familiar figure in the business district of the city up to almost the day of his death, as he found it difficult to relinquish his old habits and haunts, although well past the age when men generally retire to enjoy in the evening of their days a well earned rest. Those who frequent the reading room in the Exchange Hall of the Board of Trade saw his familiar figure there not more than ten days before his demise, and he might have been observed about his old haunts very recently. Mr. Kinloch has seen Montreal advance from a comparatively inconspicuous position to one of great importance among the cities of the continent. Among the many changes and improvements which have taken place during his life, though one of the most vital importance to the commercial life of this city probably has been the evolution of the ship channel between here and the sea. In 1850 ships with a tonnage of 400, made their way with difficulty up the 11-foot channel to Montreal. In those early days people had not dared to think even of many of the accomplished facts of to-day and which have contributed so largely to the progress of the city.

In days gone by Mr. Kinloch was one of the most familiar figures in the grocery world, and he watched the evolution of the foodstuffs trade during many important years. He was known to most all the older grocers who were glad to number him among their friends.

ACME CAN WORKS PURCHASED.

Jas. Campbell and Wm. Pratt Still Retained in the Management.

The contemplated change in the affairs of the Acme Can Works, Montreal, has become an accomplished fact, and the firm will be known in the future as the American Can Company. The capacity of the plant will be greatly enlarged with the result that a more complete line will be offered the trade than heretofore. The same gentlemen who have directed the destinies of the old firm will continue with the new organization. Jas. Campbell will have charge of the sales department and William Pratt will continue as factory superintendent. M. A. Reap will be associated with the above gentlemen in the capacity of office manager. Mr. Reap's headquarters will be the Montreal office of the company.

COMMISSION DEALERS' ASSOCIATION.

Will Make Shippers Pay Uniform Cartage Charge.

The majority of the wholesale fruit and commission merchants of Toronto have recently formed themselves into an organization known as "The Toronto Fruit and Produce Association." The president is H. W. Thorpe, of McWilliam & Everist, and the association is formed for the ostensible purpose of mutual protection. A circular signed by the members of the organization has been sent to the growers and shippers of fruit and vegetables, which stated that, "owing to the high and increasing cost of handling goods and delivering them, a uniform cartage charge will be made to the shippers on all goods on commission." Then follows schedules for Canadian and foreign goods, which, with the exception of carload lots of potatoes, range all the way from half a cent each for all packages smaller than 11-quart baskets to five cents for barrels, sacks and large cases.

According to correspondents in Burlington and vicinity, the shippers and growers around Clarkson, Oakville, Bronte, Merton and Lorne Park resent the action of the association, and at a joint meeting held at Clarkson last week a resolution was passed to the effect that they would "refuse to submit to any such imposition," and if no further agreement could be reached they would place a man in Toronto to act as salesman for the fruit from these places, or the fruit would be sold f.o.b. at stations.

Just how the matter will result cannot as yet be ascertained, and the members of the so-called association are rather reticent about discussing the situation. The claim is made that with the increase of wages, feed for horses, and expenses generally, it is too much to ask the commission men to pay for delivery out of the commission they receive for making sales, especially when the rate of commission is no more than it was seventeen years ago. Delivery charges sometimes eat up all the profits and the dealers think these charges should properly be borne by the growers, seeing that they get an increased return for their goods over what was received some years ago.

DEATH OF BROCKVILLE CONFECTIONER.

John Grant, of Abbott, Grant & Co., proprietors of the Brockville Biscuit and Confectionery Works, Brockville, Ont., died in that city on May 13. He had been feeling unwell and underwent an operation the day before his death. Mr. Grant was a native of Brockville, sixty years of age, and leaves a large grown-up family.

NEW TELEPHONE NUMBER.

Owing to inability to secure a sufficient number of lines into our Toronto office, in consecutive numbers, it has been found necessary to change the telephone numbers for that office. The numbers are Main 7324, 7325 and 7326.

NEW TORONTO OFFICES.

Rose & Laflamme, of Montreal, have moved their Toronto offices to more convenient premises. They are now situated in the Carrie Building, 65 Front Street east on the corner of Church, where W. T. Merrick, the Toronto manager, will be glad to see the firm's customers.

The United Factories, Limited, Toronto, have just issued a neat illustrated folder showing the various lines of Boeckh's brushes for housecleaning purposes, such as scrubbing brushes, hair brooms, waxing brushes, closet bowl brushes, cornice dusters, bannister brushes and several other useful lines. Space is also left on the front cover for the address. Any of the trade desiring these circulars to send to their customers may have them on application by mentioning the name of The Canadian Grocer.

A Grocer's Flower Department

GOOD PROFITS WITH HIGH-CLASS TRADE, BUT FIRST EXPENSES HEAVY.

The question as to whether the selling of flowers can be made a profitable part of a grocer's business has become a very interesting one recently in all parts of Canada. In the cities, particularly, the grocer who regularly carries a line of flowers is most in evidence, but in the larger towns and in the country also a window decorated with plants and cut flowers is coming to be frequently seen. With a view to finding how profitable a department this was, and what opportunity it offered for the average grocer, some inquiries have been made.

Good Profits With High-Class Trade.

The general opinion of those who handle flowers is that such a department can be run satisfactorily and with good profit where the trade the store draws is of a high class. Flowers, of course, are considered more or less as a luxury, and unless customers have a little more money than they need to live on, they are hardly likely to buy many flowers.

For the grocer in the former class, however, the business has several factors of inducement. Nothing brightens up a store so much as flowers, and their very presence in the store is sure to be considerable attraction. Again, the profits that can be secured on these goods are rather better than on the staple groceries. People have been accustomed to paying rather high prices to the regular florists and when the grocer, by reason of facts which will be mentioned later, is able to sell them a little below the prices the florists regularly ask, they are quite ready to pay this.

Economy in Delivery.

Of course one of the large factors in the good profits in handling flowers is the fact that the same delivery suffices for both flowers and groceries. When Mrs. Brown comes in to order her groceries and green stuff for the next two or three days, she is attracted by the window or the inside display and orders a dozen carnations or some chrysanthemums for her dinner table. These goods are sent out in the same rig with the groceries and there is no additional expense for delivering. Ontario grocers this spring have been able to buy carnations at a cent apiece, and sometimes less. These sold readily at 25 to 40 cents a dozen. Easter lilies were bought at 7 and 8 cents a bloom and sold for 15 cents. Potted plants of various kinds, such as geraniums, fuschias, spireas and others, bought for 20 to 35 cents, sell for 50 to 65 cents. Pretty fair profits, those.

Some Difficulties.

Of course there are drawbacks to this as well as any other line of the business. Flowers are perhaps the most perishable stock a grocer can carry. He cannot calculate on carrying any of the cut flowers over more than one night, and even then he runs a risk. The ideal way, of course, is to get the goods fresh from the wholesale florist in the morning and clear the whole stock out by night, reducing prices a little, if necessary, at the end of the day. This question of the perishable nature of the goods is one a grocer must consider carefully before he begins to handle flowers. The trade in this line must be cultivated. It cannot be worked up all in a Saturday. And at first, before the regular customers are induced to buy a certain amount of flowers, the department is likely to lose more or less money. It is a case of investing a little now to get handsome returns later on.

It is astonishing too, as some grocers tell us, how regular customers can be induced to buy flowers. A little education carried on steadily, with hints and suggestions thrown in as the customers are examining the stock, and women will always stop to look at flowers and perhaps a carnation, or a rose that is just at the danger point, given away, occasionally will work wonders.

If the flowers are held over one day, of course considerable refrigerator space is necessary. This is another drawback. They require considerable attention too, but a young lady clerk usually knows a good deal about handling such goods. If you have one who doesn't send her out to the greenhouse some quiet afternoon to have a talk with the florist about it.

A Few Hints.

According to the testimony of several grocers, it doesn't seem to pay to display flowers outside the store. Even though they are not in the sun, the wind dries them up very quickly.

One grocer who does a nice little trade in this line, has a large tin pan about five feet by six, which just fits his window. When he is showing flowers he simply sets this in the bottom of the window, with the pots and vases of cut flowers in it, and he can then water the stock—and the law won't prevent him either—as much as he pleases.

Some grocers keep a small edition of a ribbon counter with a view to making the outgoing sprays of flowers look as dainty and presentable as possible. This is scarcely necessary, however, unless special attention is given to this department.

Several city grocery stores have recently gone more or less extensively into supplying floral decorations and schemes for weddings and holiday decorations and even wreaths, sprays and built-up designs for funerals. In these cases, of course, someone has to be in charge who understands this side of the florist's business.

For the Country Grocer.

For this grocer in the country or in a small town, some distance away from the greenhouses, the foregoing will prove of little service. There is a branch of the business, however, which can be developed to yield a revenue well worth while. That is the handling of flowers on commission.

A druggist in a small town in Western Ontario told the writer that he had cleared between $30 and $40 during two weeks at Easter simply over the business he did by special order and through the sale of Easter lillies. He telephoned the orders to the nearest florist and secured the goods promptly, with no trouble and at little risk to himself. This, of course, can be easily held to a strictly cash business.

There is no reason why a grocer in the same town should not have had this business. He has better facilities for looking after and delivering the goods and they are more in accordance with the lines he regularly carries. The matter of securing business of this kind, not only at holiday time, but also for weddings, funerals, church decorations, parties, etc., might well be considered by the country grocer. The people in your town may need educating but the business is sure to grow and be profitable, if energetically pushed.

THE WINDOWS ILLUSTRATED.

The first engraving illustrating this article is from a photograph of the window of F. Simpson & Sons, Toronto. The window was dressed by R. Riegelmeier, who has charge of the flower department. The second engraving illustrates a window in the store of Robert Barron, Toronto. Both these firm have been handling flowers for some years.

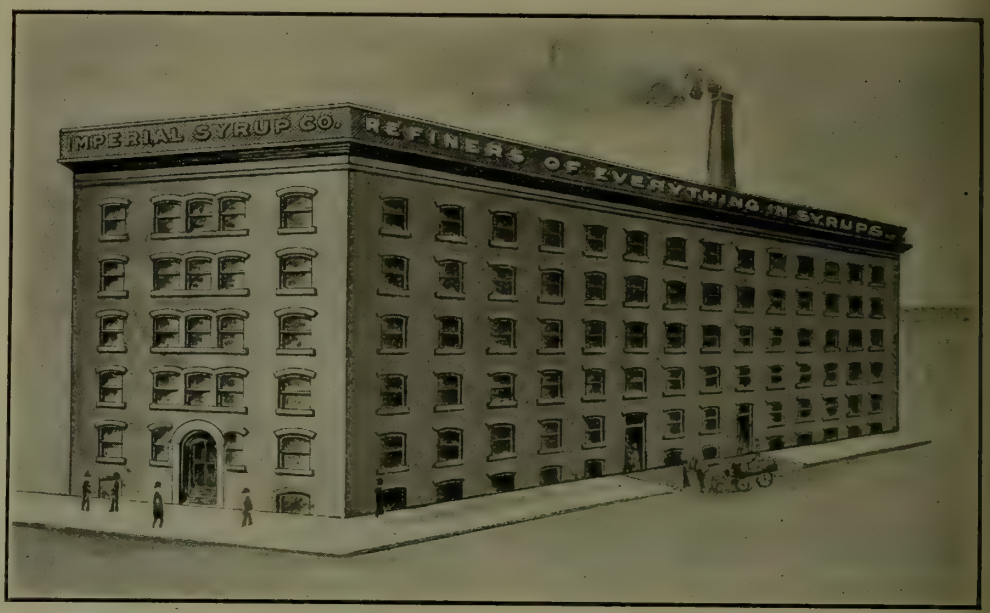
IMPERIAL SYRUP CO.'S NEW HOME.

Modern Factory and Equipment Recently Completed in Montreal.

The engraving shown herewith is from a photograph of the new factory of the Imperial Syrup Company, Montreal, which is located at 29 to 31 Vitre Street West, in the centre of the city.

Although only eight years established in Montreal, the business of the Imperial Syrup Company has grown very quickly, and the wonderful increase in sales necessitated the procuring of larger quarters in which to manufacture the goods to fill these orders. The present factory was acquired last October, and has been remodelled to suit the needs of the company, so that it stands to-day one of the finest of its kind in Canada.



NEW FACTORY AND WAREHOUSE OF IMPERIAL SYRUP CO., MONTREAL.

The building is 140 feet long and 50 feet wide, being five storeys high, and containing 30,000 square feet of floor space.

The ground floor is used as a warehouse, there being two doors affording excellent receiving and shipping facilities. Back of the warehouse is the steam plant, and the engine which supplies power. The next floor is devoted to the workers having charge of the filling of packages with syrup and the packing thereof. At the front of the building on this floor will be found the commodious offices. The third and fourth floors are used for the manufacture of confectionery, while the fifth floor is where the syrup is refined.

Throughout, the equipment is most modern, each floor containing some piece of machinery which is right up to the minute, the last invention to facilitate manufacture and cheapen cost of production.

One of the finest plants in the building is that for the coating of chocolates. It is made by Werner & Co., Rochester, N.Y., and so regulates the temperature of the chocolate in use as to ensure a perfect confection.

Everything is spotlessly clean.

It is largely through the efforts of Col. Walker that Imperial Maple, Kitchen Molasses, Goldenette Table Syrup and other lines made by this company are in such steady demand from Halifax to the Klondike. G. H. Ramsay, is manager of the present business, and has done much toward making it as successful as it is. There are agents in Winnipeg, Calgary and Edmonton, while the Pacific Coast business is looked after by Ramsay Bros. &

Co., Vancouver, of which the Montreal house is a branch.

The making of chocolates is a new departure with the company. This fall they will be turning out their own chocolate confectionery, and Manager Ramsay says he is going to make the goods such as to warrant their causing more talk than the Merry Widow hats are at present.

New Calgary Wholesale Houses

MODERN BUILDINGS AND EQUIPMENT IN THE WEST.

The engravings shown herewith are from photographs of two large grocery warehouses recently erected in Calgary and are a good evidence of the growing importance of that town as a commercial centre.

The larger engraving shows the splendid new wholesale grocery, offices and warehouse of the Georgeson Co., Limited. The building is of four stories, of brick with red brick and cement front, which presents a very handsome appearance. The construction has been particularly thorough in every way and the interior equipment is quite complete. A handsome suite of offices occupies the front of the ground floor. Excellent shipping facilities have been provided and the system of construction followed makes the building practically fireproof.

The smaller engraving shows the new warehouse of Plunkett & Savage, fruit and produce dealers. It is of brick and stone construction, also with offices in the front of the ground floor and is well adapted to the handling of the lines of goods the company carries.

Next to the Plunkett & Savage building may be seen the wholesale grocery warehouse of Campbell Wilson & Horne Co., another of the large jobbing houses of the city.

NEW GROCERY WAREHOUSE OF THE GEORGESON CO.

Calgary's growing importance as a wholesale centre is becoming very evident.

There are in the neighborhood of 150 commercial travelers who make their head-quarters in the city. The greater portion of these represent local firms while some are traveling for Eastern Canadian houses.

Thirteen banks, one hundred wholesale houses and over forty industrial and manufacturing plants go a long way to make Calgary the commercial metroplis of the last west.

The wholesale houses include the following: Groceries, dry goods, men's furnishings, boots and shoes, fruit and produce, bread, biscuits, candy and confectionery, furniture, agriculture implements, harness and saddlery, paints and oils, glass, wagons, buggies and sleighs hardware lumber, building materials, rubber goods, stoves, cement, cigars, liquor, meats, flour, plumbers' supplies drugs, electrical goods, paper and stationery, tents and mattresses.

Among the industrial and manufacturing plants there are a soap factory,
